Cable Memo of Understanding OK'd Despite Many Complaints

by Diane Oberg

Negotiations to renew Jones Communications' cable television franchise moved a step closer to completion with the Greenbelt City Council's approval of a memorandum of understanding outlining the general terms of a contract at its November 23 regular meeting. Council also set March 9 as the date for the referendum on the annexation of Parkside at Greenbelt.

Cable Television

A coalition of county municipalities and the county government is negotiating a renewal of the cable franchise agreement with Jones Communications. The negotiators have reached agreement on a Memorandum of Understanding (MOU) that outlines the general structure of a franchise renewal agreement. The details will be worked out during the negotiation of that agreement. The participating governments are now being asked to approve the MOU as the framework for negotiating the franchise agreement.

The MOU calls for a 15-year renewal, with a review at year 8 to ensure that the company is maintaining a "state-of-the-art" system. Lee Afflerbach, an engineering consultant assisting the coalition, said that companies are reluctant to make significant investments in cable systems without a long-term contract. With some reluctance stemming from frustration with the service problems and the lack of detail in the MOU, council unanimously approved the MOU. Council also introduced an ordinance extending the current franchise agreement through February 1999 to allow time for completion of the franchise renewal negotiations. Final action on that ordinance is expected at the next council meeting.

Public Hearing

During a public hearing held early in the council meeting, most speakers raised concerns with the quality of service currently being provided by the company. However, Public Information and Communications Coordinator Beverly Palau, the city's representative in these negotiations, told council that the Federal Communications Commission "makes it very difficult to tell a company to go away." If the city were to refuse to renew the franchise agreement, the company would be entitled to a number of hearings with the burden of proof on the city, not the company. At an earlier meeting, she had stated that these hearings could take a couple of years.

If they wished, other cable companies could come in and "overbuild," in essence to construct a second cable system in the city. However, no other company has sought to do so.

The speakers at the public hearing complained of long waits on hold — Gerald Madison of Ridge Road told of being on hold for four hours before his call was answered. Tom Carter of Laurel Hill Road said he had had more problems in five years with the cable system in Greenbelt than he had experienced in 15 years in Bladensburg. He said that he has found it quicker to drive to Jones' office to report problems, than it is to call them in by phone.

Jones Responds

Karmen Bailey, government and community relations manager for Jones, acknowledged that the company's response times have not been acceptable, although she offered no explanation for why things had gotten so bad. She said that the company hired 20 new customer service

Charrette Group Questions Work In View of Metroland Plan

by Virginia Beauchamp

Between the third and fourth charrettes dealing with the Greenbelt Metro site and the surrounding area, a major public relations event, with much hoopla, major media attention, and politicians on display, occurred on October 15. This spectacular was hosted by a group of corporations, known collectively as Metroland Developers, LLC, that touted plans for an upscale regional shopping mall and mixed use property, to be called Greenbelt Station, on the site in question.

Thus those present at the Greenbelt Metro Area Sector Planning Group's fourth charrette only nine days later, on October 24, were full of questions about the value of their own enterprise of preparing guidelines, or a preferred concept, for a Sectional Map Amendment (SMA) for the same area. Although charrette participants during the next two hours worked carefully through all previously identified issues to reach consensus, many felt that their attention to preserving the fragile wetlands environment had been finessed in the Metroland design concept.

When "Chip" Reed, representing the A. H. Smith Limited Partnership, addressed those present after the charrette's agenda had been completed, they were all suddenly attentive. Reed, who had participated from the beginning in the focus group, was aware that the elegant set of drawings and maps prepared for the media occasion varied from the land use map still being worked out by the planning group. Accompanying him at the final charrette was Greg Ault from EDAW, site planner and designer for Greenbelt Station who had prepared the press packet illustrations and design concept.

Introductory Concepts

Noting that throughout the year owners of the Smith property had been urged to reveal plans for its future development, Reed said: "Now we've started to put something on the table." He was pleased, he said, that the team of companies assembled as Metroland had been chosen by the Washington Metro Area Transit Authority (WMATA) to develop the combined site. The concepts presented would add "some vitality and some reality" to the Sector Plan process, he said.

Nevertheless, Reed stressed that what had been presented was "just a concept. We feel we're at the beginning, and before the beginning, stages of the process."

The point was made again later by Ault. "We're in an interim process," Ault said. "This is a vision plan. It's not set in stone at all."

Environmental Issues

Reed particularly stressed the importance of environmental issues as the site is developed. These include both flood plain concerns and wetlands, he noted. (In the Metroland's Plan only 48 acres have been designated for park and recreational uses. According to staff from the Maryland-National Capital Park and Planning Commission, about 130 acres are considered environmentally sensitive.)

Brownie Girl Scouts Win Top Toy Parade

by Tammy H. Lowry

Brownie Troop 5004 marched to their own beat as toy soldiers at the 7th Annual Holiday Toy Parade held at Beltway Plaza Mall on Saturday, November 21, and walked away with the $100 grand prize for the "Best Parade Entry."

Beltway Plaza Mall sponsored this annual event to kick off the Prince George's County Toy Drive and welcome the arrival of Santa and Mrs. Claus. The parade consisted of numerous entertainers including dog performers, the Parkdale High School Band, the Northwestern High Pom Squad, the Eleanor Roosevelt High Step Dance Team, double dutchers, a dancing stilt walker, a balloonologist, the Redskinettes and Junior Redskinettes, the Wizards' Dance Team and many, many others.

The Brownies were adorned in glitter and glitz in their toy soldier costumes, top hats and shiny black boots. In spite of the blustery winds, the Brownies had fun and managed to display their smiles throughout the event. The three younger sisters of the Brownies, Kelli Lowry, age 4, Bianca Clement, age 4, and Dana Holland, age 3, marched in the front of the line. Uniforms were sewn by Troop 5004 co-leader, Maria Killian-Clement, with assistance from Marjorie Jones, Jean Clement and Charlotte Neal.

Brownie Troop 5004 toy soldiers appearing in the parade were Amadea Clement, Jasmine Clement, Brittany Freeland, Ashley Harrod, Keyonia Holland, Breeanna Holmes, Kierra Jenkins and Tai Lowry. The Brownies' Troop Leaders are Tammy H. Lowry and Maria Killian-Clement.

Letters to the Editor

Doesn't Understand

For some time, I have been puzzled by the lack of public comment on proposals for a massive development at the Greenbelt Metro.

Do you believe that the Metro bureaucracy and their development partners are too powerful? Have you been swayed by promises of "upscale development"?

Has any consideration been given to the increased violent crime that will come with a major development in the area? Armed robberies, for example.

As currently proposed, this development will consist of exactly the wrong things with regard to crime and traffic congestion — high rise apartments, multiplex cinemas, parking garages, etc.

Are we foolish enough to be influenced by the unlikely promise of a Bloomingdale's in Greenbelt? Who in our neighborhood can afford their high prices? How often do you shop there now? Think about it. We are being sold a bill of goods by master salesmen who are working solely for profit.

In 1990, Metro officials, standing in Greenbelt City Council Chambers, said that 78% of the Smith property was classified wetlands or floodplain and that it therefore could not be developed.

Metro officials are on record as having stated that Greenbelt had no right to give input into its decision of who could develop its part of the Metro Station. The opposite is true — it is they who have no right to be land developers. You, Greenbelters, have the power to shape the future of Greenbelt, if you choose it. If not, the decisions will be made for you based on individual greed and profit.

Clearly, I am angry. It is because I feel that bit by bit, my home is being taken away from me. But I honestly do not understand your thoughts on the subject.

Go Back To Home?

As I walk away from the Old Greenbelt Theatre this chilly evening, fallen leaves swirling around my feet, I can still hear Dorothy from the re-released 'Wizard of Oz' saying, "There's no place like home! There's no place like home!" Can Greenbelt define what home is?

On one hand we are desperately trying to save the Old Greenbelt Theatre from the disgusting proposition of being turned into a dollar store. Trying to save our past, that old small hometown of the '40s. On the other hand we are fighting annexation of a modern development, Parkside, and embracing the development of an upscale shopping mall. Tyson's Corner East comes to the Greenbelt Metro.

What will this upscale shopping mall bring us? Certainly it will be a classier place for the local teens to hang out. Why hang around Beltway Plaza and the dollar stores when you can cruise in front of Lord and Taylor? And so what will happen to the retail space in Beltway Plaza? Should we expect the appearance of a white elephant soon?

Greenbelt will certainly have a plethora of theaters. There are 14 theaters at Beltway Plaza and four planned for the upscale mall. Perhaps we are deluding ourselves if we really believe that somehow the Old Greenbelt Theatre can survive the competition.

For the privilege of shopping at Neiman Marcus or Bloomingdale's we will have to endure increased traffic congestion on a daily basis. How long does it take you to get down Greenbelt Road now? Can you imagine what the interchange at I-95 and Kenilworth Avenue will be like? I personally do not shop at any of the stores proposed for the upscale mall. If I wanted to shop at them, I'd much rather travel to Bethesda or Annapolis. Putting up with the traffic on an occasional basis is much better than being forced to live with it every day.

And what about any environmental concerns pertaining to this new mall? What about the wetlands around it? Well, according to the Army Corps of Engineers a wetland can be created anywhere. Not a problem. What nature can't do on its own, the Corps of Engineers can!

Perhaps I'm just not being visionary, embracing the inevitable future of our town. After all, the developers have promised us it will be wonderful. They have said that since minority firms will do the development, it will be beneficial to other local minority businesses as well. (Would you explain just how that would work in more detail, please?) The developers have also promised jobs, jobs, jobs. If I'm not mistaken, the vast majority of jobs in retail stores are minimum wage or slightly above. I've seen a lot of 'help wanted' signs in the restaurant businesses along Greenbelt Road.

I wish I were Dorothy. I wish I could click my heels three times and go back to the home I thought I had.

There is a joke going around. It is 'Where is the green in Greenbelt? It's in the developer's pocket.'

Splendid Celebration

The Community Thanksgiving Celebration at the Mowatt Memorial United Methodist Church on November 25 was splendid.

This ecumenical service under the auspices of the Greenbelt clergy is an unique feature of the City of Greenbelt. Rabbi Jonathan Cohen of Mishkan Torah Synagogue gave the Thanksgiving message, which was thought provoking, and a reflection of God's providence.

The Combined Community Choir was outstanding under the direction of the imperturbable Jean Cook, who is the artful director of music, accompanied by the talented Muriel Balzer.

The service culminated with a standing ovation for Muriel's rendition from Beethoven. The majestic music seemed to reverberate through the sanctuary. It was a time to reflect upon the true meaning of Thanksgiving — to worship the Lord in the beauty of holiness as a community. It was an awesome experience!

Great Greenbelt Kids

We always hear the news about the young people when they are involved in a criminal offense. I think it is time we give some attention to the many wonderful young people who are doing good deeds, like the teens from Roosevelt who spent their Saturday raking yards for the disabled and seniors who are unable to do it. My yard and neighbor, Mr. Shinderman's, took quite awhile with 37 bags of leaves.

With John Taylor of GIVES, they were busy all day around Greenbelt. We want to thank all the wonderful young people and God bless them all. A special thanks to John Taylor for getting all the kids together. Greenbelt is great and you kids are the greatest!

Alverta Shanahan and Nat Shinderman

Thanks

Dear People of Greenbelt,

I want to thank all of you who have been so kind to me and my family as we have been mourning the loss of our beloved husband and father Al Nuzzo. He will be greatly missed by all.

Lorraine Nuzzo and sons, Bob and A.J.

A Season of Thanks

Another holiday season is upon us, and I am looking forward to it in a different reality than I used to. I now observe several holiday thank you rituals. First, having had a successful liver transplant five and a half years ago, I am very thankful to be alive to enjoy another holiday season. At Thanksgiving I offered thanks for the many blessings of my life and for the unique opportunity God has given me to have a new life.

Then in December I will attend the Johns Hopkins Hospital's Holiday Party for transplant patients. It is a festive, life-affirming celebration attended by both pre- and post-transplant patients. There I will see many transplant survivors of all ages, and we will congratulate ourselves on our health and well-being. There will also be patients waiting for transplants, to whom we will offer encouragement and support by our very presence. At this party I will hand a personal holiday thank you card to a transplant nurse to be delivered to my anonymous donor family. I always assure them that I take good care of myself as I treasure the gift of life I received from their loved one. Each year I hope that hearing from me will bring them comfort and joy.

Written words will never be adequate to express my feelings about the generous gift of life they offered me through organ donation. Along with my heartfelt gratitude I hope that the many patients waiting for transplants will have the same opportunity to someday thank a donor family.

The Old Curmudgeon

"Greenbelt's Festival of Lights keeps getting brighter every year ....!"

I wish more people would consider becoming organ donors. Think about how precious and unpredictable life is. The more potential organ donors there are, the more likely people's lives will be saved should the need for a transplant arise. Don't assume that this will never happen to you or your loved ones. Please, think ahead, become an organ donor, and share this important decision with your family.

For more information about organ donation call the Transplant

Resource Center of Maryland, Inc. at 800-641-4376 or the Transplant Recipients International Organization, Inc. at 202-293-0980. They will be happy to answer questions and describe the simple procedure for organ donation.

In Greenbelt Mr. Grennon was very active in the Senior Softball League. He was a member of St. Hugh's Catholic Church and American Legion Post 136. He took part in activities in the Recreation Center.

He is survived by a son William J. Grennon, Jr., Beltsville; daughters Carol M. Hall, Kensington, and Catherine R. Kennedy, Bowie; sisters Catherine Poole and Dorothy Kirby; and five grandchildren. His wife Hazel died in 1989.

A Mass of Christian Burial was held at St. Hugh's Church. Interment was at Ft. Lincoln Cemetery. Arrangements were made by Borgwardt Funeral Home.

Tis the Season

Youngest Vendor Makes a Sale

by Angie Noyes for Greenbelt Nursery School & Kindergarten

Ready I stood, seasoned shopper, my wallet snapped, purse zipped, resolve strong. After spending more than I should have already, I was unwilling to fall for even the most skillful sales pitch. Then I came to 11-year-old Lauren Schreiber's KidPin table at the Annual Greenbelt Nursery School and Kindergarten's Holiday Shopping Party this past November.

Lauren, the event's youngest vendor, was perched on a folding chair behind her table of lapel pins. "They're great presents," she offered. "They're for a really good cause, too." Her voice matched her earnest look. Lauren had taken on the job of selling KidPins as a fund raiser for both her alma mater nursery school and for ACY, Advocates for Children and Youth.

The unique, handmade pins came with cards, which Lauren assembled, giving a brief description of a certain child in Maryland who has suffered from serious health problems, domestic violence, or abuse. ACY speaks for the needs of these children in the legislature, throughout Maryland communities, and in the media.

I just couldn't walk past this table. I obligingly looked over the seven rows of pins, about 15 across: there were little girls made of polymer clay in cute skirts and colorful shirts, small boys in bright play clothes, active babies in adorable outfits. My wallet was still snapped, but these pins were beckoning, and Lauren saw I was vulnerable.

"They're all different except these two," she said. Lauren enthusiastically pointed to pins with flashy shoes, the stylish clothes of another, the hairdo of one on the top row.

I bought two. My only delay was in deciding which ones to leave for other shoppers. Lauren grinned.

For more information on Advocates for Children and Youth, phone 410-547-9200, or visit their web page at: <http://www.acy.org>. Look for KidPins again next year at GNS&K's Annual Holiday Shopping Party in late October or early November.

Give to Toy Drive

Greenbriar and Glen Oaks residents, in conjunction with the Lions Club, are sponsoring a toy drive this year from now to December 18. Toys will be distributed to children throughout Greenbelt, the county and to children who are hospitalized. Residents can bring new or used toys to the Game Room in the Community Building. For more information, please call Tina Murphy at 301-441-1096.

Tips for Buying Toys

Shopping for toys and games this holiday season can be an enjoyable, nostalgic experience, as shoppers recall the toys they enjoyed as children. Stepping into today's toy stores, however, can be an overwhelming experience because they are chock-full of far too many products making a claim on one's attention. The experience can be frustrating if the buyer is trying to find items that will hold a child's attention, and at the same time, provide a positive learning experience.

In looking for a successful toy or game, something that will add to a child's growth and development, shoppers may want to consider the following questions, adapted from guidelines developed by the National Association for the Education of Young Children:

1. Is the toy appropriate and safe for the age of the child?
2. Will the child be interested enough to play with it over and over again for several minutes, or even an hour?
3. Is it constructed well? Will it hold up to lots of use?

4. Is the child's power and imagination required to operate the toy?

5. Will the child feel successful when using this toy? Does it challenge the child's abilities just enough?

6. Can the toy grow with the child? Will it still be appealing in a year? For several years?

7. Can the child use the toy in different ways? Can it be used creatively?

8. Will it help the child learn about other people, nature, how things work?

When buying toys for young children, safety should be the greatest concern. Safe toys for young children are well-made, with no splinters or parts that will pinch; painted with non-toxic, lead-free paint; shatter-proof; easily cleaned; not electric or battery-operated; and free of button eyes or small parts that can come off.

Children learn through play and they need a variety of toys that challenge them to develop their bodies and minds.

John G. Richardson

Richardson Honored By Air Traffic Assn.

John G. Richardson, a resident of Greenbelt and 36-year veteran of the air traffic control community, has been honored with the Clifford Burton Medalion Award for lifetime achievement by the Air Traffic Control Association. The award was presented on Tuesday, November 3, during ATCA's 43rd annual convention in Atlantic City.

Richardson started as a controller in 1953 and completed his federal service in 1989 as manager of the agency's Central Flow Control Facility in Washington, DC. He currently is senior consulting engineer for air traffic control programs with Computer Sciences Corporation (CSC) in Rockville.

At the ceremony Richardson was cited for his contributions in developing the concepts and design of the David J. Hurley Air Traffic Control System Command Center in Herndon, VA, now considered the operations cornerstone of the National Airspace System.

In his present position, Richardson leads the CSC software development and design group responsible for traffic flow management and automated sequencing systems. He is project manager of CSC's Departure Spacing Program (DSP), which was prototyped and field-tested at Los Angeles-based airports and currently is being installed and implemented by the FAA in the New York City and Philadelphia areas. DSP provided visual display of current/future predicted flights, identifying each flight with an appropriate FAA flight plan and control information.

The Richardsons have three sons, two of whom are air traffic controllers.

representatives in October and is continuing to hire. In addition, Jones' has hired a consultant to look at the entire system to see what must be done to improve service. She admitted that the local operations is "light years away" from meeting their own service standard of answering 90 percent of calls within 30 seconds. Given the current level of problems, she would not venture an estimate of when response times would be back to acceptable levels. The company also has 23 fewer technicians than it needs, she said, so that when callers do get through they may still face lengthy waits for service.

Afflerbach said that the problem goes beyond the number of customer service representatives. Typically, a cable company should expect 10 percent of its subscribers to call its service line during a month. Bailey noted that during September and October the company received more calls than it has subscribers. Both Bailey and Afflerbach concluded that the long-term solution to the customer service problems is to improve the underlying infrastructure of the system. Bailey said that the system problems are "absolutely not" a sign that Jones' is getting lax as it prepares to sell the system. She also explained that the company is not being sold, but that Comcast is seeking to purchase the shares previously owned by Bell Canada, plus the chairman's super voting shares, which would give it control of the company.

MOU

Palau said that the terms outlined in the memorandum of understanding seek to address the problems raised by the speakers at the hearing. The company will be required to upgrade the system within three years of the franchise renewal, extend the use of fiber optic cable, and implement system status monitoring to quickly identify outages and problem areas. Customers are to be automatically credited for a full day's charges if the system is out for more than six hours (pro-rated credits are to be given for shorter outages).

The agreement will also provide customer service standards, including response to telephone calls, with monetary penalties for noncompliance. The amounts of such penalties have not yet been established, although Palau said that they would increase daily.

The system will remain "dual cable" with A and B tracks. This setup is not compatible with cable-ready televisions and VCRs or with many universal remotes. Bailey noted that many stores (as well as Jones) sell remotes that will switch between the A and B tracks. Afflerbach said that local jurisdictions do not have the authority under FCC regulations to control the type of system provided. In addition, it would be necessary to reduce the number of channels offered if the system were converted to single cable. (Councilmember Thomas White did not find this argument compelling describing many of the channels on the basic service (the unscrambled B channels) as "junk.")

New services will also be offered, including a countywide Institutional Network and cable modem service for Internet access. Bailey noted that "We've got to do better by you if we want to sell you additional services."

CHARRETTE

which specializes in environmental matters, has been engaged to lead this study for Metroland, Reed said. They will be working closely with the Maryland Department of Natural Resources, the U.S. Army Corps of Engineers, and the Maryland Department of the Environment to evaluate these aspects of the property and accommodate future development to them.

Design Concept

Ault's presentation emphasized the mixed use development his planning team was trying to put together. On the preliminary map he showed what was expected to be "a very animated streetscape." Most of it south of the major department stores would be pedestrian space, he said. With nearby parking structures, most cars would be off the streets. "Cars would be second; people, first," he said. Currently the planning team was looking at a "riverine parkway" through the Smith tract, which is shown on the Metroland design as a series of ponds and possible lake. But he acknowledged that stormwater management issues and maybe wetlands reclamations, requiring further study, might alter these options.

At the north end, on the present Metro parking lot, the plan envisions as many as four upscale retail stores and a hotel. Companies of this quality, mandated in CB 35, typically invest as much as $20 million in architectural and site planning, Reed said, answering a question about the possible architectural design for Greenbelt Station. (CB 35, passed by the Prince George's County Council in May, will enable the commercial/residential development of the property without resort to a rezoning amendment.)

The anchor department store company would insist on design guidelines, Reed said. "They will make a very serious study." He appraised the site as "fantastic" for retail opportunities.

Ault praised its promise as a model for smart growth, the Maryland initiative that encourages and manages urban growth where transit facilities are already in place. Ault praised the State of Maryland in this regard as a national leader.

Charrette Resolution

Thirty-seven persons attended the final charrette. Of these 14 were Sector Planning Group members and 10 professional planners and municipal representatives. Others were members of the public.

They endorsed the Preferred Concept previously developed following one major, and several minor, revisions. At Greenbelt's urging, all retail components from the so-called node at Springhill Drive and Cherrywood Lane, seen as a secondary focal point stimulating pedestrian movement to the Metro site, would be eliminated.

Other elements of the preferred concept include: 1) passive recreational uses, such as interpretive wildlife overlooks and hiker-biker trails within the environmentally sensitive area, and wetlands mitigation within the Indian Creek watershed; 2) Beltway access; 3) mixed-use development, including residential, retail, office, hotel, public facilities and open space; 4) a staged redevelopment of Springhill Lake; 5) pedestrian linkage between Springhill Lake and Beltway Plaza; 6) completion of the proposed expansion of Capital Office Park west and south of the Federal Courthouse; 7) relocation of school bus parking to make way for possible recreational uses of the bus lot; 8) hiker-biker trails

City Honors Volunteers Both Past and Present

by Al Geiger

Members of the many and various Greenbelt Advisory boards and committees were treated to a buffet supper on Sunday evening, November 22, at the Community Center. The affair, catered by Jo Sherill and sponsored by the city, was to honor all volunteers, past and present, who have served on official city boards and committees.

Mayor Judith Davis, assisted by the rest of the city council, awarded thirty-two service pins to people presently serving on boards and committees. Twenty people received five-year pins; seven received 10-year pins; three received 15-year pins. Hugh Jascourt received a 20-year pin and Joe Wilkinson received a 25-year pin.

Former volunteers who retired within the last year received a certificate suitable for framing. Retired volunteers (14) having served five to ten years received a watch with the Greenbelt logo on the face. Those having served 10 to 20 years (12) received an engraved free-standing plaque. And those having served more than 20 years (6) received a miniature Mother and Child statue.

Deceased volunteers Ben Rosenzweig, Al Herling, Dial Silvers, Rev. Kenneth Buker and Tony Pisano will each have a tree planted in the city in their memory.

linking the core area with the USDA headquarters, Lake Artemesia, and the Hollywood community; and increased transit mobility options at the Metro station; 9) an internal road, around 800 feet east of the railroad, connecting WMATA and Greenbelt Road; 10) revitalization of the Greenbelt Road corridor, including four "gateways" and attractive signage; 11) revitalization of the commercial district in Hollywood; 12) eventual replacement of the industrial zone west of the railway in Branchville with residential development; and 13) infill with residential development of an undeveloped property in Hollywood.

"Wizard" Still Popular, More Festivals Planned

by Altoria Bell Ross

The owner of the Old Greenbelt Theater had much to be grateful for this Thanksgiving. Movie goers took enough time out from their turkey dinners to see "The Wizard of Oz" this past week.

"That was pretty good," said Paul Sanchez of the movie's attendance in its fourth week. He said the turnout was 20 percent above that of the newer movie, "Practical Magic" that also shared the theater. He said he hoped the classic that will continue to show during this week had attracted new movie goers who would come back. "Time will tell."

One new customer may very well. Martha Loutsch who had moved from Minnesota to Greenbelt a week ago enjoyed seeing the movie on Friday, November 27, so did her nine-year-old daughter, Annie.

"It was good because it was on a big screen," she said. Her four-year-old sister Mary liked the movie for another reason, "The witch," she said. Loutsch said because of her family's positive experience, she had signed up with Friends of the Greenbelt Theater. She is not alone. More than 300 people are on the mailing list, and close to 50 have joined, said Sarah Schaffer, the spokeswoman for the Save the Greenbelt Theater campaign and Greenbelt recreation coordinator. Todd Johnson of Greenbelt said not only had his wife, Lil, joined the group, but had seen the movie twice with their daughters. His family encouraged him and his brother-in-law Joe Levy of Chicago to see it.

String Quartet Holds An Open Rehearsal

The Guarneri String Quartet will hold an open rehearsal on Monday, December 7 at 7 p.m. in the Ulrich Recital Hall of the Tawes Fine Arts Building. They will be reading through Quintet for Trumpet and Strings (1990), by Eric Ewazen, with Chris Gekker on trumpet. They will also rehearse Anton Dvorak's Terzetto for Two Violins and Viola in C Major, Op. 74. Admission is free and the public is invited to attend. For additional information call 301-405-1150 or e-mail to concerts@deans.umd.edu.

Winter Jazz Showcase At National Archives

The University of Maryland School of Music will present the Annual Winter Jazz Showcase on Monday, December 7 at 7:30 p.m. at the National Archives and Records Administration at College Park. Big Band music from the swing era to the most contemporary will be performed, including works by Hancock, Davis, Coltrane and others. Admission is free; no tickets are required. For directions and information call 301-405-1150.

"It's great. It's quality," Johnson said. "It's good to have the color restored."

Incentives Offered

To keep the momentum going, Sanchez is offering his customers an incentive to return. Last week, the theater began giving out frequent movie coupons. The patron presents the coupon at each visit and after the fifth movie, he gets in free.

More special events are tentatively being scheduled for this month's "Classic Movie Week." On Friday, December 18, members of the Greenbelt City Council, Governor Parris Glendening, and county officials have been invited to a ribbon cutting ceremony to kick off the showing of "The King and I" on December 18 and 19 and "The Sound of Music" on December 20 through 23. W. Bowman Ferguson, city senior management analyst, said these plans are still in the making that also include possible free giveaways such as concessions and CD soundtracks of the musicals.

The film festivals continue into the new year. On January 22, the theater will feature Alfred Hitchcock movies.

Favorite Russian Masters was the theme of the concert Saturday November 21 at High Point High School.

The Prince George's Philharmonic with Charles Ellis as conductor started the 8 p.m. concert with Rachmaninoff and concluded the second half with Shostakovich. Rachmaninoff's selection was the piano Concerto #2 in C minor, opus 18. Eric Conway was the pianist.

Russians have a thing about music, reflecting their long and interesting history. Words like passion and fire come to mind. Baring one's soul and giving the music emotion are the bread and butter of their music writing. Dr. Conway must have been out sick the day they taught about Russian composers because his performance could only be called uninspired, colorless, and lacking in passion — he may have hit all the notes, but it's what you do with those notes that make it interesting. I was told by another concert-goer who is familiar with the piano that he made a number of mistakes. The Philharmonic backing him up, because of the acoustics, had to ease up or they would have drowned Eric Conway's piano efforts.

The second half featured the Philharmonic and Dmitri Shostakovich's Symphony #5, opus 47. Under Charles Ellis the orchestra was able to give the #5 the attention it deserved. Reminiscent of Leonard Bernstein and the children's concerts, Ellis gave a brief history of the piece and had the orchestra play parts to show what Dmitri had in mind. The Philharmonic has a good string section and I must say it was a good job, well done.

Before the concert, County Councilwoman Audrey E. Scott received an honor from the Philharmonic by the dedication of first chair second violin in her name for her support of the arts.

French Program at Roosevelt Pulled from Consideration

by Mary Moien

School Superintendent Jerome Clark temporarily pulled from consideration the establishment of a French immersion program at a high school in the northern area of the county during the November 19 meeting of the Prince George's County Board of Education. This proposal had been announced at the October board meeting and was slated for a vote at the November meeting.

History

Rogers Heights Elementary School has, for some years, been a designated French immersion elementary school for the Magnet Program. As students finished their elementary school years there, these students were assigned to Greenbelt Middle School and a French immersion program was established there. Now these students are slated to graduate and move on to Central High School for the final level of the program. However, parents have requested that students be moved to Eleanor Roosevelt High School instead of going to Central High School which is in the central area of the county.

Meeting

At the November meeting Clark indicated that this issue may not be decided in one meeting. He proposed that the Committee of 100 review the plan and respond. He is interested in maintaining diversity but commented that citizens must be heard also. School board member Kenneth Johnson opined that it may be necessary to consult with the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People (NAACP) on changes in magnet programs. Clark responded that the NAACP had been requested in general to participate and provide input within the framework of the Committee of 100 and had declined to do so.

Greenbelt school board member Suzanne Plogman described the participation drop off from middle school to high school for the program at Central. Another member, Doyle Niemann, disputed this indicating that about 50 percent of the students who were slated to go to the French immersion program at Central did go there, with approximately 25 percent going to Roosevelt, presumably for the science and technology program instead of staying in the French immersion program.

School board chairman, Alvin Thornton, effectively brought the issue to a close by arguing that Clark had brought no data to support the need for a northern area program, only the concerns of parents. Among other issues, he questioned how much staff and funds would be needed to establish another program. At this stage, Clark agreed to pull his recommendation from consideration at the present time. Plogman then asked him not to pull the recommendation as she felt that there were enough votes to pass it with a possible amendment, but the issue remained pulled.

Student Writers Win For their Books

by Carolyn Price

The Write-A-Book Festival, an annual event in Prince George's County schools, held an awards ceremony for the winners on November 5 at Eleanor Roosevelt High School.

Among the winners from 39 county elementary, middle and high schools were three students from Greenbelt Middle School and two from Eleanor Roosevelt High School.

From Greenbelt Middle School, Honorable Mention in the Picture Story Book category went to 7th grader Alhaji A. Sall for "The New Boy," a picture story book.

Jonathan Flores, 7th grade, received an Honorable Mention for his book "My Brother's Not from this Planet," in the Illustrated Fiction category.

Two students, Katie Shin and Jiyeun Kwon, co-authored a book of poetry titled "Adventures" and received a third place win.

Eleanor Roosevelt High School student Solmaz Zabiheian, grade 12, won first place for her picture story book, "My Special New Year" and 12th grader Charline Lee won third place for her picture story book, "Korean New Year."

The students all received medals and engraved plaques.

The Write-A-Book Festival is sponsored by the county Office of Library Media Services and the Educational Media Association of Prince George's County. There were a total of 1,050 entries.

ACE Seeks More Book Donations to Schools

The Greenbelt Advisory Committee on Education (ACE) sponsors two programs for Greenbelt citizens that support the local schools — the Buy-A-Book program and the ACE scholarship program. People looking for ways to support their local schools or honor a special teacher during the holiday season may wish to participate in these programs.

Through the Buy-A-Book program, people can add to the educational resources at the schools Greenbelt children attend as their neighborhood school by purchasing books for the schools' libraries. ACE has collected a wish list from the schools, which is available at Greenbelt's two bookstores — Bookland in Beltway Plaza and Crown Books at Greenway Center. If donors wish to honor a special student or person, bookplates are available at the schools or from ACE committee members.

In 1998, ACE offered its first two scholarships to the students receiving ACE awards from Eleanor Roosevelt High School. The $500 scholarships were for the students' continuing education. ACE plans to continue the scholarship program and is seeking donations from Greenbelt citizens, community leaders and businesses. Donations may be sent to ACE at the City of Greenbelt offices, 25 Crescent Road, Greenbelt, MD 20770.

City Notes

Asphalt cracks were sealed in Greenbelt East. Graffiti was removed from the Spellman Overpass. "No parking" signs were fabricated and replaced in various areas. Crosswalk signs were also fabricated and replaced on Crescent Road and Breezewood Drive. Leaves were vacuumed in Lakewood and around the city. Leaf collections were posted for next week. The staff has been decorating the Community Center for the holiday season. A clogged waterline in front of the Co-op parking lot that had accumulated mud has been repaired.

Autumn, winter, spring were key words for Greenbelt Public Works activities during the week ending November 13. Autumn work consisted of leaf removal in the Boxwood Village subdivision and cleaning the Greenbelt War Memorial grounds in preparation for the Veteran's Day Services. Winter work consisted of preparing snow removal route maps for the plow crews and repairing snow removal equipment. To have the flowers that bloom in the spring, the Horticulture Crew planted 3,200 tulip bulbs and 800 pansies in the median beds of Southway and prepared the entrance beds at Greenbriar for planting 300 tulips and 600 pansies.

In other work, the Parks Crew and Special Details spread and compacted gravel dust applied to the Lake Park path in order to create a smoother surface. Signs and poles removed during construction on Northway and Hillside were replaced.

The Parks Crew continued construction of new picnic tables and the batting cage on Braden Field.

Special Operations Crew installed a new sign at the Lakecrest Drive tennis courts and cleaned graffiti from a sidewalk on Ridge Road.

By using Bill Phelan's canoe, the Horticultural Crew were able to clean up debris that had been thrown in the lake. They also replaced the plantings at Roosevelt Center damaged by vandalism.

Assault

7-11 store in the 6900 block of Goodluck Road, Nov. 21, 9:05 a.m., a man entered the store, switched the price tags of two items, placing the less expensive tag on a bag of dog food, and then proceeded to the cash register. The cashier told the person that he had seen him switch the tags and would charge him the full amount. The man then spat on the cashier, threw a cigarette lighter display at him, and threatened to shoot him. The man went to his vehicle and retrieved a handgun. Meanwhile,

28 Crescent Road, Nov. 23, 7:39 p.m., a woman was walking alone near the playground, looking for an item she had forgotten earlier. A young man approached her from behind, grabbed her shoulder, and spun her around to face him. He held one hand under his jacket and grabbed the victim's purse. The victim thought she saw a knife in the man's hand partially concealed inside the jacket. He ran toward Southway, at which time the victim yelled to him to take her wallet but not her purse. He stopped and dumped the purse out, taking the wallet and continuing on his way. He took a wallet which contained only identification cards. The wallet was later recovered on the sidewalk near the 11 court of Ridge Road. The robber got nothing of value in the incident and the victim was not harmed. The suspect is described as a black male 16 to 18 years of age, 5'10", and 140 lbs., with black hair and wearing a blue hooded sweatshirt and light-colored pants.

He looked and saw a youth whom he did not know running toward him. The youth punched the victim on the right side of his face, causing him to become disoriented. Three other juveniles then joined the first in the assault. The victim stated that he had seen the suspects before but did not know them. ## Council Sets Referendum For Parkside Annexation

At its November 23 meeting, the Greenbelt City Council set an early date for the annexation referendum, hired consultants to help study the Greenbelt Station development plans and questioned why the renovation of Greenbelt Middle School has been set back.

On a 4-1 vote with Councilmember Alan Turnbull opposed, council set March 9 as the date for the referendum on the annexation of Parkside at Greenbelt. Under state law, the earliest the election could be held would be February 5. City Manager Michael McLaughlin suggested allowing slightly more time to ensure that all legal notification requirements are met, and to minimize the chance of bad weather keeping voters away from the polls.

According to McLaughlin, the city does not have to hold a special election, and could have deferred action until the next regular election in November 1999. However, he said the City Solicitor, the City Clerk and he agreed that delaying nearly one year is neither reasonable nor fair.

Mayor Judith Davis and Councilmembers White and Putens agreed. Councilmember Rodney Roberts did not object to a March referendum, but also did not see any need to rush, and, in the end, voted for the March 9 date.

Turnbull disagreed and argued for a November vote. He said that he could not justify the cost, distraction and special attention that putting the referendum on the "fast track" would entail. Asking taxpayers to spend $5,000 on a special election "adds insult to injury," he said.

Development near Metro

Council unanimously approved contracting with Greenhorne and O'Mara, and Systems Analysis, Inc. as consultants relating to the proposed development near the Metro Station. Greenhorne and O'Mara will provide transportation planning and engineering services, while Systems Analysis will consult on environmental issues. Expenditures under these contracts may not exceed $10,000 each.

Other Actions

Sylvia Lewis, treasurer, presented a contribution to the city's emergency assistance fund from the Eleanor and Franklin Roosevelt Democratic Club.

Mayor Judith Davis presented City Treasurer Jeffrey Williams with the Certificate of Achievement for Excellence in Financial Reporting from the Government Finance Officers Association. This is the fifteenth year that the city has received this award, which is the highest recognition in financial reporting. Williams praised the employees of the finance department for their work.

As part of the consent agenda, council accepted the Advisory Committee on Education's report on the county school system's capital improvement program and directed staff to prepare a letter to the Board of Education asking for an explanation of why the renovation of Greenbelt Middle School was reduced to twenty-second in the priority list.

Also approved on the consent agenda: an agreement with P&G Theaters providing for the city to sponsor two to four film festivals at the Roosevelt Center theater between December 1998 and June 1999 for a total cost of $20,000. In return, the theater is to remain open and showing films through June, and to make some improvements to the theater. If the theater does close, however, the city will have right of first refusal to purchase the theater's equipment and furnishings.

Local Photographer Exhibits at Borders

There will be a show of exhibition photographs by Greenbelt photographer Timothy Edberg capturing the natural beauty of this vast country. The show will run through December 31 at Borders Books of Bowie, located in the Bowie Gateway Center near the intersection of highways 50 and 301. A reception for the artist will be held on Thursday, December 10, from 7:30 to 9 p.m., at which light refreshments will be served.

The images Edberg will present focus on views of nature, both grand and intimate, taken from coast to coast across the country. He hopes to share with the viewer the appreciation of the diversity of scenic beauty the nation has to offer, and to remind the viewer of the preciousness of the land.

City employees will be granted a "floating holiday" to be used between now and June 30.

The report of the Senior Citizen Advisory Committee's annual forum was referred to staff for evaluation and comment.

Aviation Museum Hosts Lecture Series

On Sunday, December 13 at 2 p.m., the College Park Aviation Museum will begin its lecture series with Tom Crouch, senior curator of the National Air and Space Museum.

Crouch, an award-winning author, will present "Why Wilbur and Orville?" After the talk participants will have an opportunity to ask questions. Refreshments will be served.

Reservations are requested. There is a fee.

OVERDENTURES

Only a few years ago it was the usual practice to remove all the teeth before inserting dentures. Now dentists often try to save sound individual teeth, no matter how few there are, and use them as supports for "overdentures." A denture is fabricated and inserted over existing teeth and the teeth are better supported and last longer.

The presence of teeth slows down or prevents the loss of bone. The sensation of biting is much closer to that with natural teeth and the overdenture feels more comfortable and more stable than chewing with conventional dentures. Occasionally the roots are used as anchors with devices that connect with the denture and improve its stability. Posts may be attached to the roots which in turn connect to the denture with spring clips or precision attachments. The result is a happy patient.

Hello Again:
Every day we deal with different questions that people have about their vehicles. One question is: What is Preventive Maintenance? The answer is: Preventive Maintenance is a Program or Schedule. On a lighter side, it is as far as you are willing to walk when your vehicle breaks down. On a serious side, 40-60% of vehicle failure can be prevented. The balance no one has control over.

Preventive maintenance schedules are intervals at which vehicles should be serviced or inspected. Items such as oil, filters, belts, and hoses should be serviced regularly at predetermined times and mileage. For example, oil, filter, and lubrication should be done every 4 months, or every 4,000 miles whichever occurs first. A four wheel brake inspection should be performed annually. Once your maintenance schedule is implemented you will see results in dollars and in your vehicle's dependability. One might think: I only drive my vehicle 5,000 miles a year so I don't have to set a scheduled maintenance program. On the contrary, when vehicles sit around rubber components become dry-rotted and fluids become stale and chemically break down. This is as much a problem as those vehicles that receive higher mileage annually.

Till next time, think preventive maintenance.

Our Neighbors

Our sympathy to William L. Shiflett and family on the death of his wife and their mother, Catherine Foster Shiflett.

Greenbelters were saddened to hear of the death of former Greenbelt resident William J. Grennon, Sr. Although he had moved out of Greenbelt, he continued to actively participate in many of its programs. He will be missed.

Julie Hottle Day has been named vice president of the Alumni Association Executive Board of Lycoming College in Williamsport, PA. Day is a cum laude graduate of the college with a degree in political science and criminal justice and is an attorney with Dixon, Smith and Stahl in Fairfax, VA.

Johnathan F. Jordan, son of Bobbie J. Jordan of Jacobs Drive, has graduated from basic military training at Lackland Air Force Base, San Antonio, TX. In addition to learning about the Air Force mission, organization and customs, airmen who complete basic training earn credit toward an associates degree through the Community College of the Air Force.

Several Greenbelt students are being featured in the 32nd annual edition of Who's Who Among American High School Students.
