College Park Site Seems Preferred For Solid Waste Recovery Program

by Carol Hoxie

At a Maryland Environmental Service public meeting on Nov. 10, Cliff R. Willey, chief of technical services, said no specific site has yet been chosen for the proposed resource recovery project in Prince Georges County. However, Anne C. Sloan, MES planner, told the 37 people present that Site G, on Azalea Lane in College Park, looks the most promising. A final site decision will be made in early December, she said.

Most of the meeting was spent discussing the proposed sites. Sloan pointed out problems with most of them.

Site A, near Interstate 95, she labeled "almost impossible." There is too much trouble getting highway access there, she said.

Site F, Smith's Sand and Gravel, off Greenbelt Road, was described as a very "disturbed area" that may be in a flood plain. Another problem with Site F is its closeness to the proposed end of the Metro Green Line. Finally, steam lines from Site F to the university would have to follow the railroad right of way, which would increase costs of the project, Sloan said.

Site J, location of the present University of Maryland steam plant, is too small to allow the existing plant to operate while a new plant is being built on the same site, Sloan said. In addition, the site is too close to College Park Airport to allow compliance with smokestack regulations. Several people attending the meeting also mentioned traffic problems that would occur with Route 1, if Site J were used.

Site L, near Litton on Calvert Road in College Park, has no nearby water supply, according to Sloan. In addition, the steam line would have to follow the railroad right of way, increasing the project's costs. The property is also a valuable piece of university real estate for which the university may have other plans, Sloan said. A few people at the meeting expressed concern over the potential for noise exceeding safe decibel levels if Site L were used. Sloan said, "A site determination is not going to be made on decibel levels." She added, however, that the feasibility study found that decibel levels would be in the safe range.

Truck Traffic

Another major concern raised at the meeting was about the number of trucks involved in operating the proposed facility. If mass burning is used alone, without a transfer station elsewhere in the county, Willey estimated there would be 300 vehicles a day (600 trips) arriving at and departing from the burning plant. This would take place eight hours a day, five and a half days each week. If a transfer station were used, traffic volume would be reduced considerably.

The number of trucks could be reduced by half, Willey said, if the rdf (refuse derived fuel) process, in which trash and garbage is sorted and shredded at a separate facility prior to burning, is used in addition to a transfer station.

With the rdf process, though, refuse would be shipped in trucks larger than those used to collect trash in local communities. The large, sealed trucks are 18-wheelers, as seen in the 20-minute slide show which was presented at the meeting.

MES does not expect that the larger trucks will wear out Prince Georges County roads faster, Willey said. These trucks would represent only a fraction of the average daily traffic. Therefore, effects would be minimal, he said. But several people present expressed skepticism on this point.

The reality of half as many trucks (using the rdf process and a transfer station) still works out to 150 vehicles per day (300 trips to and from the facility). For an eight-hour day that could mean 18-20 trucks arriving and departing the facility each hour. Some effort could be made to concentrate arrivals and departures to certain morning and afternoon hours. Willey said the large trucks would cause some extra noise, mainly as they

by Philip J. Hanyok

Greenbelt doesn't have Metrorail service yet, so some Greenbelt residents go to Berwyn to catch a commuter train into downtown Washington.

The commuter train, funded by the Maryland Department of Transportation, is operated by the Baltimore and Ohio Railroad Co. The service carries commuters between Baltimore's Camden Station and Washington's Union Station, with stops including Berwyn and College Park.

Libby Cartwright of Ridge Road has been catching the train at Berwyn for more than three years. She has a parking space downtown but says she rides the train because she does not like the traffic associated with driving into town.

"It really takes less time than driving in traffic," she said.

From Berwyn, the big silver trains usually take less than 20 minutes to reach Union Station. Union Station, at Massachusetts Avenue and North Capitol Street, provides connections with Metrorail to other parts of the city.

Katy Kidwell, who lives on Edmonston Road in Springhill Lake, recommends the commuter train over the New Carrollton Metro. At the Berwyn station she said, "It's great. I drive here and walk two blocks to work. It beats public transportation by about 40 minutes," she said.

The Berwyn station, at Berwyn Road and 54th Avenue, near the Motor Vehicle Administration, has free parking and a shelter to protect commuters from harsh weather.

Every weekday morning trains going into Washington stop in Berwyn at 6:20, 7:23, and 8:24. In the evening trains from Washington return to Berwyn on their way to Baltimore at 5:20, 5:51 and 6:31. In addition to these trains for Washington commuters, one train travels into Baltimore each morning and another returns from Baltimore each evening.

A MDOT spokeswoman said a commuter station will be built in Greenbelt before the Greenbelt Metrorail station is finished. This new station, which will replace the Berwyn facility, will have more lighting, better access and a larger, paved parking lot because it will be built near the future Metrorail site. It will probably open in 1986 when Metro interim parking lots and access roads are completed.

The Metrorail station probably will not be completed until 1991, according to Al Long, Metro's assistant director of public affairs. The Greenbelt line will be one of the last to be completed because portions of the route have yet to be "clearly defined," Long said. Construction on the station itself should begin by 1986, about five years before it is expected to be completed.

According to Long, the Greenbelt station, which will be built along the existing B&O tracks, will be equipped to handle eight-car trains, making it about the same size as the New Carrollton station.

Commuters will have access to both sides of the station and there will be parking for 3,000 cars. Long said that is a "very large" parking area. At present the largest parking area at a Metrorail station has 2,500 spaces.

For now, though, some Green-

City Council Agrees With APB On WSSC Storm Water Plan

by Phil Hanyok

At its November 7 meeting City Council voted its preference for a $1.9 million stormwater management facility plan for the Hanover Parkway area — one of several plans put forward by the Washington Suburban Sanitary Commission. The plan must now be reviewed by WSSC for a final decision.

The council voted unanimously to support the plan which was recommended by the city's Advisory Planning Board. The APB considered four major alternatives presented by WSSC and also unanimously favored the $1.9 million plan. The plans to upgrade the existing drainage system ranged from $1.7 million to $2.1 million.

The two unnamed tributaries considered in the plan flow under Hanover Parkway and meet shortly before the Capital Beltway culvert. According to the APB report, the first tributary flows south collecting runoff from a section of GHI near the Green Ridge House, Greenbriar Phase I, Greenway Center and the Maryland Trade Center. The second tributary flows west collecting runoff from Windsor Green and undeveloped land north of the Goddard Space Village Apartments.

The Draft Stormwater Management Facility Plan for Hanover Parkway was created by the Stormwater Planning Unit of the WSSC. In Prince Georges County this agency has authority over the control and disposition of surface water.

Because of recent development and expected future development in the area, potential downstream flooding, erosion, sedimentation and other environmental problems caused the WSSC to present the plan to the city council at its Oct. 3 meeting.

According to the WSSC report, there is evidence that the two culverts under Hanover Parkway are "grossly undersized,"

Leaf Vacuum Broken

The city's leaf vacuum has broken down and major engine repairs are needed. City Manager James K. Giese is not sure how long the vacuum will be out of service. "We are trying to arrange for fast repairs or substitute equipment," he said.

The city will pick up leaves that have been placed in bags. Residents should leave the bags in their yards and call 474-8004 for pick-up.

Thanksgiving Holiday

Because of the Thanksgiving Holiday, THERE WILL BE NO REFUSE COLLECTION THURSDAY, NOVEMBER 24, 1983. Monday and Tuesday will be on regular schedule. THERE WILL BE NO PAPER PICK UP ON WEDNESDAY. Thursday's collection will be made on Wednesday and Friday will be on regular schedule.

belters are happy riding the commuter train out of Berwyn. "I like it," said Kidwell. "I feel like this is my little secret."

For more information, schedules and fares, passengers may call the State Railroad Administration at (301) 859-RAIL or 261-1000 extension RAIL.

and that the culvert sites offered "regional stormwater management capabilities."

Park Service Concerned

Also the National Park Service expressed concern that development in the Hanover Parkway area would "adversely affect the aesthetics" of the stream which flows through Greenbelt Park.

The approved plan, according to the WSSC report, would construct a water detention basin at two natural ponding sites. One basin would be a six-foot-deep "wet pond" with a three-foot embankment at the second tributary. The other basin, at the first tributary, would be a "dry pond." The plan also includes smaller outflow structures to slow the downstream flow, and improvements to the bank of the stream between Hanover Parkway and the Capital Beltway.

A "wet pond" was supported by the APB because it "further enhances downstream water quality by allowing solid matter to settle" and it could provide a safe recreational area.

Some of the land in this area belongs to the Maryland-National Capital Park and Planning Commission (M-NCPPC) and the APB recommended that the M-NCPPC be consulted in the design of the facility because the ponding areas have possibilities for recreational facilities.

The APB report also recommended the approved plan over the other alternatives because it provided the "least amount of disturbance to the surrounding areas in terms of trees and vegetation lost to construction."

Citizens For Greenbelt

Meets on Nov. 29

Citizens for Greenbelt will be holding a membership meeting Tuesday, November 29 at 8 p.m. at the city council chambers. All members and all Greenbelters are invited to attend.

A representative from the state highway authority will be present to discuss in detail plans to alleviate traffic congestion on Greenbelt Road, future plans for the Baltimore-Washington Parkway, widening of Kenilworth Avenue beyond the Beltway, and the present status of the inter-county connector. The membership will be asked to take a position on the connector.

The present director of the Beltsville Agricultural Research Center, Dr. Paul Putnam, who has been very supportive of efforts to preserve the city's remnant green belt, will be present to introduce his successor. Dr. Putnam leaves for his new post as Acting Director of Ames Area North Central region, U.S.D.A.

A current amendment proposed to the Prince Georges County Charter will be discussed. Called article 7, it deals with increasing public input into zoning decisions.

Finally, there will be a brief business meeting. Topics will include candidates for the coming general March meeting elections and committee and executive officer reports. Refreshments will be served.

WATCHERS ON CRIME

Locking the barn door after the horse is stolen—that seems to be a universal human failing. Disasters happen to other people. Complacency is comfortable, enveloping like a soft cocoon.

And we Greenbelters living in the central city have been complacent. Serious crime, though occurring around us, seemed limited to the outer fringes, spilling over from transient populations in the busy shopping malls. But now the violent intrusion of two men, one of them masked, into a home in a quiet neighborhood of old Greenbelt has highlighted the vulnerability of us all.

Some time ago the Greenbriar community, in responding to the impact of the growth of crime in this area, organized a crime-watch program which has been very effective. Residents of Springhill Lake also have an ongoing program. Now citizens in Lakewood subdivision have taken the first step, through a neighborhood meeting, to organize a similar program.

This seems to us the way for each neighborhood organization to begin. The more we increase our knowledge about effective home security, the more we become alert to abnormal patterns of movement in our immediate areas, the more we work with our city police department—the safer will we all become from threats to life and property. We urge the officers of each citizens association to gear up as soon as possible in similar actions. And should they need a proverb to get them started, another old saying comes to mind: Forewarned is forearmed.

"Lion in Winter" to Play For Final Weekend

"The brilliance of 'The Lion in Winter' lies in its character depiction, an enormous undertaking for a community group." Susan Rema Boscov praised the play thus in her review in last week's News Review. "The Lion in Winter" was also reviewed favorably in one of the county newspapers.

Greenbelters will have an opportunity to see the play when it runs for one final weekend Friday and Saturday nights, November 25 and 26 at 8:15 p.m.

The characters praised by the reviewers are most all from Greenbelt. Marie Tousignant plays Eleanor of Aquitaine and Bruce Chubb Miller plays her husband, King Henry. Their sons Geoffrey, John and Richard (the Lionhearted) are portrayed by Bruce Pope, Joe Ross and Jeff Beyrent. The French king, King Philip, is depicted by Bob Mogel and the French princess, Alais, by Kelly Holl. The plot centers around choosing a successor to Henry with Henry favoring his youngest, childish son, John and Eleanor insisting that it be her oldest son, Richard.

The play will be on stage at Greenbelt Cultural Arts Center's Utopia Theater. There is an admission charge. For information call 474-7763, recording or 441-8770 one hour before performance.

Mr. Doolittle is survived by his wife May, daughter Barbara Kelly of Hyattsville, sons Stanley and Tommy of Mt. Airy, 13 grandchildren and four great-grandchildren.

The Way I See It

by Charles F. Schwan, Jr.

We who are old or infirm, shut-in, or single parents have in common a need for the occasional companionship of other adults. We may or may not have incomes adequate to serve our normal needs. We may or may not have family members close at hand. We may or may not have reason to feel that we continue to be contributing members of society.

Generally speaking our material needs are assured by the social welfare safety net (although we might wish its mesh were a little tighter), by pensions and private insurance and by private service organizations. Those of us who live in Green Ridge House or similar communal housing are more fortunate than some others in circumstances otherwise similar to ours in that we have each other. But even we would welcome the leavening that more younger faces would afford.

To repeat, we who are old or infirm, shut-in, or single parents have in common a need that only you as individuals can meet—to ease our occasional to frequent periods of loneliness. Please review your schedules to see if, from time to time, you could find a few minutes for us.

THANKSGIVING SERVICES AT BAPTIST CHURCH

Greenbelt Baptist Church will have its annual Thanksgiving Day Service at 10 a.m. on November 24. There will be a program of traditional Thanksgiving hymns, special music and a time to verbally share in gratitude. The public is invited. The church is located at Crescent and Greenhill Roads.

Crafts Bazaar at Legion

Crafts made by over 40 artisans from Maryland and nearby states will be featured at a Christmas Bazaar to be held on Saturday, November 26, from 10 a.m. to 10 p.m. at the American Legion Hall, 6900 Greenbelt Road. Santa will pay a visit and light refreshments will be sold at the function, which is being sponsored by Greenbelt Unit #136, American Legion Auxiliary. Further information can be obtained by calling 794-8814.

THANKS

To the Editor:

While I was in the hospital, the litter-gitter (leaf vacuum) came out and came up to our court. It gathered up all the leaves which had been left there and then, according to my brother who was watching it, it ran its little nose up between the garages and picked up some leaves which had blown up there.

I couldn't have had a more welcome home-coming gift nor a better "get-well" card. Thank you, City of Greenbelt.

Janet M. James

Brokerage Opens Local Branch

by Elaine Skolnik

An open house reception to celebrate the opening of the Prince Georges County office of Johnston, Lemon & Co., Inc. was held on October 24. The modern new quarters, occupying 2,200 square feet, is located in Suite 220, 6305 Ivy Lane in the Capital Office Park. This is in the Springhill Lake North tract near Kenilworth Ave. and the Beltway.

Several hundred guests were given a run-down of the firm's various transactions and research programs as they browsed through the offices. Most lingered at the Dow Jones ticker, out of which rolled market information from the D-J news service. Of interest also was the Quotron computer sitting on each broker's desk. Connected to a central network, the computer provides immediate market readings and current news stories.

Guests also enjoyed a lavish buffet in the nearby meeting room of the office park's management company, Community Realty. Attending were Johnston, Lemon's board chairman, Harvey Gram, president James T. Lemon and Terry Wallace, Executive Vice-President and Sales Manager.

The company specializes in stocks, bonds, local issues, options and mutual funds. Available also is a "comprehensive library of current statistical data, as well as publicly available reports and opinions of leading advisory organizations covering thousands of companies. . . ."

The firm's brochure points out that, as members of the New York Stock Exchange and the Philadelphia Stock Exchange and associate member of the American Stock Exchange, Johnston, Lemon brokers are able to execute orders in listed stocks, options and bonds "promptly and efficiently." Through a nationwide wire system, the firm has access to "every listed market and direct transmission of orders to the floors of the New York and American exchanges and the Chicago Board Options Exchange." Similarly the brochure notes Johnston, Lemon personnel are in "constant communication with officers of the firm on the floors Late model automobiles with catalytic converters can start leaf or grass fires. The city has been made aware of vehicles in other communities suffering fire damage by parking over piles of leaves which were ignited by the heat generated from the catalytic converters. Owners of late model vehicles should check their owner's manual to determine what care should be taken to avoid causing a fire.

CONSIDERING A CHANGE IN RESIDENCE?

There are three key elements to consider:

- A) Your needs: things you positively have to have.
- B) Your wants: things you'd like to have, but don't necessarily need.
- C) Your qualifications:
  - 1) Your initial investment (cash to move in)
  - 2) Your total income (gross yearly income)
  - 3) Your debt service (total indebtedness)

I would like the opportunity to discuss with you how we can combine these three factors to assist you and your family in achieving your housing goals both within Greenbelt and the metropolitan area - of course with no obligation.

New Liquor Store Opens

Cipriano Square Liquors opened its doors for business on November 19. Owner of the 2200 square foot store at 8861 Greenbelt Road, Kevin Bell moves up from his position as manager and wine buyer for Greenway Liquor for the past three years. Bell's manager is his brother-in-law Win Kelly.

A full-service store with a clean, well-lighted interior and professional attitude on the part of his five full-time and nine part-time employees in which "women will feel comfortable" is a goal Bell has set. "I tell my staff we want to make Cipriano Square Liquors the Garfinkels of the liquor business."

He views his store as a neighborhood service and plans to become a part of the community. For example, he's given preference to hiring employees who live in the immediate area. One disappointment, Bell says, was the discovery that he's now outside the jurisdiction of the Greenbelt Police Department for whom he has high praise (from his days at Greenway).

The store offers a "complete New York style deli," gourmet cheeses and crackers along with the usual line of liquors. Two areas Bell hopes to develop during the coming years are liquors and wines. He plans "probably the largest variety of beer in Prince Georges County, including more than 70 imports," he says,

Hoyer to Sponsor Forum On Central America

GHI NOTES

Members are reminded to obtain permission for additions, remodeling, sheds and other changes to GHI homes from the Staff Architect's Office before beginning any work.

The GHI Reception Office has information available for members on regulations, additions, resales and energy management.

started up or slowed down their engines upon arrival or departure at the facility.

The proposed plant, which would produce steam to be piped to the University of Maryland for heating, could also produce electricity for sale to PEPCO. The facility would burn 1,200 tons of refuse each day from north Prince Georges County, Willey said. It would reduce dependence on "landfilling" and increase protection of the environment in Prince Georges County.

Prince Georges County officials will have to decide whether to go ahead with the project, once MES completes the feasibility study and presents its project package to them in January, 1984.

If County officials decide to go ahead with the project, at least one year will elapse before construction could begin. Construction itself will require three years, according to MES estimates, and at the earliest, the facility could be operational by 1988. The average lifespan of these plants is 20 plus years.

MES held the meeting to provide information on the progress of the feasibility study. A slide show was used to explain what type of facility is proposed and to explain the energy recovery process.

Several elements of the feasibility study are already completed and reports available from MES. These are: Waste Supply Analysis, Candidate Site Location Report, Procurement and Financing Considerations, and Technology Comparison.

Residents who would like to discuss the project or project sites can contact either Willey or Sloan at MES, 60 West Street, Annapolis, Md. (301) 269-3355.
