Up, Away To Where? Balloon Messages Sail Away in Space

by Mary Lou Williamson

Slowly, slowly, 600 balloons left outstretched young hands on the school playground. The balloons drifted upward over the tree tops, over the school building toward the Center. Up and up went the balloons — yellow, green, orange and red — until they were so small they looked like the milky way, a long cluster of little dots whose color one could no longer see. Within a few minutes they faded from view.

All day long teachers and parents — who came in by fours every hour — had been blowing up balloons and taping on name cards. When this reporter/parent arrived at 1:45 p.m., double rows of balloons taped to 8 foot poles were being transported through the halls to individual classrooms. One balloon, which had escaped and floated up to the high ceiling in the front hall, was coaxed back down by the principal; burst balloons were quickly replaced.

Shortly after 2 p.m. on Wednesday, March 21, classes began to emerge from the many ground level doors of Greenbelt Center Elementary School — students, teachers, staff, parents — all grinning. Each hand clutched one or two or three helium-filled balloons. Each balloon had a 5 in. x 6 in. card attached to it: the message began "Hi, Balloon Finder!" and asked that the card be returned to Center School along with the location where it was found.

Just a few balloons "got away" from those clutching hands before principal John Van Schoonhoven gave the "O.K.!" A dozen or so balloons got stuck in the school yard trees, most of them in one balloon-eating tree. Only one was a dud and floated down instead of up.

Inquiring Reporter

"Have your students been excited all day?" was the question put to teachers—unnecessary question, really. The answers were visual—faces flushed with excitement as they groped for the right words: "Oh my word" and, simply, "Yes." "Such a nice thing for the first day of spring, a school-wide activity." A teacher rushed up to say: "I want to do that again tomorrow. That was neat!"

A third grade teacher turned to her students: "What do you think about all this?" she asked. "Nice," "fun," "exciting," "I don't know."

Two Productions Slated At E. Roosevelt High

Two dramatic productions are forthcoming at Eleanor Roosevelt Senior High.

The first is "A Musical Spectrum", a musical presentation presented by the Sophomore class, consists of songs and dance routines from major Broadway Musicals including: The Sound of Music and A Chorus Line. The actors, including Greenbelters Sally Gough and Michele Rios, will perform dance routines based on the "feel" and background of the song.

The revue is being directed and choreographed by three students: John Mancuso, Vicky Snead and Art Trichel.

Performances will be on March 31 and April 1 at 8 p.m. in the ERSH auditorium. There is an admission fee.

The second production is "Absurd Persons Plural". This will consist of two one-act plays: The Bald Soprano by Eugene Ionesco and I'm Herbert.

The plays, directed by Greenbelt-er Frances Seubert, will be produced in an environmental setting, with no sharp division between the audience and the players. This program is theatre of the absurd, anti-plays with plots that go nowhere and characters that are static. Both plays point out the uselessness of communication among people because it invariably produces a muddle.

Performances will be at 4:15 p.m. on April 2, 3, 4; and on April 5, 6, and 7 at 8 p.m. There will also be an admission fee.

COUNCIL, OWNER DISCUSS REZONING OF THE CENTER

by Leta Mach

Council met with center mall owner George Christacos in a work session on March 13, to discuss the rezoning of the center commercial area to Commercial Shopping Center (C-S-C) from Rural Planned Community (R-P-C). Since Mayor Richard Pilski was unable to attend, Mayor Pro-Tem Gil Weidenfeld opened the meeting by explaining that council was agreed that the sidewalks needed to be replaced before it could give its support to the rezoning. He spoke of the hazardous, unattractive nature of the sidewalks.

Christacos recalled that previously council had been interested in having the sidewalks dedicated to the city. Afterwards, he felt, they could be repaired. Weidenfeld agreed that council wanted the sidewalks, but not the burden of repairing them. After the sidewalks were brought up to standards, the city would maintain them.

Taken aback, Christacos replied, "I don't know what to say, but I don't see any choice." He explained that he did not have the money for the repairs before the rezoning. He further stated that he was interested in selling the property and suggested that the contract could require the new owner to repair the walks.

Special Assessment?

Weidenfeld suggested that the city could take out a bond to replace the walks. The present and future owners would then repay the special assessment over a period of time. City Manager James Giese noted that a special assessment had to be done for public improvements so the walks would have to be dedicated first. Council agreed to confer with its legal counsel about such a special assessment and notify Christacos as soon as possible. Councilman Richard Castaldi assured Christacos that "We don't want to prohibit you from getting zoning." Weidenfeld agreed that "Your interest is our interest."

Mike Zarpas, of B. F. Saul, who manages the property, complained that "unless we get zoning, there's no money to maintain." Problems with the property which he listed were the heating system which he felt could not last another season and rusted gutters which caused leaking in the stores and peeling paint and plaster. Concerned about these problems, Councilman Charles Schwan wondered about the capital available to upgrade the property. He felt it was "silly to have the sidewalks brought up if the center is not going to make it." Possible revenue bonds and historic preservation money were cited when Zarpas asked about "cheap money" for improvements.

Suburban Trust

Next Christacos asked about city land for the expansion of Suburban Trust. Council was anxious to keep Suburban Trust in the center, but was not interested in swapping city land for sidewalks. John Overton, architect, stressed the need for city support feeling that "Suburban Trust is about to fly away." Councilman Thomas White was afraid the previous talks with Suburban Trust had failed from a "breakdown in communications." However, council did not want to complicate the issue and was primarily concerned with settling the sidewalks before rezoning.

On Thursday, March 15, Park and Planning decided not to hear the rezoning petitions for the center mall. Instead, the petitions were forwarded to the district council with a staff recommendation for approval. The zoning hearing examiner is scheduled to hear the petitions on April 18.

Green Ridge House Ready for Occupancy

Morning sun drenches the patio of Green Ridge House the day of the Open House, Sunday, March 18. Decorative, spring-booming Golden Rain trees are interspersed with benches; picnic and umbrella tables will be added later.

Snuggled into the corner between the two wings is the green house. Three doors lead to the patio from the hall, dining room (left), and multi-purpose room (right). Orange canvas awnings provide morning shade indoors.

Greenbelters by the scores toured Green Ridge House all day Sunday, March 18. Curtis Furgason, CMF Management Co., told the city council Monday, March 19 he was amazed at the number of interested people who came to see the facility. "I am pleased by the complimentary remarks made," he said. "I am proud to be a part of it."

Council was pleased, too. "A very good crowd," agreed Councilman Charles Schwan, "everyone was quite enthusiastic. Jim Giese and Dennis Plendak, representing the city, the contractor (Harkins) and CDA really have done a very good job . . . Green Ridge House will be a boon to those who will live there."

Councilman Thomas X. White echoed those statements. He, too, was "surprised at the numbers of people" touring on Sunday. He found them "pleased with the product. Giese and his staff really had to put a little more effort into the job than they had expected."

Furgason's Report

The apartments are all complete, but the kitchen and some common areas need a few more finishing touches. Contractors will be around, he thought for another two to three weeks. For example, they are awaiting sod for the front lawn. But, he said, "certified" sod may not be dug until it has officially begun to grow.

"I have the keys to the building in my pocket now," said Furgason, with a smile, jingling them for council. "We have hired a security guard." Furgason expects the final topping for the parking lot to be laid this week. He is contracting for the large quantity of draperies which must be made to order. Furniture for the lounge areas is being ordered.

Furgason hopes to begin moving in two to three residents each day beginning today or tomorrow. Apartments on the ground and terrace levels will be filled first.

Councilman Gil Weidenfeld complimented Furgason on the handling of interviews. Two individuals had told him how nice Mrs. Caulfield has been, Weidenfeld said, even when they called her back many times for more information. Weidenfeld said he was "thoroughly pleased" to hear such favorable reports.

Furgason is pleased by the broad spectrum of income levels among the residents. The rents range from $36 to $182. HUD will subsidize up to 75% of the rent for persons qualifying for Section 8 assistance.

Occupancy

"We have occupancy," City Manager James K. Giese told the News

Concerned About Codicil To Mutual Ownership Contract Open Letter:

Just a word of warning regarding the proposed codicil to our Mutual Ownership Contract.

In December 1972 Management submitted a list of three major questions to (GHI attorney) Al Ginsberg. This document and his answers are very interesting. However, we will only quote from No. 3 - Mortgages.

A. "If (GHI) cannot perform this work (rehab.) because it cannot borrow sufficient capital for renovation work, then could the restriction on borrowing in the Mutual Ownership Contracts be declared void . . . ?"

B. "If large numbers of members volunteered their units for renovation and were willing to sign codicils, could the GHI property be subdivided and a mortgage placed on the units and sites of willing members?"

But most important is C. "Could a majority of members vote to sell GHI's property to a new corporation? Would the present Mutual Ownership Contract be binding on the new corporation . . . ?"

Ginsberg's answer: "Selling GHI's property to a new corporation might be an act of dissolution and would take more than a majority of the membership. In any event, Mutual Ownership Contracts run with the land and would certainly be binding on any new corporation or any new purchaser."

(I have the complete Questions and Answers and anyone wishing to see them may contact me.)

In view of the above do you not think it prudent to hesitate on signing this codicil to your contract which GHI management and Board are suggesting? At least a membership meeting should be called for a thorough understanding of what the consequences of such a codicil may be. If we decide that such a codicil is not in the interest of the membership then such permission to put a lien on our property which appears in the new contracts should be declared void and be removed from all Mutual Ownership Contracts.

I would like to know under what authority Management changes the wording and puts in new conditions to Mutual Ownership Contracts to be signed by new members. In view of Ginsberg's statement that "the Mutual Ownership Contracts run with the land" wouldn't you think that when we sell our equity, our contract would be transferred to the new purchaser?

Bettie G. Denson

A REPLY

To the Editor:

Apparently Mrs. Denson is unaware that she supplied the answer to the question she posed in her letter. She quoted Mr. Ginsberg's writing "... the Mutual Ownership Contracts run with the land and would certainly be binding on any new corporation or any new purchaser." In other words, when a member sells his equity, with or without the proposed amendment, he sells his right to perpetual use of his dwelling unit and the lot on which it is situated.

Signing the proposed amendment to the Mutual Ownership Contract will alter in no way the legal relationship of a member to GHI or any possible successor to GHI. The amendment would permit a prospective lender to enjoy the same position with GHI and GHI members that GNMA enjoyed prior to retirement of the Mortgage. (See Section 3(b) of the Mutual Ownership Contract.) So far as I know, no one felt that his equity was threatened when the GNMA mortgage was in force. A member should feel no more threatened in this case when all that is proposed is to satisfy a requirement that prospective lenders, including the State, impose as a condition of GHI's borrowing money to complete the rehabilitation program.

Approval of the proposed amendment by a sufficient number of members means that GHI could borrow at about 7% for 20 years instead of being forced to borrow at perhaps 12% for 10 years. The difference in cost is substantial. Assuming that $5 million was borrowed over two years of which $2.3 million was borrowed of which year, first-year costs for the corporation and the average member would be:

Table with 3 columns: Interest Rate, GHI per month, Member per month. Rows for 7% and 12% interest rates.

In the second year when an additional million would be borrowed, the total costs would be:

Table with 3 columns: Interest Rate, GHI per month, Member per month. Rows for 7% and 12% interest rates.

Under the rehabilitation program these costs would be offset by fuel conservation savings (increasingly so, as time goes on), but the offset would be the same regardless of the interest rate. In other words, we should gain no more savings by our paying higher interest costs.

We have already two-thirds the number of members we need to meet the requirement. I hope that before another week passes a sufficient number will do themselves and their neighbors the favor of ensuring lower monthly charges, than would otherwise be the case, by signing the proposed amendment and returning it to GHI.

Council Notes

by Barbara Likowski

Energy conservation and a request for an expanded liquor license were among the many issues considered by council at its meeting Monday night, March 19.

Councilman Thomas X. White suggested that council meet with the city manager and staff to discuss energy conservation within the city. White felt that in light of current events council and staff should give some evaluation. He said he felt the city hadn't done enough during the 1973 crisis and he didn't want to see the same thing happen again.

In response City Manager James Giese informed council that he has been waiting for guidelines from the national government as to where "we should be going." So far there has been no clear direction but Giese thought he should receive guidelines soon.

In the meantime the city has been doing some things toward energy conservation. Three buildings have had an energy audit but the report on this is not in yet. The city is converting its vehicle fleet to autos and trucks which use less gas. High electric bills have been studied to determine the causes for the high costs. It may be worthwhile, Giese thought, to replace incandescent lights in the council room with fluorescent lamps. This is a matter for council to consider at budget time.

Council was divided over a request from Pappy's Family Pub on Greenbelt Rd. to change its liquor license from Class B (beer) which permits beer sales 7 days a week for consumption on the premises to Class D (beer and wine) that would permit both on and off premises sales 7 days a week. A public hearing is scheduled by the Board of Liquor Commissioners for March 29 at 9 a.m. at the Hyattsville County Service Building. Councilman Richard Castaldi felt that if people could drink beer with their pizza in the restaurant they should be able to buy beer to take out with their pizza. Councilman Gil Weidenfeld saw no need for the city to take a position on the request and suggested that the liquor board make the decision. White said that not taking a position was taking a position. He felt that such a grant would tend to proliferate this type of establishment and there were already several places in the community where alcoholic beverages could be purchased. The motion to oppose the expanded license passed 3 to 2 with White, Pilski and Schwan voting no and Castaldi and Weidenfeld, yes.

Recreation Review

Ball Field Permits

Beginning Monday, April 2 ball field permits for Braden, McDonald and North End Elementary Fields will become effective. All groups holding permits for these facilities must have a copy of the permit in their possession while on the field. All times not permitted are on a first come, first served basis.

Kite Flying Contest Rescheduled

The Annual Kite Flying Contest is rescheduled for Saturday, March 31 at 12 noon on Braden Field. Prizes will be awarded in various categories. In case of rain, the event will be cancelled for 1979. For further details, call the Rec. Dept. at 474-6878.

Roller Skating Program Closes

Spring has arrived and it is time to move outdoors. This week was the last of the Winter Roller Skating Program.

First Readings

A first reading was given on a resolution to establish new admission fees for the Greenbelt swimming pool. Changes would be made in the daily admission fee for adults. The new fee would be $1.75 for all times instead of the previous $2. on week ends and holidays and $1.50 other times. A child's daily admission would increase to $1.25 at all times. (Previously this was the week end and holiday admission fee and $1 was charged other times.) Swimming classes would be raised from $5 a child and $8 for two or more children in a family to $8 and $12 respectively. Pool rental fees would go up from $20 to $50. A special pass credit will go to any pass holder from a previous season who sponsors a new pass holder. The credit will be 20% of the fee paid by the new pass holder. Senior citizens and children under the age of 6 would continue to be admitted free. Similar changes would be made for non-residents.

First reading was also given on a charter amendment to annex land, Parcels A and C, Greenbelt East subdivision with adjacent public roadways.

Council appointed assistant city manager Dennis Piendak as liaison with Cable Television. Council also approved the hiring of an engineer from a minority firm, HSC Engineering Corp.

March 12 Meeting

Council will recommend to Governor Harry Hughes that Councilman Thomas White be appointed to the Metropolitan Washington Interstate Air Quality Planning Committee. White was chairman of the Council of Government's Health and Environmental Protection Policy Committee for three years.

While supporting the idea of constructing a sidewalk between the Beltway Plaza shopping center and Attick Towers in College Park at Rhode Island Avenue along the north side of Greenbelt Road, Council felt it could not justify to Greenbelt residents the expenditure of $12,000 ($7,000 for relocation of two Pepco poles) for construction of that portion of the sidewalk within the city limits (400').

County Councilman Frank Casula is coordinating efforts to provide the sidewalk and asked the city if it would participate. The Maryland State Highway Administration has indicated it would not be willing to bear the expense. Council suggested that the sidewalk might be located on the south side of Greenbelt Road, since major

Science/Engineering Fair

The 31st Annual Prince Georges Area Science and Engineering Fair will be held at the Prince Georges Community College in Largo, from March 31 to April 1. The Fair's exhibits will be open to the general public on Saturday from 6 to 10 p.m., and Sunday from 9 a.m. to 12 noon and 4 p.m. to 8 p.m.

The Area Fair will present the winning science projects selected by each participating junior and senior high school as a result of their individual (or local) science fairs. The Fair is an annual event, sponsored by the public and parochial/private schools of four counties — Prince Georges, Calvert, St. Marys, and Charles.

portions of the sidewalk (bicycle-pedestrian path) have already been constructed on that side.

According to Giese, "Beltway Plaza will have to provide some additional right-of-way. Mr. Sidney Brown has expressed to the county a willingness to provide the right-of-way conditioned upon there being no interference with parking or with future or present access. There is no indication as to whether the easement will be donated or sold."

Council also supported Prince Georges delegation bill 337 which allows a municipality in the county to protest the renewal of certain liquor licenses without a hearing when the place of business is located within its boundaries.

At the March 12, city council meeting, Jose Morales, chairman of the Elderly Housing Advisory Committee, expressed his concern for members of Greenbelt Homes, Inc. who may be moving into Green Ridge House, with GHI housing. It seems that many of Greenbelt's elderly residents are afraid they are going to be asked to move into Green Ridge House before they have had a chance to sell their present homes. Morales was very upset and concerned about the anxiety these people, most of whom are in their seventies, have been going through as a result of this problem. City Manager James K. Giese said he was not personally aware of anyone with a problem that had not been resolved. Giese went on to say "These people have to either accept it or reject it," and that management people will give as much help as they can to the elderly residents concerned. GHI is also cognizant of the problem and will assist.

Both are residents of the city and were apprehended in the Center area. The third individual, a 17 year old non-resident, was apprehended in the Greenbriar area in an intoxicated condition. All three were released to the custody of their parents.

After noticing a vehicle being operated in a suspicious manner, Cpl. Fulgham pulled the vehicle over. Investigation revealed that the 19-year-old driver was AWOL from the Great Lakes Naval Facility in Illinois. In addition, the vehicle had been stolen from a naval facility. The driver and the car were turned over to the Military Police for proper action.

A Recreation Department employee reported a suspicious car parked at the rear of the Youth Center the morning of March 2. Subsequent investigation revealed that the car had been stolen from Seabrook. In another instance, an 18 year old nonresident was arrested and charged with unauthorized use of a vehicle stolen from Bladensburg. Both vehicles were returned to their proper owners.

On the night of March 4, officers were dispatched to the Lakeside North complex on an alleged assault complaint. As a result, a 23-year-old resident of the area was charged with assault with intent to murder and carrying a handgun. Greenbelt CARES Expands Movie Program to SHL

by Jean Marie Gainey

Among the many programs and services provided by Greenbelt CARES are movie-discussion programs for children and teenagers, which have been expanded to Springhill Lake (SHL) Recreation Center in an effort to reach more people.

Initially the program was not held every week when it began last November. Whenever movies were shown, they were viewed in the Greenbelt CARES office in the Municipal Building. Now, movies are shown every Monday night at 7:30, one week in the Greenbelt CARES office and the alternate week in the conference room at SHL Recreation Center.

Greenbelt CARES outreach counselors, Jim Holmes and Wendy Wexler, show the movies, supplied by the Prince Georges County Library, to anyone who wishes to attend. Every week, a short humorous film of approximately 10 minutes is shown, followed by a 30 minute film dealing with an issue relevant to young people. Coffee, hot chocolate, and "munchies" are served during the films.

After the films, discussion is encouraged but not "pushed". Said counselor Wendy Wexler, "If they want to talk, that's great, but sometimes after the films they just leave."

The purpose of the program, counselor Jim Holmes explained, is to get to know the kids. After a while "an informal relationship develops. If they should have a problem sometime, they'll know we're there and we can help."

The films are aimed at the 14-15 age group, an age where "they're not yet into a social rut", said Wexler. "If their friends are having problems, such as drug use, sometimes their attitudes can still change."

"Some of the kids are very attentive, others just come to eat", she said.

"If they don't feel like talking about the film, they still get something out of it", said Holmes.

Last Monday, a silent Laurel and Hardy movie was shown to about a dozen kids, their ages ranging from about nine to 16. The second movie was entitled "Robin, A Runaway" and dealt with the conflict between a high school freshman and her parents. It was an excellent film, representative to both sides of the problem.

While Wexler and Holmes were setting up the projector and the kids began to wander in, a young boy asked "Why do you do this?" Wexler said, "So we can get to know you and you can get to know us and we can give you films."

After the films the younger, more restless kids left, but the teenagers stayed for a short discussion. Personal feeling on the subject of running away and opinions of how the actors handled the situation were discussed. Holmes pointed out the legal consequences for runaways in the state of Maryland, as they differ from those which were in the film, and he mentioned facilities in the area which could be of help in this situation.

A problem with the program, according to Wexler, is that it seems to attract the same crew each week. In an attempt to attract some different kids - so "they'll know we're there to help", said Wexler and Holmes - the movies are now alternately shown at the SHL Recreation Center and the Municipal Building. Signs are posted throughout Greenbelt, and announcements appear in the Greenbelt News Review and Social World, Springhill Lake's newsletter. Children also hear about it from friends who have attended.

Last week was only the second time the program was held in Springhill Lake. Already it looks as if it is off to a good start.

Local Clergy To Conduct House-to-House Survey

The Greenbelt Clergy Association house-to-house religious survey on Palm Sunday, April 8, 1979, will be made by two-person teams representing a number of the religious communities in the greater Greenbelt area.

The visitation teams will ask four simple questions: 1) Do you have a religious affiliation? 2) What is the name of the organization with which you are affiliated? 3) Are you presently attending their meetings or services? 4) Where are you attending?

Pastor Edward H. Birner of Holy Cross Lutheran Church, speaking for the Clergy Association emphasized that the questions were carefully prepared to avoid any embarrassment. He added that if anyone preferred not to answer the questions that would be understandable. However, the visitation teams also will ask if they may leave printed information describing the various religious organizations active in the greater Greenbelt area.

The Greenbelt Clergy Association representing all of the religious congregations functioning within the greater Greenbelt area includes Dallas Pulliam, Pastor, Greenbelt Baptist Church; Msgr. William F. O'Donnell, St. Hugh's Roman Catholic Church; the Rev. Harry Taylor and the Rev. Sherry Taylor, Greenbelt Community Church; the Rev. Edward H. Birner, Holy Cross Lutheran Church; the Rev. Clifton D. Cunningham, Mowatt Memorial United Methodist Church; Rabbi Kenneth Berger, Mishkan Torah;

James Fischer, Baha'i Community; and the Rev. Sidney R. Conger, Berwyn Presbyterian Church.

As stated in last week's News Review, the "house-to-house" phase of the survey will take place between 2 p.m. and 5 p.m. on Palm Sunday, April 8.

Next week the News Review will feature a full page ad listing the four questions with the suggestion that those who will be away from home on April 8 may wish to answer them and leave them at the door for the visitation teams.

Pastor Birner emphasized that the visits will be very short. There will be no solicitation or proselytizing of any sort. Nor will there be sufficient time for the teams to enter homes. It will simply be a visit at the door.

As a follow-up of the survey it is expected that each of the participating religious communities will have an "open house" at their respective places of worship within a few weeks of the survey.

For further information please call: Pastor Birner - 345-5111, Monsignor O'Donnell - 474-4322, Reverend Cunningham - 474-4910 Reverend Conger - 474-7573, Reverend Taylor - 474-6171, Reverend Pulliam - 474-4212.

Bike-A-Thon April 1

The annual RIDE-A-BIKE for the RETARDED has been scheduled for Sunday, April 1, and will feature a bike raffle for participants on the Greenbelt route as in past years. Starting time is 11 a.m.

Greenbelt's 10 mile, round-trip route will begin at the Youth Center and run through the city into Research Farm and back. The route can be repeated or shortened as each rider wishes. Last year's event included several 100 mile riders and family groups and it is hoped the number of special participants will increase this year.

The RIDE-A-BIKE is co-sponsored by the local recreation department and the county Association for Retarded Citizens for the benefit of programs for the retarded in the county. Pledge forms are available at the city recreation centers, the library, and the area schools. For information call one of the committee members: Ruth Parcell 772-5277; Eileen Labukas 474-9486; Dorothy Davis 474-9125; Winnie Pihbs 474-4031; Eleanor Knight 474-1196; or Donna Fluke 345-1276.

Participants may bike or hike — or support a rider/walker with a pledge.

Coach Asks Council To Show Support for Young People

by Elaine Skolnik

"The city ought to find some means of expressing its approval of young people who abide by the system, live within the system and uphold the system," declared Phil Straw at the March 19 city council meeting. Straw, a coach with the Boys and Girls Club, hoped there was some way to bridge the gap between council, which is viewed as part of the system, and young people. In this way, he said, youths would know that the system cares for them.

Straw's appeal was apparently triggered by a recent incident which followed a basketball game at the Youth Center. As both teams were leaving the building, a group of youths attacked them. There were no injuries.

Straw would like the city to demonstrate to his players and other young people that the system does care and city officials and police do not react only when rules are broken. He introduced several members of his team, saying, "They had a chance to thumb their noses at rules, but didn't . . . Instead, they are working hard to live by the rules and try to be contributing members of society . . . Our teams go out into other communities and leave good impressions. They reflect well on Greenbelt."

Straw recommended that council (1) recognize young people who make contributions, (2) visit the recreation centers weekly, (3) identify those who do not live by the rules and let them know punishment will be "swift and complete," and (4) set a day aside for young people to assume the roles of governmental officials in Greenbelt. He also saw value in rap sessions between the police and young people.

Council members were sympathetic to Straw's appeal. They felt young people should be encouraged to stay within the system, but noted that time constraints prevent them from actively participating in programs.

Council pointed out that the city has constructed two recreation centers and appropriated funds for many organizations and a comprehensive recreation program. This, council said, was their way of saying "thank you."

Council viewed Straw and others involved in youth programs as unofficial ambassadors to the city council from young people and vice-versa. They thanked Straw for his involvement and told him that unofficial ambassadors make the system work.

With respect to problems in the area of the Youth Center, there will be improved lighting and more concentrated patrolling by the police. Efforts are also being made by the Recreation Department and Greenbelt CARES to deal with the situation.

At the Library

Fines for overdue library books and materials will be suspended April 1 to 7 by metropolitan area public libraries in celebration of National Library Week. Overdue books and items will be accepted at any participating library with no questions asked. Returning library material where it was borrowed is not necessary.

Food Gardens will be the topic of discussion at the Greenbelt Library on Tuesday, April 3, from 7:30 to 9 p.m. Admission is free. This program will be interpreted for the deaf and hearing impaired. For details call 699-3500, extension 291.

Horticulture agents from the Prince Georges County Cooperative Extension Service will explain how to save $250 in Food from a 15 x 25 foot vegetable garden. Learn the basics: soil preparation, fertilizing, weed and insect control.

Local Residents Ask To Keep Park Natural

by Michele Chandler

Most people do not want Greenbelt Park developed, if recommendations made recently by a handful of people at a Park Service workshop are a reliable indicator of public opinion.

Fifteen area residents attended the Feb. 22 workshop, sponsored by the National Park Service and held at the Maryland Capital Park and Planning Commission in Riverdale. They contributed their suggestions on an updated Development Concept Plan for Greenbelt Park, located on both sides of the Baltimore-Washington Parkway between Goodluck and Greenbelt Roads.

"The Master Plan (now being updated) was drawn up in 1967 and spelled out the park's uses and functions. As time goes along, other influences take place and a review of the plan (may become necessary)," explained James Hankins, Greenbelt Park manager.

High on the public's list of concerns, Hankins said, was "leaving 300 undeveloped acres as a green area. They don't want out-and-out development there; perhaps just a nature trail." He called the citizens' views "a complete turnaround" from the older Master Plan, which called for the erection of a building and golf course.

Of the total 1,100 acres in the park, 300 located east of the B-W Parkway are completely undeveloped except for a fire access road. Other suggestions were to keep the park in its natural state, leave the present number of campsites (174), cut down on through-park traffic and develop new activities.

George Rogala, area recreation supervisor, represented the city of Greenbelt at the meeting. He supported leaving the park in its natural state, saying, "the park doesn't need more development." In a letter sent to City Manager James Giese, Rogala praised the workshop and encouraged more public attendance at the next meeting.

Park superintendent Thomas McFadden said that although those attending the workshop wanted to leave the park fairly undeveloped, some desire for slight renovations were expressed, such as a nature center, more picnic shelters and possibly a public stable with 10 to 12 horses.

Lorraine Kenyon of the Beltsville Recreation Council suggested setting aside the undeveloped east section of the park for nature study. In past years, some area schools have used that land for ecosystem studies.

A representative from the Lewisdale Recreation Council, Christine Johnson, said she would like to see more rangers for better protection in the park. Hankins reported that two rangers worked year-round, while four to six rangers were scheduled during the summer, when the park is closed at dusk except to campers.

Hankins said although public attendance was slight, he hoped more people would come to the next workshop. After incorporating suggestions from the next workshop (which has not yet been scheduled), a draft of the revised Development Plan should be ready in May and the finished plan by June, he said.

Joe Burdulia, project manager on the Development Plan, said all improvements will be funded by Federal monies through the Department of the Interior/National Park Service. Burdulia and the planning team have the final say on which provisions will be included in the plan that will be sent for final approval to National Capital Region members in June.
