Nomination Time Is Near For Greenbelter of the Year

by Virginia Beauchamp

The time has come again to think of candidates to nominate for the annual award to name Greenbelt's Outstanding Citizen. In an exceptional city like this, there is surely a large pool from which to draw.

One proof is the group of exceptional persons who have been chosen in the past to fill that post since the contest first began, back in 1973. We'll present that proof in future issues of this paper, as the 1991 contest goes into gear, when we plan to profile two of those winners.

The second proof has to do with the peculiar history of Greenbelt as a planned community. Most cities grow quite accidentally as people—for whatever reason—choose to settle in. They may come for jobs, to be near relatives, because they liked the look of the place. Some folks were born in the cities in which they live, or moved in as children, and never thought to leave.

But Greenbelt was always different. It began as a brand new place, planned that way by federal bureaucrats during the Franklin D. Roosevelt administration. Its first citizens applied to become Greenbelters, it's true, but they had to go through a screening process that might or might not be successful.

Chosen Few

Greenbelters were carefully selected. Only those having annual incomes below a certain limit were qualified for consideration. Quotas were also established to reflect the nation (at least one family from each state), the distribution of religions in the area, and proportions of government and non-governmental workers. "But above all," as authors Barbara Likowski and Jay McCarl state, in Greenbelt: History of a New Town, "they had to demonstrate a cooperative, energetic spirit, showing a willingness to contribute heavily to the fledgling town."

In other words, the interviewers who chose the first settlers in Greenbelt stacked the deck. The city they created became a solid concentration of activists.

Active Settlers

Leafing through the Greenbelt history book turns up some of the things those settlers did: founding cooperatives, developing a varied recreational program, having community festivals, building churches and a synagogue. People were so busy going to meetings that the town council even established a one-week moratorium so that everyone could stay home with their families. From among some of those active folks worthy candidates may still be found.

Out of this activist spirit, the Labor Day Festival weekend—a 37-year tradition—was developed. Later, the contest for the Outstanding Citizen also became a part of the Festival tradition. A special committee, chaired by Tom Renahan and comprised of members from various parts of the community, selects the winner from among nominations made by organizations and individual citizens.

The name of the winner is always a secret until Friday evening, when the Festival officially begins. Only the committee and a friend or family member of the recipient know in advance—the latter chosen to see that the winner gets to the opening program. Besides being showered with gifts and special recognitions, the Outstanding Citizen also becomes honorary parade marshal on Labor Day.

Nominate Now

Nominations for the Outstanding Citizen of 1991 may be made by filling out the form elsewhere in this paper. Nominations from previous years may also be updated. (So many remarkable candidates are nominated each year, when only one can be chosen, that this group alone becomes a viable pool from which to choose).

Nominees must be Greenbelt residents. Current elected officials are not eligible. City employees may be nominated only for activities for which they are not paid.

Redistricting Hearing

The Governor's Redistricting Advisory Committee will hold a final public hearing on July 25 in Annapolis to accept comments and plans for congressional redistricting. The hearing will be in the Joint Hearing Room of the Legislative Services Building at 90 State Circle at 4 p.m. and 7 p.m.

Priority will be given to those who have reserved a testimony time. To reserve a testimony time individuals should call 1-800-688-7494. For additional information contact Dennis McGee at 301-225-4507.

The purpose of the July 25 hearing is to allow citizens to present statewide perspectives on the congressional redistricting issue, only.

The July 25 hearing will be conducted in two sessions, the first beginning at 4 p.m. and the second at 7 p.m. The Maryland congressional delegation has been invited to speak at the beginning of the 7 p.m. session. The public is invited to present testimony at the 4 p.m. session, or following the congressional delegation.

The CFG Meeting Sports Lively Discussion About Greenbelt Metro

by Barbara Likowski

A panel discussion on the development of the Metro site and its possible environmental impact was featured at the July 11 Citizens for Greenbelt (CFG) meeting. Moderated by Konrad Herling, the panel included Joseph Chang, area planner for Maryland National Capital Park and Planning Commission (M-NCPPC); Bruce Hancock, from M-NCPPC Department of Transportation; and Robert Boone, executive director of the Anacostia Watershed Society. After each gave a brief presentation, the panel responded to audience questions.

Planning

Chang began by stating that he had participated in a public hearing on Metro in Greenbelt in 1989, when citizens had expressed their concerns about design, proposed Metro yards wetlands, and the possible problems.

The Langley Park, College Park, Greenbelt Master Plan provides for a Transit District Overlay Zone (TDOZ) around the Greenbelt Metro station. In establishing a TDOZ the county would define permissible uses of the property and could modify existing zoning requirements. However, there is controversy about this zone.

Hearings on the Greenbelt segment will begin soon. Park and Planning has proposed a TDOZ encompassing only the area directly around the Metro station site (one-half mile radius from the station). This includes the 77-acre Washington Metropolitan Area Transit Authority's (WMATA) tract and 183 acres of the A. H. Smith property. Much of the latter is flood plain and wetlands. The mixed use—transportation oriented zone (MXT) could include a mixture of motel/hotel; retail trades and services; office/research and industrial; and dwellings. Chang said that 80 percent of this land is wetlands, leaving only 20 percent developable (the maximum would be two million square feet or approximately twice the size of Capital Office Park). To take advantage of Metro from an economic point of view, mixed development is necessary, he said. There is a potential for higher development since space is limited. A College Park woman asked: "Is the sky the limit?" No site for building has yet been finalized, Chang said.

"Look carefully at the natural constraints," Chang urged. All of the developable land, he said, cannot be joined without crossing over wetlands using a bridge, for example.

A flood plain study is needed, Chang continued. This should include lakes for stormwater. Although plans for a manmade lake or stormwater retention pond were mentioned years ago, they never materialized.

In order to build a Metro parking garage, as had been suggested by some citizens, it would be necessary to get away from the code. It would be very costly.

The Greenbelt area has two extremes, Chang said—conservation, which is found in old Greenbelt, and tremendous development pressure which faces the newer areas. Greenbelt Park protects Greenbelt, also the green strip in the Baltimore-Washington Parkway. (This latter designation brought a few denials from the audience). "Tree preservation should be top priority," Chang said. Greenbelt should continue to protect the green strips. Additional tree buffering should be 50-100 feet along highways.

Chang mentioned that the Internal Revenue Service (IRS) had inquired about two weeks ago about the possibility of locating at the Metro site.

Bike Trails

Hancock stated that plans for bike trails and pedestrian access to Metro come from the Master Plan, which is the culmination of years of study and talk. Metro is a prime piece of property, he added.

All possibilities for these trails have to be evaluated, such as separate parking, trails, bike lanes, and sidewalks. Continuity of a trail from Indian Creek to the Metro site is planned, but it's going to be a tough act to get from the stream valley part and continue north, he said.

We're looking for safe access from all sides of the Greenbelt station, he continued. He mentioned access from Lackawanna Street, a College Park trail. For those cyclists stout of heart, he said, there are the shoulders on Kenilworth Avenue. Separate trails could be behind curbs or park trails. Hancock is trying to implement separate trails but is

Wetlands

"I can't handle riding with automobiles," Boone said. "Make a bike access. This is a golden opportunity to create a beautiful bike access." Boone advocated including a bike path through the Smith property and greenways.

Boone reported that he has been talking to elected officials from Greenbelt and College Park. He is trying to keep a momentum going to have the Smith property condemned and put into public ownership. Konterra, he affirmed, was in the same condition as the Smith property (abandoned gravel mine) and that property was restored. The citizens and council are the seed that is going to make this happen, he said.

Questions

Rick Meetre asked for an explanation of what seemed to him to be contradictory statements—that some development couldn't occur unless the codes were broken and that two million square feet can be developed.

Chang did not feel anyone could answer that now. First, developers have to present a plan and have it looked at. A lot of developable land at the site is separated by wetlands. Some wetlands can be used if land is bought to replace them. With a limited amount of developable space, highrise development might be the only way, he said, adding that the county has consistently urged highrise development near Metro sites. The IRS would be building on top of the Metro parking lot, Chang thought. The whole issue of development.

Next Wednesday morning, July 24, the new stop signs on Crescent Road at Gardenway will be uncovered and in operation. In addition, the signs warning drivers of the upcoming stop signs will be replaced with new "Stop Ahead" signs.

Letters to the Editor

Sometimes we can only gain real perspective on a critical issue close to home by viewing things from a great distance. My niece is married to an Australian, Bruce Lay, who happens to be a city planner and architect; they live in Australia, near Sydney. When they visit they have always made a special point of indicating how impressed they are by our town and the graceful way it evolves.

I had occasion to telephone them a few days ago, and mentioned the eight-story senior housing project proposed behind the library. Quite frankly, I was startled by Bruce's immediate curt response, "I'm appalled!" When I afterwards mentioned the multi-level indoor garage he replied, "hideous!" I certainly agree with him. He further mentioned that the really progressive housing projects for the elderly being developed around the world (e.g., in Western Europe, Australia) emphasize the importance of ground level structures.

If we all work together on this challenge I am sure we can achieve much more appropriate senior housing than that represented by the overbearing structure pictured in the News Review (July 4), one that would annihilate the very essence of our town.

Golden Age Club

by Bill Boswell

The Greenbelt Golden Age Club, Inc., an affiliate of the Greenbelt Recreation Department is the oldest senior citizen club in Prince Georges County. Headquarters are in the Morrison Lounge in the Greenbelt Youth Center which is currently shared with other Greenbelt senior groups.

The object of the club is to promote the welfare of men and women of Greenbelt, who are at least sixty years old, and to develop their common interests, provide sociability, entertainment, cultural and educational programs for its members. Any resident (not postal address only) of Greenbelt and Attick Towers, of good character, sixty years of age and over is eligible for membership in the club.

The club meets in the Multi-Purpose Room, adjoining the Morrison Lounge, each Wednesday at 11 a.m., unless otherwise announced. Visitors and guests are welcome to attend.

Thanks to the efforts of the club officers, committee chairpersons, and volunteer members, an interesting variety of programs, events and trips (some previously reported in the Greenbelt News Review) have met with the approval of our membership, guests and visitors. We believe these account in part for the influx of new members, who have joined this year.

Thanks

I'd like to thank the people who planted the small but significant garden near the entrance to the Greenbelt Step Club, located behind Domino's Pizza. Not that the general area is lacking in plots; indeed, two others neighbor it. Directly across from the beds are the ever-flowering garden of donations left for the American Rescue Workers. A few steps down from the lot lies a bed of assorted perennials, rustling from over-fertilization. Though these gardens have their own inherent beauty, the traditional flowers and deep brown soil of the Step Club plot maintain a grace of their own. Thanks again.

Senate Approves Funds To Clean Up Anacostia

Senators Paul Sarbanes and Barbara A. Mikulski recently hailed approval of funds to begin the cleanup of the Anacostia River basin. The Senate included the Anacostia measure as part of next year's energy and water programs. Greenbelt is part of the Anacostia Watershed. $1.3 million was allotted to begin basin-wide improvements.

Over the last two years the Army Corps of Engineers has completed a study evaluating the potential measures to control the problems experienced in the Anacostia River basin. The Corps recommended a plan of improvements including creation of wetlands, riparian planting, elimination of barriers to fish migration and the improvement of fish habitat. The initial work would be done in the Prince Georges County portion of the basin.

Stunned

When I saw the photo in the July 4 News Review of the proposed senior co-op housing, I was stunned.

I agree with the concept of providing senior housing and realize that it would be most advantageous to its residents to be in walking distance to services and stores. However, I oppose the size of the structure and its location for two reasons: (1) city land should not be used for private ventures, and (2) the proposed structure is grossly incongruent with its surroundings. It doesn't fit aesthetically, it consumes open space and will certainly increase congestion in the center of town.

I find it rather curious that those living in "Old Greenbelt" fight to preserve green and open space and the unique look of the town, yet they also are continually trying to cram more enterprises into it. Every time you add a building, business or service you potentially decrease the amount of green and open space and definitely increase congestion. We must realize that we can't have it all in one place.

Seniors Softball

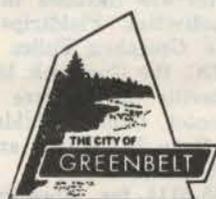

by Jerry Conway

The Greenbelt Senior Softball Team began their second half 14-game series of the Baltimore and Howard County Leagues by a win against Howard County. Bill Grennon smashed a triple which drove in winning runs, and the infield made good plays, holding the opposing team in check.

The other two games against Catonsville and Dundalk were regrettably affected by a series of hits through and over our infield. However, the outfield completed four double plays. Andy Feeney and Jerry Conway threw successfully over 200 feet to home plate catcher, Lou Felzer. These throws startled the opposing teams.

Jerry Conway managed to hit a homerun and a triple in one game, and Hugh McEvoy smashed a triple, delivering two scores in another game. The Greenbelt team enjoys the competition and is inspired by the good hits and fielding.

All senior citizens who enjoy playing softball are encouraged to gather for fun on Tuesday, Thursday and Friday mornings at Braden Field. These are non-competitive events.

R. Hal Silvers

R. Hal Silvers, age 72, died on July 15, after a prolonged illness. A Greenbelt resident for 30 years, he had been active since his retirement as Chairman of the Crime Prevention Committee for the city and with the Greenbelt Lions Club.

Beginning in 1955, he served as Director of Civil Defense for Prince Georges County and because of his distinguished service in that capacity, he was honored as Man of the Year by the county Junior Chamber of Commerce and later by the Maryland State Junior Chamber of Commerce.

In recognition of these awards, the Greenbelt City Council in 1958, under Mayor Alan Kistler, issued a proclamation congratulating Silvers.

Later, the Civil Defense Agency became the Office of Emergency Preparedness (OEP), for which he continued as Director, also assuming the office of County Energy Coordinator.

Among his numerous personal and departmental awards and Certificates of Appreciation, were three awards from the National Association of Counties: 1973 in Disaster Preparedness, for initiating the first in the country "One Stop Disaster Center" during Hurricane Agnes; 1974 in Energy Assistance, for initiating the first in the country "Operation Oasis" during the gasoline crisis; and in 1980 in Energy Management, for initiating a system for energy management in the Public Sector.

A native of Lakewood, Ohio, Silvers later moved to New York City. He studied journalism at Columbia University and, following World War II, where he served as a combat officer in the Philippines, he completed a Bachelor's degree in Business Administration at Sampson College, a division of Syracuse University. Silvers was one of the founders of the American Veterans Committee and served as its National Secretary. When the Committee, which subsequently expanded to a membership of 180,000, moved its offices to the Washington area, Silvers moved with it. He later worked for the American Cancer Society's Maryland Division, which included Montgomery and Prince Georges Counties, and became the Assistant Executive Director for the Maryland Division, statewide.

Survivors include his wife, Dial; a son, Lawrence H. Silvers; daughters Connie E. Silvers of Sausalito, California; (Mrs.) S. Bloodworth of Boynton Beach, Florida; and granddaughters Shannon S. Morman, Smaro Bloodworth and Christine Helen Silvers.

Martin Haker, Sr.

Martin James Haker, Sr., 17 Ridge Rd., died on July 1 at the Washington Adventist Hospital from complications following bypass surgery.

Mr. Haker had lived in Greenbelt since Nov. 1942. He was employed as an economist with the Army Corps of Engineers for Rivers and Harbors. He retired in June, 1978 and was inducted into the Engineers Gallery of Distinguished Employees in 1983.

Mr. Haker also owned and operated an insurance agency from 1942 until 1980.

He was a member of St. Hugh's Church, being an active member of the St. Vincent de Paul Society and usher since the parish was established.

Mass of Christian Burial was offered by Father Crowley on Friday, July 5 at St. Hugh's with interment at Fort Lincoln Cemetery. Pall bearers included grandsons Frank and Joseph Santora and Francis Scott, III and nephews Michael, John, Jr. Jerome and Robert Abell.

Survivors include his wife, Frances, daughters Suzanne Santora, Kathleen Scott and Mary Virginia Haker; one sister, Agnes Abell. His son, Marty Haker, Jr., predeceased him.

Jeanette Cardano-Frutkoff

Jeanette Elizabeth Cardano-Frutkoff, 63, died July 14 at the Hospice of Northern Virginia. She had Myelodysplastic syndrome, a blood disorder.

Mrs. Cardano-Frutkoff was born in Washington. She was a graduate of Eastern High School.

She retired in 1989 after working for 23 years as a Prince Georges school secretary mostly at Bladensburg and Happy Acres elementary schools.

Her marriage to Ferdinand Cardano ended in divorce.

She is survived by her husband, Jerry Frutkoff of Greenbelt; four children by her first marriage, Conrad, Steven and Cecelia Cardano and Clara Ann Netzer; four stepchildren, and 10 grandchildren.

Recycling Provides Solution If City Enthusiasm Continues

by Ray Cycle

The need to recycle is a result of increasing amounts of municipal solid waste, declining landfill capacity and concerns about many methods of waste management. Residents and businesses of Prince Georges County produce nearly 800,000 tons of trash per year. The City of Greenbelt contributed over 2,500 tons of refuse in 1990 to the Sandy Hill landfill in Bowie. At the present rate of generation this landfill is expected to be filled to capacity by 1993. The rapid depletion of landfill space has created a solid waste crisis occurring right here in Prince Georges County.

Options

One option would be to build a new landfill. But no one is willing to have it in their neighborhood. Also the costs associated with a new landfill are astronomical. It is not as simple as digging a hole in the ground and throwing the garbage in. A landfill requires geotextile liners, leachate collection systems, ground water monitors, etc. The most recent landfill opened in Maryland had a price tag of $5.6 million for just the planning and construction and will have a life span of only 20 years.

Another option is a waste-to-energy facility (incinerator). One concern associated with incineration is the possibility of transferring environmental toxins to the atmosphere, via the smokestack. The ash may still contain some solid toxins, which still must be deposited into a landfill. The costs associated with an incinerator can be as high as a landfill.

Solution

Recycling holds the best prospect for actually solving the solid waste crisis by reducing the amount of refuse going into the landfill and does not require as much capital investment as landfilling or incineration.

Enthusiasm

Even before joining the County's recycling program, residents of Greenbelt were recycling more than 15 percent of the refuse collected by city crews. This was accomplished by collecting newspapers at the door and by establishing a drop-off center where residents could deposit glass, aluminum, used oil, newspapers and other materials for recycling.

If residents exhibit the same enthusiasm for the door-to-door/curbside collection program as they have for the drop-off center, the city will be able to meet the county's established goal of recycling 35 percent of all waste generated.

On average, individuals generate approximately 4 pounds of waste a day. For just a two-person household this is 1.5 tons of waste a year. Recycling just 25 percent of this waste saves 750 pounds of garbage from going to the landfill.

Ray Cycle is a pen name used by Brian Almquist, a member of the city's Recycling Advisory Committee and Dave Helmecki, City of Greenbelt Recycling Coordinator.

Metro Fares Increase

The Washington Metropolitan Area Transit Authority Board of Directors recently approved bus and rail fare increases that were implemented in two phases over a two-year period. Effective June 29, 1991, the base boarding fare for bus and rail is $1. Riders can buy discount bus tokens and special farecards to reduce the cost of a short ride. The fare increase is expected to bring in revenue of $25.5 million in fiscal 1992 and an additional $12 million in fiscal 1993.

METRORAIL: The charge for riding Metrorail during peak hours was $1 for the first three miles. Mileage rates for longer trips during rush hour remain at 16 cents per mile from three to six miles and increase to 14½ cents per mile for trips over six miles with a maximum fare of $2.85 for any Metrorail trip of 15 miles or longer. On June 27, 1991, the base fare remained $1; however, the mileage rates went up from 16 to 19 cents per mile and from 14½ to 16½ cents per mile. The maximum fare is $3.15.

A $4.75 rail discount farecard was introduced for riders taking trips which cost the minimum fare. This discount farecard brings the $1 fare down to 95 cents per trip during fiscal 1992; it will be eliminated in fiscal 1993.

Metro's peak fare is in effect from opening until 9:30 a.m. and from 3 to 7 p.m. Monday through Friday, except national holidays.

The charge for riding Metrorail during off-peak hours is $1 for the first seven miles; $1.25 between seven and ten miles; and $1.50 for all trips over 10 miles. In fiscal 1993, the plan is to maintain the $1 boarding charge and raise the off-peak fare between seven and ten miles to $1.50 and for trips over 10 miles to charge $1.75. This change will require public hearings.

Off-peak fares are charged from 9:31 a.m. to 2:59 p.m. and from 7:01 p.m. to closing Monday through Friday and all day Saturdays, Sundays and national holidays.

Rail fares for senior citizens and the disabled will continue to be set at one-half the peak period fare at all times, with a maximum fare of $1.40.

METRO BUS: The base fare in all jurisdictions is $1 at all times. Discounted bus tokens cost $17 for 20 tokens, which brings the cost per ride back to 85c. These tokens will cost $18 for a package of 20 in fiscal 1993.

Fares in Maryland and Virginia are subject to zone changes. Rail to bus transfers in the District of Columbia will continue to be free. Maryland bus riders will pay 75c for a rail to bus transfer in fiscal 1992. Virginia riders will pay 60c for a rail to bus transfer, a 10c increase.

FLASH PASSES: Maryland, Virginia and District flash passes will continue to be available for bus and rail-to-bus trips, and will range in price from $17 to $32. The Family/Tourist Pass goes from $6 to $8. Detailed information on these passes and other fare information is available from Metro by calling 202-637-7000.

State Information On Unclaimed Funds

Maryland State Comptroller Louis L. Goldstein says citizens in various areas of the state are receiving post cards encouraging them to pay $10 to call a "900" number for information about unclaimed funds. "It's not necessary to pay any charges to find out if our office has records of unclaimed funds that may belong to you," Goldstein said. "Our service is free."

The comptroller also said he proposed legislation, which became effective July 1, 1991, to protect consumers. The new law prohibits anyone from charging a fee for helping to find unclaimed property that has been in the state's possession for less than two years.

The new law allows the comptroller's normal advertising and outreach programs to notify the apparent rightful owners that he has unclaimed property for them. The Unclaimed Property Section of the State Comptroller's Office attempts to locate rightful owners through advertising, matching names with other computerized records, direct mail and outreach efforts such as a booth at the State Fair.

Inquiries can be made to the Unclaimed Property Section, Room 310, State Office Building, 301 West Preston Street, Baltimore, Maryland 21201 or by calling (301) 225-1700.

On Saturday, June 15, Explorer Post No. 1037 spent a day at the College Park Airport, touring its museum and participating in an introductory aviation class. Later they had the opportunity to ride in a plane, piloted by Greenbelt Police Corporal Thomas Kemp.

In April the members learned about chemical protective suits that are used by the U.S. Army, most recently by soldiers who served in the Persian Gulf War. Members were given the chance to put the suits on and experience first hand the physical restrictions these suits place on soldiers. Capt. Kevin Jenkins and First Lt. Doris Carr, advisors to Post No. 1037, instructed.

Future activities for members include rappelling (climbing a 40-foot tower with ropes) in September; a bike trip from Mt. Vernon to Alexandria in July; and white-water rafting in Pennsylvania in October.

Explorer Post No. 1037 specializes in police work, military intelligence, and outdoor activities along with teaching its members leadership, organizational and planning type skills. Post No. 1037 may be of particular interest to those interested in the police cadet program.

Anyone between the ages of 14 and 21 who is interested in joining may call Capt. Kevin Jenkins of the National Guard at 220-7393, or Officer George Mathews of the Greenbelt Police at 474-7200. While the starting age is 14, 13-year-olds may become associate members.

velopment will be addressed by a new TDOZ study, he continued. It can't be ignored. Greenbelt will be consulted.

Mayor Gil Weidenfeld stated that he hoped the boundaries of the TDOZ would be expanded to include Beltway Plaza and Springhill Lake.

Weidenfeld asked how it was possible to put up a highrise and provide adequate facilities to accommodate it. He did not think this would be easily done.

Chang replied that highways had to be built according to the Master Plan. Greenbelt Road would have to be finished first.

Weidenfeld thanked Chang for informing Greenbelt about the IRS interest in building at Metro. If they did build there, would the building be owned or leased? he asked. If owned by the federal government, Greenbelt would get jobs and traffic but no taxes; if leased, the city would get all three. Chang thought it wasn't likely that IRS would build there because they probably needed more space and parking. The trend is towards the government buying its buildings.

Barry Schlesinger stated that policy should have a reason behind it. Why should there be construction around the station when, according to Boone, most of the people who work, for example near New Carrollton, don't use Metro.

Why build more offices, he asked, when those which are already built aren't filled? Why not single family housing? Chang assured him that residents were one consideration under the MXT plan. Chang said that 1 1/2 percent of those people working near the New Carrollton Metro used Metro. Mayor pro tem Thomas X. White added that a residential community near the New Carrollton station was being stressed by development.

In his opening statement, Konrad Herling had said that riders of MARC commuter rail, which runs between Baltimore and Washington, would be competing for the 3500 parking places at the Greenbelt Metro station. A MARC station has been planned for the west side of the Metro property. MARC ridership is increasing, he added.

Konrad now asked for clarification. Is parking for those who work at Metro or for those who ride Metro? Chang thought they would share spaces. The question really should be asked of transportation planners, he said. Hancock suggested contacting Frank Derro, John Funk and Tony Williams, team leaders of that department.

Weidenfeld explained that at New Carrollton non-riders were discouraged from parking there by having to pay a higher parking fee. Those who rode Metro and presented a valid transfer from a Metro station other than New Carrollton were charged less. He added that he hoped a similar plan would be used at the Greenbelt station.

Traffic Problems

Judy Robinson, vice-president of the Prince Georges Civic League, stated that she had asked at at least five public hearings; where is the capacity to get public facilities? How many cars are driven within a five mile radius of the Metro station? She had never gotten an answer. She maintained that public facilities were inadequate.

The problem of adequate facilities was addressed by several people. Weidenfeld deplored the possibility of heavy backup under existing facilities. He said that already there was backup at Ivy Lane during the rush hours. "When Metro, the new federal courthouse and new development are added, what about Ivy Lane then?" he asked.

When a traffic light was suggested, he quipped that two traffic lights might be needed. "Ideal," Weidenfeld said. To another questioner a button attuned to the traffic light was suggested as a way for pedestrians to get across Greenbelt Road.

Bike Trails Revisited

"How far would bike trails extend? Betsy Likowski asked. "Would they extend to old Greenbelt?" Hancock assured her that they would go from old and new Greenbelt to Metro. The bike trails along Greenbelt Road might be revived. He explained that it was necessary to get together with the National Park Service because an additional ten feet behind the curb would be needed.

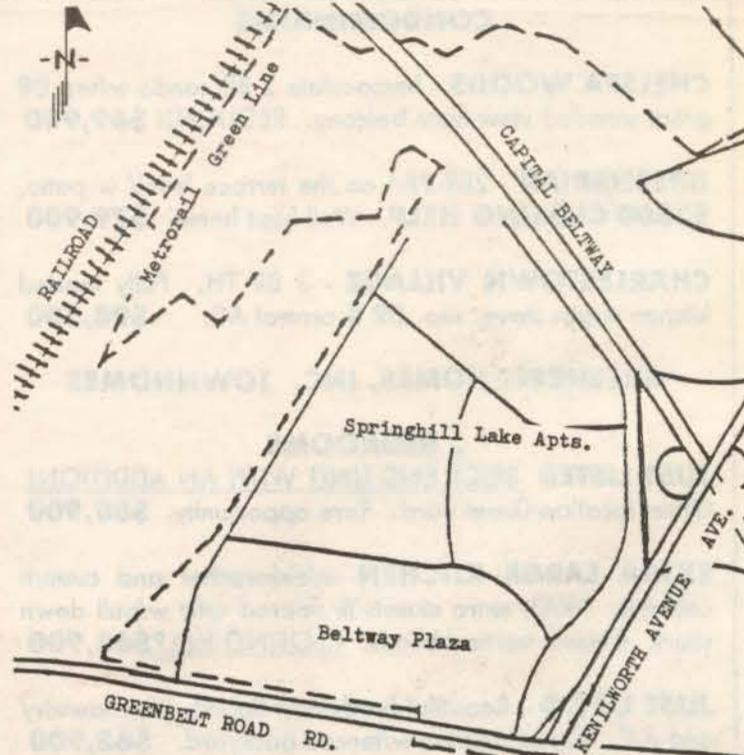

White and Hancock sparred about the reviewing process for trails because White indicated that he did not think Greenbelt had been included in the process. Hancock assured White that all plans are subject to a public review process. When he asked White if he had been at the planning TDOZ workshop or public hearing, White answered that he had never heard of them. Hancock said they had been advertised and flyers sent out. Hancock added that there had been Greenbelt citizens at the hearing in College Park. White said he was trying to get some way for public participation in "what you are doing." Hancock reiterated that there was citizen participation in the TDOZ process.

Ruth Mathis preferred to talk about what will help rather than what would harm the wetlands. How can the Chesapeake Bay and Anacostia River be helped? she asked. What can people do to improve the environment?

Boone said Indian Creek is the "dirty orphan of the watershed." The number one problem in the Anacostia watershed is runoff from parking lots. There is a need to restore the wetlands to serve as filters to purify the water. Plant trees and preserve those that are here, he pleaded.

Weidenfeld said it was very likely that the city and council would be against filling in any wetlands.

The above map shows the Metro and A.H. Smith properties along the Western boundary of Greenbelt. Both are included in the TDOZ (Transit District Overlay Zone). City council would like to see the TDOZ expanded to include Beltway Plaza and Springhill Lake properties.

Eye Screening Test

The Adult Home Eye Screening Test is a simple but highly effective answer to the need for early detection of potentially blinding eye diseases, providing a clue as to eye health. It could be the first step in saving sight. It will enable people to check their distance and near vision, test for macular degeneration, and help determine whether there is a need for a complete medical eye examination.

This Home Screening Test, however, should in no way replace a thorough medical eye examination. If any other change in vision or eye problems are noticed an examination by an eye doctor is necessary.

This easy-to-follow vision screening test is being offered free by the Prevention of Blindness Society. To order one, just write to: Prevention of Blindness Society, 1775 Church Street, N. W., Washington, D.C. 20036, or call 202-234-1010.

Little Miss Greenbelt

There are three stages of the competition — personal interview, modeling theme wear, and party dress. The Little Miss Greenbelt contest is patterned after the Miss Greenbelt Pageant and has been part of the Labor Day Festival for the past few years. This year the Little Miss event is coordinated by Cherri Gainor, 441-8589, who most recently was in charge of Miss Greenbelt activities. She can provide information to young girls and their families who are considering taking part in the competition.

PRAB Brainstorms on New Playground Responsibilities

by S. R. Cherry

The Greenbelt Parks and Recreation Advisory Board (PRAB) met on June 26 at the Greenbelt Youth Center to begin planning a city playground. The meeting served as a brainstorming session for PRAB members and concerned citizens on organizing the project.

PRAB's chairman, Tom Renahan, commented: "Playgrounds tend to be numerous and they tend to be somewhat basic. We are seeking to build something that would be challenging to kids. Including the community in the planning and construction of the playground is a way of creating something that would be unusually good at not a very high cost." Renahan's view of the best way of achieving success in creating the playground is to put together people in the community under the direction of professional playground architects and construction professionals.

Time and Money

The meeting's moderator, Keith Chernikoff, mentioned that he had spoken with other jurisdictions to gather ideas on the decidedly labor intensive process of fund raising. From his fact-finding in New Carrollton and Annapolis, he reported ideas and the expected length of time needed for securing professional assistance for raising the money for the project. He also interviewed participants of similar projects in other communities to find out what situations to avoid.

The group discussed proposed locations to be considered for the site, composition of equipment, materials to be used, and means of organizing the project. On the question of location and who would provide the property for the site, two to three designated sites are being considered for the playground, which would be built with the city's blessing on park property that the city already owns.

Design Ideas

Recreation Department Director Hank Irving offered ideas on designs utilized in Montgomery County. Irving offered suggestions for landscaping, parking facilities, safety standards, and consideration of other materials to be used besides, or included with, the traditional wood construction.

PRAB's efforts are guided by the success of the playground at Lake Waterford Park in Pasadena, Maryland. The entire community took part in fund raising and design, from area businesses and local agencies to the children themselves. Construction was completed in five days through a process called "barn-raising," using a group of community volunteers to do the actual building with the help of consultants. The Pasadena playground, which was constructed at a cost of $50,000, is now valued at $150,000.

Ideas for subjects to be addressed in future meetings will be seating for parents, cost, how to create a unique "Greenbelt Design," and channeling of community support.

Citizens Bring More Hazardous Waste

Prince Georges County residents did not let the sometimes heavy rain keep them from participating in one of the County's largest Household Hazardous Waste Collection Days since the program began in 1988. Some 900 cars drove through the one-day collection site in June at Prince Georges Community College in Largo where over 22,000 pounds of household hazardous waste were collected.

Additionally, 3 1/4 tons of car batteries, 30 tons of mixed paper and 310 gallons of latex paint were collected for recycling.

WAMU-FM Radio reported residents bringing material that they had collected and stored over many years.

The County's next Household Hazardous Waste Collection Day will be held on Sunday, September 29, at Eleanor Roosevelt High School from 8 a.m. to 3 p.m.

An information line, 95-CLEAN, is available 24 hours a day which provides information about identification of hazardous waste.
