EPA Approval Latest In Sewage Plant Dispute

by Elaine Skolnik
As expected, the U.S. Environmental Protection Agency (EPA) on Sept. 4 granted a discharge permit for the Greenbriar sewage treatment plant. Some twenty conditions are attached to the permit and, with the exception of three, do not differ significantly from the conditions required by the State of Maryland Department of Health and Mental Hygiene when it issued its permit last January. Included among the additional conditions is the stringent requirement that "there shall at all times be one qualified operator on the treatment site who is certified by the State of Maryland as a Class A superintendent." The EPA permit becomes effective Oct. 3 and expires on July 1, 1975.

This action of EPA now focuses attention back on the National Aeronautics Space Administration (NASA) and the Washington Suburban Sanitary Commission (WSSC). NASA in its final Environmental Impact Statement issued last July announced its intention to grant a 150-foot easement for the piping of treated sewage effluent from the Greenbriar plant to a discharge point on an unnamed tributary of Beaver Dam Creek on NASA property, provided EPA issues a discharge permit. The treated effluent will be coming from an on-site temporary private treatment plant situated on the northern apex of the triangular Smith-Ewing parcel located east of the Baltimore-Washington Parkway and designed to serve the 1,193-unit condominium Greenbriar development.

NASA indicated this week that, while the agreement for the easement has been finalized, the agency will probably wait to see if there is an appeal of EPA's decision before signing off.

New Tests Begin

In the meantime, a new set of tests began this week at the treatment plant, and are expected to be finished within two weeks. These tests were part of the requirements laid down by WSSC before it would assume responsibility for the operation of the plant. The agency wants to be assured that the plant meets State standards.

The first tests conducted last July were inconclusive. A variety of reasons have been given for differences between results obtained by the WSSC laboratory and that of the developer. According to a spokesman for the State Department of Water Resources, some of the limits for determining conformance with the standards were so low that they were difficult to measure. Dr. John Cookson, consultant for the developer, said that the problem is not so much the small values being measured as it is that more sophisticated equipment must be used for proper measurement.

In the earlier tests WSSC had been using tap water but has now switched to demineralized water since tap water contains suspended solids. Dr. Cookson said the change was necessary for the type of stringent testing required for interim treatment plants of the Greenbriar type which produce, according to Cookson, "effluent better than drinking water." Cookson feels that analysis of the effluent should be done by a water purification laboratory rather than the usual sewage treatment plant testing procedure.

The current testing will be done by a number of outside laboratories as well as by WSSC labs.

Approval of a discharge permit for the Greenbriar temporary sewage treatment plant by the U. S. Environmental Protection Agency (EPA) touched off a debate at last Monday's city council meeting on whether or not the city of Greenbelt should note an adjudicative hearing, appealing the decision. Since Mayor Richard Pilski was absent from the September 9 meeting, the council finally decided to put off a decision until later in the week when a full council could be present.

(The News Review later learned that the law firm of Covington and Burling on behalf of the Prince Georges Environment Coalition is planning to take an appeal of the EPA decision).

Councilman Tom White proposed the adjudicatory hearing on the grounds that the standards set down by EPA did not include nitrogen removal or adequate virus surveillance and that effluent from the plant would be discharging into a stream which is not free-flowing all year around, thus creating potential health risks.

Richard Schifter, attorney for the Greenbriar development claimed that the conditions attached by EPA and the State of Maryland are among the most stringent in the country and that it was highly unlikely that any appeal would produce any change or tightening of the standards. In reply to a statement by Rhea Cohen from the audience that nitrogen removal should be required of the Greenbriar plant because it was being required of the new sewage plant at the Agricultural Research Center, Schifter said that EPA was taking the position that nitrogen removal should only be required of plants that will be in existence past 1977. The Agricultural plant is a permanent one, whereas the Greenbriar plant is expected to be dismantled before 1977.

Schifter maintained that the only effect of the appeal would be to place obstacles in the way of people moving into much needed housing, and to increase the cost of such housing. He also noted that an appeal could be costly to the city in the way of attorney's fees, securing of expert testimony, etc.

Councilmen Charles Schwan and Gil Weidenfeld also expressed concern about the additional costs to the city and argued that the full council should be involved in approving costs that may effect city finances. Schwan also noted that the arguments made in favor of the appeal did not include any new data, but were simply repetitions of the arguments previously presented to EPA, and rejected by EPA.

Mrs. Cohen and White deplored the absence of timely virus monitoring. The former could see no reason why the standards did not include virus removal as well. She felt that the Greenbriar plant should set the standards for the country. Why settle for less, she asked.

Dr. John Cookson, consultant employed by the developer, stated that the advanced processes included in the plant would remove 99.999999 percent of the virus. Nevertheless, he noted that because of the concern expressed the developer has agreed to conduct monthly virus tests on the effluent. He said that the first of such tests will take place in a couple of weeks in connection with the WSSC tests now being done.

Greenbelt Results

Pilski Gets High Vote In Democratic Primary

With most of the local interest focused on the Democratic primary contest for the three House of Delegates seats from the 24th District, Greenbelters turned out in large numbers to give Mayor Richard Pilski a top vote of 1,028. Gerard F. Devlin was second with 1,004 votes and third was Greenbelt resident Marcia Krasnick with 945 votes.

Pilski made his best showing in the North End and Center school precincts, Krasnick in the Springhill Lake precinct. In all three precincts Devlin finished second. (See results in accompanying box).

However, the vote for the entire 24th District of which Greenbelt is only part followed a different pattern. The winners were Devlin, David Gray Ross and Leo Green, all from Bowie. Mrs. Krasnick finished fourth and Pilski fifth.

In other contests, Greenbelt Democrats followed the county trend, giving the Blue Ribbon ticket large majorities in all cases. At the State level, Governor Marvin Mandel received a whopping vote both in Greenbelt and throughout the State. Greenbelt also followed the State trend in giving its vote for Democratic nomination for U. S. Senator to Barbara Mikulski. (See results on page 2)

Former Greenbelt Mayor Francis W. White was top vote gatherer in Greenbelt among the six victors in the county councilman-at-large Democratic primary. He received 1,303 votes against 1,220 for Francis B. Francois. However, the two finished in reverse order countywide.

In the Republican primary, Lawrence Hogan easily outdistanced Louise Gore in Greenbelt for the gubernatorial nomination (the vote was 299 to 99), but elsewhere the results were different. In the other two contests, John B. Burcham and Charles McMathias, Jr. had no difficulty in winning in Greenbelt as well as elsewhere their party's nomination for U.S. Representative and U.S. Senator, respectively.

About 1,880 Democrats and 450 Republicans voted in Greenbelt's three precincts. This represents about a 42 percent turnout for the Democrats and a 29 percent turnout for the Republicans. In the Springhill Lake precinct, the Democratic turnout was about 33 percent compared with 47 percent for the rest of Greenbelt.

In a related matter, White complained that Greenbriar residential units were being occupied and water taps used even though no sewage connections or use and occupancy permits had been granted. County health officials, in replying to this complaint, stated that water has been turned on in some apartments only for testing sinks and commodes and in the recreation building for drinking only. According to the county, any sewage generated would overflow the commodes, because the lift stations are not operative. The county also stated, that as a compassionate measure, some future tenants have been permitted to store some of their possessions in the apartments they will eventually occupy.

Springhill Lake Recreation Center Receives Go Ahead

by Al Skolnik

Construction on the Springhill Lake Recreation Center can begin any day, said an exuberant city manager, James Giese, at last Monday's council meeting after the city council approved a low bid submitted by J. Norman Construction Company. In addition to a base bid of $311,740, the project will include $9,500 for a better gym floor (Gran-Wood); $6,500 for air conditioning the gym; and $14,300 for construction of a 40-space bituminous parking lot. Although this total amount of $342,040 will exceed the budget estimate by $35,000, council felt that the additional items were worth the additional costs, especially since they would undoubtedly be added later in any event, and at a much higher cost.

Giese cited several sources where the additional funds could come from — money budgeted either for parkland acquisition, the Municipal Building addition, or the reconstruction of Crescent Road.

Although not explicitly stated, council apparently was not too concerned about the overrun because of the realization that another bond issue would be needed in any event to complete the above projects even if no money had to be diverted to meet the SHL Recreation Building costs.

The Recreation Center will be located at the corner of Cherrywood Lane and Springhill Drive next to the former club house for the golf course. Giese said it will be necessary to eliminate two of the nine holes of the present par-3 golf course. He noted that the city plans to landscape the building and parking lot as a buffer against the nearby Springhill Lake apartment buildings.

Greenbelt Day

The council received a recommendation from the Greenbelt Bicentennial Committee that the first Sunday in June of each year be proclaimed Greenbelt Day. The city was incorporated on June 1, 1937. The Bicentennial Committee proposed that the day be observed by special ceremonies, events, and activities. Preliminary ideas suggested were band concerts, a community dance the night before, and special school programs.

The Committee noted that the goals of the American Bicentennial include having all Americans take a look at themselves and their communities and how they have contributed to the nation's heritage. It was felt that recognition should be accorded Greenbelt for its uniqueness and its significance as an early planned community.

Credit Union Facility

Following the advice of the Advisory Planning Board, the council recommended to Maryland National Capital Park and Planning Commission approval of an application for a special exception and parking modification to enable an addition to be built to the Greenbelt Commercial Center to house the Greenbelt Federal Credit Union. The addition would be in front of the shoe repair shop. The council stipulated that the shoe repair shop should continue to have access to Centerway and that the exit from the theater not be blocked.

FIRE FUND STARTED

Greenbelt CARES Youth Services Bureau has initiated a "fire fund" at Twin Pines to receive cash donations for the Parker family of Research Road who lost their home by fire on Labor Day. Furniture, linens, dishes and other household items may be donated by contacting the Youth Services Bureau at 345-3456.

Indian Creek Culvert

Council approved the awarding of a low bid for purchase of bonds in the amount of $147,000 to permanently finance the box culvert across Indian Creek on Cherrywood Lane. The low bidder was the Citizens Bank and Trust Company of Maryland at an annual interest rate of 6.5 percent. This is a special assessment project and Greenbelt Associates, the owners of the benefiting property, are paying the cost over a 15-year period of time.

Vandalism

Council received a letter from Msgr. O'Donnell expressing concern over the vandalism which has taken place at St. Hugh's Church. Since early June, approximately 90 windows in the church costing $2,500 have been broken.

The council, feeling this was a community-wide problem, decided to call a meeting of interested parties including Dr. Leo Walder of CARES, the police chief, the city manager and the recreation director to see what alternative courses of action might be taken to meet the problem. A public hearing was proposed as the next step.

Bridge Club

The council unanimously approved a recreation-department sponsored Greenbelt duplicate bridge club, after receiving assurances that the bridge club would cooperate with the recreation department in promoting greater participation and interest in bridge as a leisure time activity and in assisting beginners to learn how to play.

Year 2000 Plan

The city council gave its general support to the Council of Government's Year 2000 Policies Plan. Following the recommendations of the APB, the council urged that COG give greater emphasis to transportation and energy resources.

More specifically, APB had mentioned under its transportation interests, the subjects of noise control regulations, development of bicycle trails, and the continued maintenance of environmental quality of the parkways, particularly the Baltimore-Washington Parkway.

The council added its concern for having a METRO subway station on the eastern side of the B&O tracks so as to readily serve the Greenbelt area and expressed its opposition to widening and opening of the Baltimore-Washington Parkway to truck traffic.

Among the energy concerns expressed by APB were adequate power plant generator capacity and alternate supplies for the declining supplies of natural gas and oil; utilization of the Potomac Estuary as a source of water supply; and development of a conservation ethic.

Alice Plaster Crowned Miss Greenbelt Terri Beckford Is First Junior Miss

by Shirley Meredith

At the twentieth annual "Miss Greenbelt" pageant, Alice Plaster, a statuesque 19-year-old blue-eyed blonde, reigned as "Miss Greenbelt, Maryland-1975" and Terri Beckford, age 14, carried the title of "Junior-Miss Greenbelt."

Selection of the winners, daughters of Mr. and Mrs. James Plaster and Mr. and Mrs. Leroy Beckford, and the runners-up, highlighted the annual pageant staged by the Greenbelt Labor Day Festival, Inc. Kim Nicholson, Miss Greenbelt of 1973 crowned the winners.

Miss Plaster, a Parkdale High School graduate and a student at Maryland Institute College of Art, won the nod of the two-women, two-men panel of judges Sunday evening Sept. 1, over ten other candidates to become this city's official queen. Miss Plaster would like to be an art teacher or free lance artist, and she has entered contests and participated in exhibits. In addition to the title, Miss Plaster received a full scholarship from the Barbizon School of Modeling plus a glamour case from Fashion Two-Twenty. She was sponsored by Beltway Plaza Merchants Assoc.

Miss Beckford, who won over nine Junior Miss contestants, is a student at Thomas Johnson Jr. High School, is active in major-ettes and cheerleading, and would like to be a stewardess or oceanographer. Terri was sponsored by Kash Realtor. She received gifts from Sound, Inc., and Kay Jewelers.

Several thousand persons attended the event at which selected runners-up in the Miss Greenbelt category were Terry Tousignant, 16, first; Marie Reynolds, 18, second; Frances Hromulak, 18, third; and Julie Sontheimer, 17, fourth, who also was judged "Miss Photogenic." A tie for "Miss Congeniality", selected by the girls, was awarded to Miss Dianna Haines and Miss Hromulak. For the "Junior-Miss" runners-up, Miss Bonnie Griggs, 13, won first place and also the "Miss Photogenic" award; as Pam Slegel, 15, won second and the "Miss Congeniality" award.

The panel of judges, Cynthia Halper of Fashion Two-Twenty; Katherine Exner, "Miss Tall Washington, D.C. 1974-75; Joe Simnowitz, employed by the U. S. Treasury Dept. and Mike Collins, a personality at WMAL Radio, selected Miss Greenbelt and Junior-Miss Greenbelt and their courts, based on a point system for beauty of face, beauty of figure, poise, personality and appearance.

Other contestants competing for the titles were Kristine Zoellner, Diana Pristoop, Jo Anne Hardy, Paula Puccio, Mardee Chappell, Lisa Simmons and Louise Tousignant for the "Junior-Miss" and Amarilis O'Driscoll, Sherri Raley, Pam Kaub, Kathy Sines and Barbie Farrell for the "Miss Greenbelt."

During the intermission period as the judges were making their final decisions, former "Miss Greenbelt" winners were introduced — Nancy Kurth Markley, (1956), Kathleen Madden Dunleavy (1957), Harriet Clinedinst Macdonald (1958), Pat Moore Mancuso (1959), Karen Klem King (1960), Diane Shegogue Hyland (1961), Jane Brooks Duvall (1962), Carolyn Finley Twynham (1964), Linda Howey Klem (1965), Claudia Kennedy Zell (1966) Doris Mafay Costanzo (1967), Debby Freeman Smith (1969) and Martha Plaster (1972). Mary Emmert Ruleman (1955), Mary DeMarzo Green (1963), Donna Austin Parish (1968), Beth Wilkenson (1970) and Beverly Goulart (1971) were unable to attend.

Assisting Mrs. Meredith were Tom Meredith, who presented the trophies; Barbara Lawson, flowers; Bill Lawson, sashes; and crownbearers Wendy Lawson and Susan Meredith of Dover, Del.
