City, County and School Board Still Stalled on Transfer Issues

by Elaine Skolnik

Negotiations between the city and the county government over the terms of the transfer of the North End school property to the County and Center School to the city have proceeded slowly over the past 11 months. The Prince Georges County Board of Education is unhappy with the city because formal transfer of the North End property has not taken place. The city council is unhappy with the county-government for refusing, so far, to approve certain conditions to the transfer.

While the city presses the county executive for a meeting to resolve the matter, two petitions are circulating in Greenbelt. One requests the Board of Education to build a two-story school instead of the presently approved one-story facility; the other petition asks to "stop the deforestation and destruction of Greenbelt" by saying "No" to a new school on the North End property.

School Board Annoyed

Frustrated school officials stress that they must have title to the North End property in order to demolish the existing school and start construction on the new facility. This work has already been delayed by the failure to transfer title, they say. Construction funds for the new school become available on July 1.

In an April 19 letter to Mayor Gil Weidenfeld, Superintendent of Schools John Murphy said, "We have now reached the point where, unless the requisite property transfer documents are forthcoming from the City of Greenbelt, I will be placed in the unhappy position of having to recommend to the Board of Education that funds earmarked for this project be devoted to other projects."

Council Demands Unmet

The city council maintains that, since the county government is also a party to the exchange of the county-owned Center School for the city-owned North End School, certain commitments by the county must be included in the agreement to accompany the transfer of the properties.

These commitments include county support for city applications for state grants, financial assistance with asbestos removal, county maintenance of Center School in good repair until its transfer to the city and help in obtaining a waiver from the state of the city's obligation to pay any outstanding debt on Center School. The city also wants county assistance on requests for modification and waiver of non-essential health and safety code requirements to minimize renovation costs for the historic Center School building.

In his April 9 response to the city's requests, Chief Administrative Officer John P. Davey said: "In summary, we are willing to transfer such facilities only on an 'as is' basis. The municipality is expected to take total responsibility for any renovation costs required to bring such facilities up to code and/or to adapt them to a particular use."

Davey also noted that "The county is willing to pledge its cooperation in assisting the city to expeditiously proceed with these projects by giving prompt consideration to the required plans, permits and inspections that may be necessary."

City Manager James K. Giese told Davey in an April 12 letter that he expected the city council would find totally unacceptable the county's position that "beyond agreeing to exchange the two properties . . . no other matters are negotiable or subject

by Mary Lou Williamson

Neighbors, gardeners, wildlife enthusiasts, and amateur historians came together Monday night, June 4, to say no to council. They filled every seat and leaned against the wall in the council chambers. Without exception speakers opposed constructing a storage shed and open storage compound on city property behind the Greenbelt Homes trailer and boat yard at the end of Hamilton Place.

The Problem

The city will soon have to stop using the North End School, which it currently owns, for storage when the property is returned to the school system. The existing Public Works Building at the Lake Park is already "highly overcrowded," City Manager James K. Giese explained to the audience. To store additional items there would evict others that also need to be under cover. The city staff, he said, proposes two choices: a shed and compound at Hamilton Place or at the current compound at the lake. A third option, renting space outside the city, Giese said, would not be "cost effective." The city is looking for the least expensive solution.

A 60 x 80 foot, prefabricated, unheated shed could be erected with only minor permits required from the county. The building might not be ugly, he said, but it wouldn't be pretty either. There would probably also be a fenced-in compound to store construction materials such as broken up concrete, sand and gravel, cold-mix asphalt, and eventually, perhaps, a salt dome.

The Hamilton Place site is "well hidden" from any existing housing, Giese explained. It would require no loss of trees as the area is now an open field and it lies next to an area that is already unsightly. At the Lake Park, the better of two possible locations has disadvantages which might require that the shed be constructed instead in the recycling area. The better site lies behind the compound but is on filled land which might still be settling. Two easements, a 96 in. water main and a 92 in. sewer line, would bar constructing a building and the planting of trees to screen a building. The Lake Park is heavily used by people who might not want to look at the increased unsightliness, Giese noted.

A short video, produced by the city staff, showed the two sites from a visual perspective.

Public Comment

Mayor Gil Weidenfeld read into the record a letter of support for the Hamilton Place site which the city had received from the Board of Directors of Greenbelt Homes.

Several GHI members who live on Ridge Road at the entrance to Hamilton Place expressed concern about added noise and fumes and the danger of truck traffic to the Hamilton Place site along narrow streets. "Many of our children play in the street," said Marie Hite, 34 Ridge Road. "I would hate to see more traffic." John Henry Jones, Lakeside North, told council he knows whenever there is a bad snow storm at night. From his apartment he hears the salt trucks, their bells ringing as they back up to the State's salt dome across Kenilworth Avenue.

Many expressed concern for the woodland. Susan Smithers said she loves living in Greenbelt, a "green oasis" that is "delicate, fragile and precious." She challenged the city to "meet its practical needs without destroying the integrity of these special places." This theme was echoed by many other speakers. Roger Roberts told council he sees deer

Seniors Need Their Space They Say at Open Forum

by Kelly Harmon

"More Space" seems to be the consensus of what Greenbelt seniors desire from the city. Better kept sidewalks, adult day care, and easily accessible program information are also high priorities among seniors who attended the First Annual Open Forum for Senior Citizens Saturday, June 9.

About 20 people gathered at the Youth Center to discuss what measures the city could undertake to meet the needs and desires of Greenbelt seniors.

According to the Senior Citizen Advisory Board vice-chair, Betty Timer, the group evolved from the senior citizens task force which met from June 1987 to June 1989. The task force determined that a committee would best suit the needs of Greenbelt seniors, to advise the city council on senior-related issues. One way the committee will be able to provide accurate information to the council is by holding an annual open forum for seniors.

Timer added, "We want to hear from seniors, evaluate it, and take it to the city council."

Senior Citizen's Advisory Committee Chair Booker Hughes said, "There are a large number of seniors in Greenbelt, and a large number of problems that go along with this and the process of aging. Although the number of seniors in Greenbelt is only a little higher than the national average, the numbers are growing."

A Place to Meet

The biggest concern of seniors at the open forum seemed to be the lack of space for seniors to socialize, meet and hold educational programs in Greenbelt. According to Betty Kennedy, there is no senior center located in Greenbelt, although there are centers close by on Good Luck Road, in Brentwood, and in Beltsville.

"We want one here," she said. "We should have one here."

Margaret Graham agreed. She said, "The city has done a lot for us, for instance, the Morrison Lounge. But it's just not big enough." The Morrison Lounge, located in the Youth Center, is not open all of the time and must be reserved through the Golden Age Club in order to use it, according to the Greenbelt Recreation Department.

Graham continued, "We need a place for seniors to go when they just want to drop in any time. When we have our Golden Age meetings, you can hardly hear the speaker because of all the little conversations going on. That's the only time when we get to see each other."

Esther Webb said, "Seniors need a place to meet which has several small rooms reserved for educational programs or small meetings so there's always room available for seniors."

According to Webb, the Greenbelt public library's multi-purpose room is either too large for the function or occupied when needed, and "smaller rooms are usually booked at certain times for the whole year."

Tom Simon, of the Adult Department of the Greenbelt Library confirmed this in a phone call. "The rooms are in use nearly every day," he said.

Community Center Solution

Senator Leo Green, of the 23rd District, who attended the open forum, said that the space problem could be alleviated by the proposed community center in the Greenbelt Center School.

The City Council has received $150,000 from the state, according to Green, in order to research the planning and engineering of the center. In one year, when council has finished research and presents the findings to Congress, Greenbelt may receive an additional $350,000 to supplement the Center School project.

Safety Concerns

Seniors are also concerned by the condition of sidewalks and walkways during inclement weather, feeling that the sidewalks are not kept as clear as they should be of snow and slippery wet leaves. Advisory board member Leonie Penney said that she has slipped a few times on sidewalks near the post office.

Seniors also desire more light on city sidewalks and walkways. The sidewalk from the Co-op to Parkway is completely dark at night, according to Charlotte Kennedy. "The same trees that give us shade in the daytime make things very dark at night," she said. "I carry a flashlight."

Videotape of Earth Day Will Air Next Month

To the Editor:
 Many wonderful things have happened since Earth Day to further our goals of preserving the Green Belt and improve our recycling abilities. Those of us who videotaped the Earth Day activities for Greenbelt Access TV have also been busy putting together a half-hour TV program, and have been waiting for hard-to-get editing time at Multi-Vision Cable.

We expect to finish the program in the next two weeks, for broadcast in early to mid-July. It will mix events and interviews with montages of the segments where we didn't have audio, all linked together by Earthlings singing "Live Gently." Donna Rice of MultiVision says that we have some very good video, and with her help I think we will have a really professional-looking program.

Thank you for waiting patiently.

Board Stands Alone

To the Editor:
 At the end of the June 4 public hearing on the proposal to build a city storage building at the end of Hamilton Place, councilman White noted that it was rare to have every speaker on the same side of an issue (those who spoke opposed the proposal). Unfortunately for GHI members, however, there was one voice in favor: a letter from our Board which expressed no opposition. Based on the turnout at the hearing, including many GHI members, our Board badly misjudged the opinions of the members this time!

Toni Bram Announces For House of Delegates

On Tuesday, June 5, Antoinette M. "Toni" Bram (D) filed as a candidate for the Maryland House of Delegates from the 23rd District. This District includes the cities of Greenbelt and Bowie.

Bram, a four-term member of the Greenbelt City Council, has been a Greenbelt resident for 30 years.

Bram organized and founded the Prince Georges Elected Municipal Women in 1984. She stresses her interest in environmental issues and her role in Greenbelt's acquisition of 102 acres of woodland for permanent greenspace. Bram is a member of the Maryland Municipal League, the National League of Cities, and the Washington Metropolitan Area Council of Governments.

Born in Washington, D.C., Bram received a Bachelor of Science degree Summa Cum Laude in Urban Studies from the University of Maryland in 1980 and a Master of Arts degree in History from the same institution in 1987.

She is married to Dr. Ralph A. Bram, a scientist with the U.S. Department of Agriculture, and has raised four children in Greenbelt.

Multinational Students Need Hosts July 6-11

The Eleanor Roosevelt chapter of AFS Intercultural Programs is sponsoring its annual Bus Stop July 6-11. Thirty-eight high school foreign exchange students who have been living in the Houston, Texas area during the past school year will be staying with area families prior to their departure from the U.S. A variety of activities is planned for the students who are from 24 different countries. Anyone who would like to host one of these students should call Sue Reitzig immediately at 441-2464.

CFG Sponsors Town Meeting on Cable TV

Citizens for Greenbelt, Inc., (CFG) will sponsor another in its Town Meeting series on Wednesday, June 27, at Eleanor Roosevelt High School cafeteria. (Roosevelt is located at Hanover Parkway and Greenbelt Road). The meeting begins at 7:30 p.m. and is open to CFG members as well as the public. Refreshments will be served before the meeting concludes at 9 p.m.

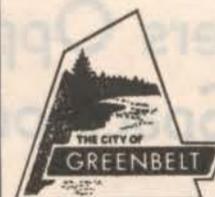

The subject of the meeting is Cable TV—one of the hottest topics in this part of the County. Service complaints are rising as fast as rates, in the opinion of many subscribers. Meanwhile, new technologies — available shortly — offer tantalizing prospects for viewers.

Featured are Mark Jennings, vice president and general manager of MultiVision, and Victor Nicholson, nationally-known cable pioneer since the 1950s and president of Bethesda-based BUSS, Inc.

Service issues, costs, and impact on consumers will highlight the discussion. "City residents will appreciate new information from these two experts," according to CFG President Julian Weiss. "One new wrinkle affecting subscribers are recent Federal Communications Commission regulations. These may significantly alter cable as we know it."

CFG invited Mid-Atlantic Cable to appear on the panel, but that organization believes it is inappropriate to do so while negotiations with the City government are in progress and might affect its possible franchise agreements. However, a Mid-Atlantic spokesman indicated willingness to appear before CFG at a future date.

Membership business is on the agenda. This includes CFG transportation committee chairman Konrad Herling's update on the 301 Bypass issue.

Citizens and Council Compare Views On City and County Recycling Plans

by Diane Oberg

The Greenbelt City Council moved a step closer to a decision on how to expand the city's recycling program by holding a public hearing on June 5. Council is scheduled to choose whether to join the county program or establish a separate program at its June 14 regular council meeting.

City or County Plan?
The city's Advisory Committee on Recycling and Refuse Collection reviewed the issues and presented council with a report this spring. The committee was unable to present a unified recommendation. Instead, it presented majority and minority reports. The majority report, favored by seven of the 11 members, recommended a city-run recycling program.

At least initially, this program would serve only those areas receiving city refuse collection, currently only GHI and single family homes within the core of the city. As envisioned by the members of the majority, residents would sort recyclables for door-to-door pickup by city refuse crews.

Under the minority plan, supported by four committee members, private haulers hired by the county would collect recyclables at the curb. In a letter to City Manager James K. Giese, Jesse Buggs, manager of the county's residential recycling efforts, said that the county would collect at the service side porches in GHI. However, as pointed out by majority member Hank Haslach, Buggs left the county an escape. Buggs said that the GHI collection "will be monitored to assess its costs and operational parameters. The results of this monitoring process will help us determine if changes need to be made in our policy to provide this service."

Citizen Views
Excluding committee members, seven citizens spoke at the hearing. Three favored a city recycling program while four supported the county-run option. Letters received by the city from Greenbelt Homes, Inc., the Boxwood Village Civic Association and the Woodland Hills Civic Association supported the county-run option. Ruth Osbourne opposed the county plan for curbside pickup, noting that she has no curb and no place to leave recyclables for pickup.

Konrad Herling argued that the city could do a better job and set higher standards than the county. Betty Timer argued that the city can't do all things for all people. She said she was willing to give the county two years to demonstrate whether it can do the job, and said the important thing is to get started.

Extent of Program
While the county considers apartment, condominium and commercial recycling programs as private ventures, Buggs wrote that, "Accommodations can be made to collect in those single-family townhouse communities where private haulers have refused to provide the service." This agreement to extend recycling collection to single-family areas not receiving city refuse collection was cited by several speakers as the reason for their support of the county plan.

Roy Dahl, president of Greenwood Village, and Sheldon Goldberg, secretary of the Windsor Green Home Owners Association, both reported that their refuse haulers are not interested in establishing a recycling program. Dahl feared that some of the costs of the city program would be covered by tax revenues, rather than by refuse fees. He urged the city to take advantage of the county's educational program instead of developing one from scratch and suggested that the city could concentrate on collecting materials not covered by the county program.

Goldberg said that in his opinion the majority plan with the city attempting to market the recyclables is "very risky." He also preferred the collection of co-mingled recyclables over forcing residents to sort their bottles and cans.

Cost Issues
James Foy, chairman of the Greenbelt East Advisory Committee and president of Hunting Ridge Condominiums, also supported the county plan. He said his members were concerned about start-up costs under the city plan and the exclusion of the Greenbelt East communities. He reported on Hunting Ridge's participation in a county pilot program. Residents separate their containers for pickup by a private hauler, while city crews pick up the community's newspapers. Foy said that this source separation is working well.

Giese noted that while the city has agreed to pick up Hunting Ridge's newspapers on a trial basis, it has refused to offer this service elsewhere. He said it costs up to $50 to collect a week's worth of papers, for which the city receives $5 to $7.50. He argued that this results in a subsidy to the private hauler, who benefits from a $50 to $75 reduction in weekly landfill tipping fees, while the city bears the collection cost.

Will Staube favored a city-run recycling program, saying that the city needs to take responsibility for recycling its own trash. He did not see the requirement that residents sort their recyclables as a major obstacle to recycling.

Implications of Budget
Ruth Bond also favored the city program. However, she expressed disappointment that "for all intents and purposes" council had already made a decision for the county program when it passed Giese's budget, which was based upon participation in the county program. Bond deplored conditions at the current recycling center next to Attick Park, which she called inadequate for "a city this size."

Mayor pro tem Thomas X. White noted Bond's contention, also voiced by Haslach, that the decision between the city and county programs had already been made. White said that at the least the budget showed an "insensitivity" to the advisory committee. Council member Joseph Isaacs disagreed. He said that he had not yet made up his mind and that council could have altered Giese's proposed budget. Isaacs said that the budget was adopted with the knowledge that if council chose a city-run plan it would have to modify the budget.

Weidenfeld and council member Edward Putens seconded Isaac's contention that adoption of the budget does not imply support for the minority program. Weidenfeld said that council is still in a position to choose either option. Putens argued that council made clear that adopting the budget did not imply a decision on recycling.

Giese noted that if the city creates its own recycling program, the county will only rebate the recycling surcharge paid by the city in its tipping fees. This is less, he said, than what the county would pay a private hauler in the county-run program. Giese said that the small volume of recyclables produced by the city would put it at a disadvantage in marketing the materials.

Committee Views
Several recycling committee members argued for their views. Leonie Penney of Woodland Hills and Jim O'Reilly, of Boxwood Village, supported a county-run program. O'Reilly said that it would still be the city's responsibility to make the program work. One area he urged council to consider is assisting in the expansion of recycling to those areas not covered by the county plan. He said that the city could work with the owners and make them aware of the availability of grant funds for the development of private recycling programs.

Beth Anderson favored the city program. She also argued that the city would still have responsibilities if the county plan were adopted instead. Among these responsibilities are the maintenance of drop-off centers, education and recycling of yard waste.

Haslach argued that a city-run program could be more easily integrated with regular trash collection. He said that the city would deal more fairly with the public in concerns such as time of pickup and care of the property. If citizens sort their trash, he said, they will become more aware of the type and amount of trash they are generating. This should help the city work toward reducing the trash stream. He also argued that the city would benefit from the sale of the recyclables.

Charlene McAdams, of Greenwood Village, supported the county plan, noting the county's agreement to collect from single family and townhouse developments if the private hauler declines. She said expecting residents to sort their trash into five bins is "asking too much."

Glendening Opens Campaign HQ

Parris N. Glendening, Prince Georges County Executive running for his third term in office, officially opened his headquarters on Thursday, June 14 at 7 p.m., where he was joined by top State and local elected officials.

Lance Billingsley serves as Glendening's campaign manager.

A political scientist and professor of government and politics at the University of Maryland at College Park, Glendening began his political career as a member of the Hyattsville City Council. He was a member of the Prince Georges County Council from 1974 through 1982, serving as chairman during two of those years. Glendening was elected as County Executive in 1982 and re-elected to a second term in 1986. Parris and Francis Anne Glendening and their son, Raymond, reside in University Town Park.

Prince Georgians for Glendening Headquarters is located at 7945 Annapolis Road in the La Fontaine Bleu Shopping Center in New Carrollton.

Adult Day Care

The possibility of adult day-care in Greenbelt is another issue which emerged Saturday. The facility would take care of seniors during the day by providing medical care, administering prescriptions, offering company and other services. It would aid those seniors who can take care of themselves, either on their own or with the help of family members, during the night.

Senator Green said, "We need hundreds of these to keep people out of nursing homes, to keep people out of home care. We need 10 of these around the county."

Greenbelt resident James Thompson, who works for the county zoning board, offered another solution to the adult day-care idea. Residents may care for several seniors in their own home during the day if they have a zoning permit. These permits, however, do not allow residents to offer medical help.

More Ideas

Other ideas suggested by seniors at the meeting were:

—A Job Bank, a list of part-time work for seniors, a job exchange, or barter of services, and a list of names and numbers of people who would be willing to do house or yard work for seniors for a minimal fee.

—Legal Service Information a list of numbers of people seniors could contact for advice, counseling or information.

—A support group for widows and widowers.

—Electronic items such as a large screen television, a VCR and a computer which could be used for group education.

—A better flow of information on all the types of programs available to seniors including those on health, education, welfare and recreation.

—Maps of the trails in the city which could be given to friends and relatives who visit Greenbelt.

—A plank or walkway over the small stream that many people cross to get to the lake park.

—More security for everyone who walks through the lake park.

—More fitness classes for seniors and coaching for those who participate in the senior olympics.

Recycled Yard Trash Is Great for Yards

According to a press release from the city, a large portion of the refuse being taken to landfills is yard waste—leaves, brush, grass clippings, etc. Residents can help extend the life of landfills, keep refuse collection costs down and improve their gardens by recycling yard waste in their own yards, rather than putting it out for collection.

For example, instead of bagging grass clippings, let the lawn mower spread or mulch them onto the grass. Contrary to popular belief, grass clippings do not cause thatch buildup. Instead, the clippings act as a soil conditioner.

Leaves can be placed around plants and shrubs in the fall where they will help protect roots from freezing. By spring, they will be broken down sufficiently to serve as a soil conditioner and mulch.

Do-it-yourself compost piles are another way to recycle your yard waste. There are numerous books and articles available at the library, book stores and garden centers to tell gardeners how to do their own composting.

The city is recycling yard wastes and composting as well. Leaves picked up by the leaf vacuum, and branches and hedges chipped by the chipper machine are taken to city property and composted. The city then reuses this material in parks and flower beds. Residents can benefit from these recycling efforts as well as helping themselves to the composted leaves and chips. They are piled at the east end of North way, adjacent to the Northway softball fields. People should bring their own bags or containers and a shovel.

For the Fun-Minded

Citizens for Greenbelt, Inc., (CFG) will hold a meeting at 7:30 p.m. on Monday, June 25 at the Greenbelt Library to plan its Labor Day activities and welcomes interested Greenbelters. Rick Meetre will chair the group.

Volunteers are invited to attend the strategy session. A variety of assignments, which Meetre and others describe at 99.44% "pure fun," await the committee.

CFG also announced two co-chairs of its Hospitality Committee. Betty Allen, who is stepping down as librarian next month, and Brenda Simons will begin terms in June. Joyce Martin is new chairperson of the Membership Committee.

Compost that is available free to the public for use in their gardens is displayed by Dave Helmecki, administrative assistant with the city Public Works Department, during Earth Day activities. The compost is piled at the east end of Northway near the softball fields (see accompanying "Recycled Yard Trash" article).

The new revision of the R-11 and R-15 express Metrobus routes to New Carrollton were presented to the city council at its regular meeting on May 14 by Mary Anderson, Chief of the Transit Planning Section, and Pete Donner, Transit Planner, for Prince Georges County. The R-11 route, which now serves Springhill Lake, will incorporate old Greenbelt as well, adding nine minutes to the run.

The R-15, which used to serve old Greenbelt, will serve East Greenbelt with room to expand for new development. The R-15 will begin at Hanover Parkway and Greenbelt Roads, travel north on Hanover Parkway to Mandan Road, south to Ora Glen Drive, east to Hanover Parkway, then south to New Carrollton via Princess Garden Parkway.

The changes will begin in September and will be experimental for six months. Satisfactory ridership statistics and a public hearing would be required before making the change permanent.

These changes have resulted from requests by Hunting Ridge residents for bus service and several meetings with residents of Greenbelt East through the meetings of GEAC. Earlier plans for the R-15 to travel along Greenbrook Drive have been scuttled after objections were received from residents of that street.

Norene Yoch, Charlestowne Village, unofficial chairperson of the regular bus riders, supported the opportunity to increase service to more Greenbelt residents. She also asked that the express trips be extended later into the evening. More Greenbelters ride the morning trips than come back in the evening. "If you work near Dupont Circle and work past 5:30, you cannot make the last express bus from New Yoch has kept records of the number of riders and surveyed those a.m. riders who do not return in the evening. She said seven more riders would be accommodated by the time adjustment.

Dr. Frank Pisciotta, Gastroenterologist

Listening To Your Body's Language

If you think the way computers work is complicated, think for a minute about your own body. Everything we do—from taking a step to reading a page to processing food—requires enormous coordination of systems within. When something is going wrong, the body often sends out signals to warn us.

These signals are commonly known as symptoms, and are the body's way of telling us that something needs attention.

Dr. Frank Pisciotta, an area gastroenterologist, states, "Two common signs of a digestive system in trouble are diarrhea and constipation. Others include painful swallowing, heartburn, nausea, cramping, unexplained weight loss, discoloration of tissue or the presence of blood in the stool."

Dr. Pisciotta says that for some 20 million Americans, minor digestive upsets are a daily problem. According to the National Institutes of Health figures, another 20 million are chronically ill with serious gastrointestinal disorders.

He states, "Almost everyone suffers from occasional bouts of heartburn. Changing eating habits may help dramatically, however, if within a week's time self-care measures don't help, it's time to seek medical advice. The acids caused by heartburn can actually erode the esophagus and cause painful ulcers. Your doctor can likely prescribe something to prevent it."

Common sense, he says, is the key. Many people wait too long for the symptoms to disappear on their own. By the time they seek medical advice, the problem has advanced to a more complicated stage.

Most digestive diseases are highly treatable in their early stages, includes malignancies. Early tumors can usually be effectively removed with little or no discomfort by a simple in-office procedure called endoscopy. Dr. Pisciotta has offices that include endoscopy facilities, as well as on-site lab, and X-ray, so there is no undue disruption of the patient's daily routine. Should there be a need, he has hospital privileges at many of the areas finest facilities.

He says, "We often see patients who have suffered for weeks or months before they come in, thinking that the problem would go away. Our staff understands the importance of early treatment, so when someone calls, we accommodate them right away. A thorough evaluation and program of treatment, if needed, begins immediately."

Dr. Pisciotta, who is a graduate of the Universities of Maryland and Texas Medical School, trained at institutes including Hahnemann Medical Center and Hospital in Philadelphia; M.D. Anderson Hospital and Tumor Institute in Houston; St Mary's Hospital at the University of Rochester in New York and Washington Hospital Center in Washington, D.C. He prescribes preventive measures as ways in which to avoid having trouble.

"Eat slowly," he advises, "and as your mother always told you, chew your food well. Have plenty of high-fiber food in your diet, drink alcohol only in moderation, don't smoke cigarettes, and be aware of any changes in your body's normal patterns. If you have doubts concerning the seriousness of a condition, see a doctor. Ignoring symptoms for long periods of time can wind up being very costly in terms of your health. When your body talks, listen."

Several Greenbelters had a hand in the 14th Annual Washington Folk Festival held at Glen Echo Park recently. Local raconteur Bill Mayhew had some moments on center stage (actually area 4) with a story swap. (say did ya hear the one about a lottery ticket . . .)

Another Greenbelter, guitarist and bluesman Neil Harpe of 45 Court Ridge participated in a guitar workshop and sang some blues for the folks gathered. Both men also had a big hand in the behind the scenes work of the festival, helping make it happen for all those gathered. Erin Harpe, Neil's daughter, pitched in too, singing folk songs. Hundreds of musicians, storytellers, craftpersons and the very necessary technical crews all combined to make it a most memorable festival

Congratulations to Joseph Rimar of the 6 Court Hillside for his prize-winning entry in the third annual senior creative writing contest sponsored by Governor Schaefer's "Maryland, You are Beautiful" committee. Rimar's poem "Maryland" won second place in the county division. Other Greenbelt writers participating in the project were Rachael Algaze, Sally Carrano, D. Smith Gordon, Charles Kendall, Sr., Helen Oring, Vita Pergola, Alberta Tompkins and Jeanne Whitney.

A local doctor received an award recently. Dr. Salaheddin Mahallati, a board certified pediatrician practicing at 7525 Greenway Center Drive, received the Vicennial Silver Medal from Georgetown University in recognition of his service for the past 20 years. He is a clinical associate professor in the School of Medicine.

Speaking of doctors, William C. Brown, received his M.D. from the University of South Florida College of Medicine. Dr. Brown will continue his residency training at the university, specializing in internal medicine. Congratulations to you both.

The May 17 issue of the Prince Georges Post featured Ed McGehrin in their "Neighbor of the Week" column. McGehrin, senior vice-president of investments with Johnston Lemon & Company, Inc. in Capital Office Park, is a 30-year veteran stockbroker. The Greenbelt Rotary Club awarded him the 1989 Humanitarian for the Year for the Washington-Baltimore-Frederick area. He also served in the Salvation Army Advisory Board and was a member of the Citizens Advisory Committee of the Langley Park, College Park-Greenbelt Master Plan for three years.

Former Greenbelter Margaret Amberg now living and teaching in Wisconsin, had a surprise waiting for her when she returned from a family wedding and reunion. The kindergarten classes she taught there presented her with a handmade quilt comprised of individual pictures done by the students on squares of muslin with special fabric crayons. The substitute teachers organized the project and stitched the quilt together with help from some special moms. What a beautiful way to remember 20 years of teaching. She was also recently named teacher of the year by the teachers of her district, for which she received a beautiful plaque.

From the military comes word that Navy Seaman Recruit Sean J. Arthurs has completed recruit training at the Recruit Training Command, Great Lakes, Illinois. A 1989 graduate of ERHS, he is the son of Harold and Valerie Siegel of Maplewood Court.

Pvt. Dae H. Yim has completed basic training at Fort Bliss, Texas. He is the brother of Pil W. Vim of Westway.

Pfc. Theresa Lynn Davis has completed US Army basic training at Fort Jackson, S.C. and is now stationed at the Defense Language Institute in Monterey, CA. Also, SPC William C. Davis III of the US Army has completed a two-year tour in Caknakli, Turkey and is now stationed at Fort Lewis, Washington. They are children of Patricia Davis of 11 Ridge Road.

Marine Lance Cpl. Katharine Barwick is attending the Navy School of Music, located at the Little Creek Naval Amphibious Base, Norfolk, VA. Barwick, the daughter of Dr. William Barwick, Jr. and Delpha Barwick of Greenbelt is a 1989 graduate of ERHS where she was the captain of her high school's swim team, had won four varsity letters and was a member of the Greenbelt and Rockville Montgomery Swim Clubs, and qualified four times for the junior olympics. She also excelled academically taking advanced placement courses at Johns Hopkins University while still a high school student.

And finally, this is the last column I will be doing for a while. My family and I will be going overseas for a bit — an adventure we're looking forward to with only a little trepidation and much excitement. Linda Savaryn will be taking over the column and looks forward to hearing all the news from our neighbors. Keep in touch!

on his almost daily early morning walk to the Gardenway overpass. Keith Yahoda spoke of seeing a fox on the Hamilton Place site.

"We already have one unsightly place at the lake," said Jeff Lemieux. "Keep it to one."

Yahoda and Leonie Penney said they use the lake park frequently and hardly notice the public works compound. "Only the people staying above the tenth floor at the Marriott can see it when they look down," said Penney.

Gardens

Betsy Likowski took issue with the staff's apparent view that the Hamilton Place site "is a blank space on the map," that little gardening has been done there in recent years.

The city had recommended this year's gardeners avoid using the 24 plots under consideration for the compound.

"You're looking at the garden club at its low point," explained Likowski, who is field captain. With three years of drought and no water on site, gardeners have become discouraged. But give them a couple of good years with plenty of rain and they'll be back, she said. This city prides itself on providing a variety of recreational outlets for its residents. We need all of our plots to maintain a viable club, she said.

Ralph Webb, the previous field captain, agreed. The plots had been well used up to 1988 and gardeners would return.

Historic Site?

The area at the end of Hamilton Place is potentially a valuable historic site, Likowski and Webb told council. From observing the type of non-native plants and trees, Likowski believes the old Hamilton family farmstead was located somewhere along the south or east sides of the field of garden plots. (John Hamilton acquired 240 acres in 1768, calling it Hamilton's Purchase. The land included most of Greenbelt East and the wooded area west of the Baltimore-Washington Parkway).

"Your proposed fence line would come within six feet of the old Hamilton Cemetery," stated Webb. He asked Giese about the family of Hamilton. Giese said that he remembered seeing two gravestones dating from the Revolutionary War period, but that he wasn't certain whether family members may have served in the Indian Wars rather than the Revolution. Samuel Hamilton Walker became famous as the co-inventor of the Walker-Colt 45. The fact that this man was born nearby at Toaping Castle, home of the Walker family, indicates that he may have been a Hamilton as well.

"Shouldn't research be done?" asked Webb. "There's the potential to make something really nice here."

Council Comments

Council member Edward Putens expressed interest in the historic site potential and in acquiring a garden.

"It's been an educational evening for me. We'll have to do something about the gravesite," added council member Antoinette M. Bram.

"It's not very often we have a proposition for which no one speaks," summed up council member Thomas X. White.

"No one is wedded to this proposal," added council member Joseph Isaacs. "Your message is clear."

TRANSFER

to agreement." Giese said, "A more extensive agreement is needed than simply that the city and county will exchange sites."

Meeting Requested

In the meantime council has renewed its request to meet with County Executive Parris Glendening and Murphy in an effort to resolve outstanding issues relating to the exchange of the property. Robert Duncan, deputy chief administrative officer, told the News Review on June 12 that the county executive is always willing to meet with elected officials. A response, he said, should be forthcoming within a week.

Duncan observed that "essentially we're trying to get the school board out of the middle." Discussion of the Center School transfer should be between the county and city, he said, adding that in this way, the city could transfer North End School property to the school board and construction work can begin on the new school.

Petitions

On June 14 the city council will consider a petition to "Stop the Deforestation and Destruction of Greenbelt." The text of the petition reads "No New School at North End." Apparently, its intent is to reverse the results of the June 1989 referendum election in which the majority of Greenbelt voters supported the North End location for a new school and authorized the issuance of $3 million in bonds to finance the renovation of Center School into a community center.

A second petition directed to the School Board asks that a two-story school at the North End site be built instead of a one-story school "in order to save trees on the North End School property and the yards of our neighbors in 11 Court Laurel Hill."

R. C. Garcia, school architect, has told the News Review that new trees will be planted on the site to compensate, as much as possible, for tree loss. He also noted that the soccer field has been relocated and "slides away from the property line by 40 to 50 feet."

Garcia said that he had provided facts and figures for both school designs. The one-story building is considered more acceptable from an educational stand point while a two-story facility offers site utilization and environmental advantages.

Park Group Meets Monday

The Committee to Save the Green Belt will meet on Monday, June 18 at 7:30 p.m. in the Greenbelt Library, lower level conference room. The public is invited to attend.

He announces that anyone who wants to join a 4-person relay team to run 20 miles should find three other runners to share the 2 1/2, 5, 5 and 7 1/2 mile loops and show up at Braden Field at 8 a.m. on Saturday, June 16. People who can't get a team together may join one at the race.

All-male, all-female and co-ed teams will be competing for awards in their category.

The start is at 8:30 a.m. The course is 2 and 1/2 miles and includes part of the lake and nearby streets.

This annual event is organized by the D.C. Road Runners and the Greenbelt Running Club and is co-sponsored by the Greenbelt Recreation Depart. There is a small fee for non-D.C. Road Runner members. Awards will be given to top teams.

A 2 and 1/2 mile Fun Run, also for a small fee, will start 15 minutes after the 8:30 a.m. relay start. For information call 474-9362. All Greenbelt teams will receive an award.

Greenbelter Develops IDs for Children

Greenbelter David Lychenheim is introducing an identification system designed for use by children while traveling or while attending large events. JOE'S TIPS OF THE WEEK
Hello Again !!
" " FRUSTRATED " " Was the look of the passengers of a late model Chevrolet parked on the side of the road way, hood up and everybody standing all around the fenders looking into the engine compartment, with about 5 little yellow bottles lined up ready to be poured into the radiator. My question to myself is where did they get five bottles, unless they kept them in the car. It looked as if the coolant was coming out as fast as they were pouring it in. Well, a situation like this one can get out of hand real quick, not counting any engine damage that could result from an emergency drive into a repair facility. Just the factor of being out there all alone on the side of the road 4 feet from 60 mph traffic where the car moves when some one breezes by you. Not a comfortable feeling. Well, do I feel that a typical condition such as this one is preventable? No question! This car was 6 years old. The mileage was not a factor, but all the belts and hoses should have hit the trash can 2 years ago, as well as the thermostat. If not, well, you invite these types of problems. I know that some breakdowns are not predictable and you have to deal with them as they happen, but a condition such as this one is a high percentage condition that everyone should be aware of.
TILL NEXT TIME ! ! ! !
THINK PREVENTIVE MAINTENANCE ! ! ! !

Finance Dept. Employees Receive Special Awards

The City Manager presented awards recently to Finance Department employees Jeffrey Williams, accountant; Margaret Brunatti, automation systems manager; and Linda Urso and Antoinette Conrad, accounts clerks.

Because of computer programming problems, an extensive period of time was needed to close out accounts for the fiscal year ending June 30 and to begin posting for the current year. Williams, who assumed his responsibilities as accountant a month after the close of the year, worked with auditors and the finance staff to resolve accounting problems and bring city records into order and up to date. Not until November 28 could the new fiscal year accounts be set up and posting begin. Although it was the holiday season, the team effort brought all records up to date by early January.
