ORIGINAL GREENBELT BLUEPRI PRESERVED FOR HISTORICAL USE

by John Kelly

"It's a pictorial history of Greenbelt," said Professor Dave Fogel, Assistant Dean for the School of Architecture at the University of Maryland, when referring to the architectural blueprints of the original homes of Greenbelt. learned in these town plans,"

These original blueprints are presently located in the Special Collections room in McKeldin Library, at the University of Maryland. The blueprints are being processed onto microfilm so that they can be made available to architecture students throughout the country, according to Mary Boccaccio, Special Collections Librarian.

Boccaccio explained that she applied for a grant from the National Endowment for the Humanities in order to restore and microfilm the blueprints. She did this because the blueprints are of fairly good quality and because they are a part of social history.

"I was really concerned about these plans because they were obviously deteriorating," said Fogel. He said that his students have done projects at Greenbelt and have studied the modeling of the homes." I want these plans restored because they are a unique part of American history," added Fogel.

He explained that Greenbelt is one of three cooperative housing projects built by the Roosevelt Administration in the 1930's. The other two are located in Greenhills, Ohio and Greendale, Wisconsin.

Greenbelt was the first city built with green space both inside the city and around the perimeters of it. In these early years the green spaces were used for farms, cow pastures, and forests, according to Fogel.

"They were the first to have the commercial businesses connected by underground walkways, so that residents and their chil-dren did not have to cross highways to reach stores," said Fogel. Fogel noted that both Columbia, Md., and Reston, Va., now use this concept of inner walkways connecting businesses-an idea taken directly from Greenbelt.

In addition, the front of the homes face inward so that neighbors can more easily interact with each other, said Fogel. Residents use common ground areas so that they can share things together. Common ground spaces are now used by other small communities, such as Quail Valley located in Gaithersburg, Md. This is another idea first used by Greenbelt, added

Fogel stated that because of these unique community planning techniques the Greenbelt blueprints are worth saving. He is contacting the other Greenbelt towns to suggest that they too put their blueprints on microfilm. This cooperative town planning has been left out of history, so it is important to preserve the blueprints so that others can study their historical impact, add ed Fogel.

PIANO NEEDED

Green Ridge House, the city's new senior citizen building, is in need of a piano. Anyone who can donate one should call 474-7595.

Loveless, who lives in Springhill Lake, was featured prominently in the news last month when she stopped a "runaway" Metrorail train. The driver had left his cab upon instructions to inspect the tracks going the opposite way and the train, partially operated by computers, left the station without him. Loveless succeeded in unlocking the driver's compartment with a barrette after the train doors did not open at the next few stops. She then pressed the right buttons to open the doors. To over a hundred worried and upset passengers, she achieved instant "heroine" status.

GreenbeltUtopia Theater and Arts Co-op To Begin $25,000 Door-to-door Drive

by Konrad Herling

Advocates of a Greenbelt Cultural Center met Sunday night at the Greenbelt Youth Center to form a new organization, The Greenbelt Utopia Theatre and Arts Cooperative, and to establish a specific deadline of January 1, 1980 to be in the theatre and running events.

The group will launch a fundraising drive of $25,000 to pay for the theatre's lease. A planning session will be held this Thursday at the Greenbelt Youth Center at to meet with the shopping cen-7:30 p.m. The drive will seek 500 charter members, who through contributions of $50 each, will help to raise the desired total. Through an intense door-to-door campaign and publicity the effort will be carried to the entire Greenbelt community.

The organization planned has estabished a bank account, filed, through the assistance of Greenbelt attorney Harold Siegel, an application for non-profit corporation status, and will be seeking ter's owner, George Christacos, to negotiate a leasing plan as well as set a target date for use of the facility.

It was felt by the organization that its most important objective was to demonstrate to Christacos that the group was serious in its effort to lease the theatre. It was also felt that a successful fund-raising drive would be both a significant survey of community support and a clear indication that Utopia Co-op will be a viable lessee.

Rejects 1937 Vintage Store-Front Post Office To the Editor:

I see by the News Review that council did take up the matter of the Post Office at its meeting on November 5. I see also that they did not read or consider my letter to them on the subject. When I called the city offices, I was told that the mayor forgot to read it, but it would be made a part of the minutes. That doesn't serve the same purpose.

My letter favored a new post office at Parkway and Crescent. If anyone were to take a picture cf our make-do, storefront post office and show it to any ordinary, sensible human being, along with the architect's drawing of the proposed new post office, and ask which our city council would prefer, he would most surely select the new post office. Most city councils would be badgering their elected representatives in Congress to try to get the new post office; ours is badgering them to try to keep the old.

Councilmen will tell you that it is because the old one is in the Center and this would be 1500 feet out of the Center. Our city offices used to be over the Ben Franklin store. When Greenbelt began to grow and they needed more space for city offices, did they try to enlarge the Ben Franklin store and use it for city offices? The theater even then was failing. Why didn't they just remodel it for city council and other city offices, so that they could stay in the 'sacred Center? I've lived in a lot of small and medium-sized towns and not a one had the post office in the middle of the business district; it was always 1 to 3 blocks outside of it. But not Greenbelt, - oh no! Greenbelt citizens must make do with an inadequate, unattractive post office because that's the way it was in 1937. Ms. McClellan is reported to have said that GHI members voted to sell the proposed site because of a threat to move the post office out of town. Perhaps she voted for that reason; I and my friends voted for it because we wanted a new post office and felt that was the best site . .

Fuel Conservation To the Editor:

GHI has reduced and will continue to reduce its oil consumption. The conversion from steam to hot water heat was the most significant past program in oil conservation. At present we have been insulating pipes. Shortly the various government agencies will clear up the red tape for our 3% loan that we will use to insulate our homes.

In the future we members will consider whether we wish to switch from oil heat to another form. But regardless of these general programs, the initiative of each member can save money. For the present, each gallon of oil not burned saves over 80 cents. If each of us saves a gallon a week, this would amount to a savings of over $65,000 a year. Each of us can save fuel through control of the hot water faucet and the radiator. How often do we turn on the hot water tap when cold would do just as well? How often do we use more water than is necessary to clean clothes, wash dishes, and bathe? The hot water heat is a bit

Halloween at Green Kidge

About 75 people in all sorts of costumes attended a Hallowe'en party at Green Ridge House on Saturday, October 27. Fun and festivity continued throughout the evening.

There were all kinds of dances, old and new-disco, square, foxtrot, rock . . . led by Katie Bassinger. One special dancer seemed to be a pumpkin come to life but was really Michael Caruso in a pumpkin costume. Those who didn't choose to dance or watch the dancers played cards or other games in the game room.

Even Santa arrived early this year to distribute candy to all the folks and a bit of New Year's eve atmosphere was added when party hats and noisemakers and blowers were given out.

Costumes were judged by three judges and prizes were awarded to the best female and male costume. Winners were Mary Aulback and Frank Granati.

Refreshments of apple cider, coffee and donuts were served. Hallowe'en decorations included a large pumpkin with bulging onion eyes, pepper ears, gourd nose, and a red pepper tongue.

Mrs. Cassidy, a resident of Green Ridge House summed up the feelings of many. "I bet the senior citizens never had so much fun", she said. That feeling seemed to be shared by all who attended judging by the smiles and comments heard throughout the following week.

Special thanks go to the Caruso family from Silver Spring, daughter, son-in-law and grandsons, Frank, Michael and Anthony, of Mrs. Otille Norris.

THANKS

To the Editor:

I wish to thank all the dear ladies at Green Ridge House for extending themselves so lovingly and generously in offering their assistance during my illness. I also want to thank all my friends for the beautiful cards and best wishes I received. I am so very grateful.

Mary Pendelton

more complex but the same basic principle applies. As the radiators transmit heat from the hot water in the pipes, that heat must be replaced through the use of oil to heat the water. In very cold weather the pipes can freeze if the water isn't circulating. Radiators should be left on (a quarter of a turn) to allow water to circulate. If the home becomes too warm the radiator should be turned down rather than opening the window or the door. All of us can help fight the rising cost of energy if each of us does his share to conserve.

Christmas Cards Need Standard Size Envelopes

Postmaster Emory A. Harman is reminding his customers this month to check the size of their envelopes before mailing Christmas cards. Effective last July 15, envelopes must be at least 31/2 inches high and 5 inches long to be accepted for mailing.

Last July, a seven-cent surcharge was also placed on firstclass mail weighing one ounce or less, and single piece third-class mail of two ounces or less that measured more than 6-1/8 inches high, 111/2 inches long or 1/4 inch thick.

"Most card and envelope makers are only maufacturing the allowable size today, but there may be some older stock still for sale," according to Postmaster Harman. "We don't want any disappointed customers during the holidays."

Police Blotter

An apartment on Westway Road was entered by a person climbing up to a trap door on the ceiling in the hallway and then knocking a hole in the ceiling of the apartment. Several items were stolen.

Officer Murray apprehended a juvenile who was in possession of marijuana in a parking lot on Lakeside Drive.

An adult male resident was arrested for shoplifting at the A & P at Beltway Plaza.

An adult male was arrested for destruction of property at the First Federal Savings and Loan Branch Bank on Cherrywood Lane.

Concerned about high heating bills? Read this: New gas furnaces use up to 13% less gas.

Washington Gas

Gas heat has cost less than electric heat in this area for many years. But you may not have heard that the new gas furnaces are even more economical than older ones. They can save 13% of gas consumption, according to a computer study by the National Bureau of Standards. The reason? Pilotless ignition and automatic vent dampers.

What does that tell you about gas heating today? It's better because it saves energy -- and saves you money.

A spark ignites the gas burner when it's needed. There's no pilot light to waste gas.

If your old furnace is on its last legs, you'll find new economies in replacing it. Gas heating contractors will give you details. (They are listed under "Heating Contractors" in the Yellow Pages.) See for yourself how a new gas furnace can help you cut high winter heating bills.

> Closes when the gas burner is off. Stops heat from escaping up the chimney.
