

Award Winning Harry James, Recreation's Mainstay, Retires

by James Giese

Who is Harry James? No, not the band leader of old, but the one who has been a mainstay of the Greenbelt Recreation Department since 1973? You probably don't know him unless you once worked for the department, as many kids who grew up in Greenbelt have, or were involved in running an athletic league using a Greenbelt facility. Although not a quiet guy, James has worked behind the scenes for these past 28 years and plans to continue doing so until he retires at the end of December.

As Assistant Recreation Director, James plays second fiddle to Director Hank Irving and loves his work. While he says Hank is busy being the spokesperson for the department and meeting with groups, Harry is back in his office doing those nitty-gritty things that keep the department running smoothly. His windowless office, by the way, is the former Youth Center cloakroom. He shares it with two other employees.

Hank and Harry go back a long way. They first met at the University of Maryland where they shared a class together. James was ex-Navy, Irving ex-Army. James was taking courses for a bachelors degree specializing in physical education, recreation and health. Irving was specializing in education. After they got to know each other, James talked Irving into changing to recreation. What sold him, James said, was that they could get jobs working cruise ships and sail around the world. It turned out, however that neither one ever got such a job.

Field Work

James did his field work in the summer of 1971 at the Fort Stevens playground. He liked the playground and working there. A lot of high school basketball players would come there to play pickup games. James remembers that John Thompson, who was then just beginning his career at Georgetown University, would come over to scout the kids. Other coaches did, too, he said.

Irving did his field work for the Greenbelt Recreation Department when Darryl Lofgren was director. That led to other jobs

City Council and GHI Discuss Mutual Problems and Concerns

by Barbara Bonham Young

The status of possible Historic District designation and ways to share equipment, training and other resources of Greenbelt Homes, Inc. (GHI) and the City of Greenbelt were among matters of mutual interest discussed at a March 19 work session held at the GHI office. Attending were GHI president Julia Eichhorst, GHI directors and General Manager Gretchen Overdurff, along with Mayor Judith Davis, city council members and City Manager Michael McLaughlin. Davis expressed the wish to meet with GHI every year in the weeks preceding budget deliberations.

Historic District

Davis estimated that staff review and preparation of a report on the Historic District designation issue will take probably two or three more months to complete. Following this action, public hearings will be held. Eichhorst noted that, to date, the GHI board has not taken a position on the matter.

Animal Control

Consideration will be given to moving the vacant position of animal control officer from the Police Department to the office of Code Enforcement, Davis said. McLaughlin noted that while criminal law enforcement is a function of police, civil enforcement is a function of code enforcement, whose inspectors are able to provide "additional eyes and ears" with respect to problems.

Eyesores

Davis reported that cooperation is being sought from newspaper box vendors to improve the appearance of boxes. A company has been identified, she said, which is willing to provide vending boxes to the city on which the city could place its own advertising. If vendors do not cooperate in maintaining their boxes, she said the city may have to invoke a broad ordinance requiring permits and maintenance of the boxes.

Concerning disreputable-looking autos on public streets, Davis noted that Code Enforcement and the City Manager are looking into ways to handle the problem.

Grant Proposal

Davis thanked GHI for taking the initiative in submitting a proposal to New York-based Naturally Occurring Retirement Communities (NORC) and said the city will provide office space for the proposed resource manager, should the grant be funded. She said the city and GHI would hold joint work sessions on the matter at a later time. Overdurff reported the grant application had been mailed earlier in the day.

"Live Near Work"

McLaughlin reported that while the city supports the governor's "Live Near Your Work" program, which provides a stipend to workers, Greenbelt is not one of the areas so targeted. However, staff is working with the state to see if Greenbelt might be included. Criteria for inclusion may be changed by the state, he said.

Cable Upgrade

The mayor noted there will be some brief outages in connection with upgrade work on the cable system. The work will begin soon during daylight hours. Completion by late summer is expected.

Sharing Resources

GHI Director Bill Phelan discussed the possibility of the two entities sharing training, including training on playground inspections. Overdurff suggested that joint training on violence in the work place could also be undertaken. She said that GHI's basic writing course might also be appropriate for some city staff. The mayor suggested discussing training possibilities and working closely with Connie Harris, the city's Human Resources director.

Councilmember Rodney Roberts applauded the concept of sharing, but cautioned that city See CITY COUNCIL, page 5

Post Grants Are Awarded To Greenbelt Elementary

by Mary Moien

The Washington Post has awarded two "Grants in the Arts" to Greenbelt Elementary School. The Post instituted the grants program "to recognize classroom innovation and provide funds for arts education activities that enrich the standard curriculum, provide exposure to the visual and performing arts for all students, and encourage creativity and the development of fundamental skills."

The two educators who obtained the grants were fifth grade teacher Beth Novick and third grade teacher Thomas Lenhart. The grants, $500 each, are supplemented by donations from the Mobil "Fuel for School Program." The students will also have the opportunity to tour The Post.

Novick indicated that the grants were developed under the guidance of Barbara Simon, director, Greenbelt Association for the Visual Arts, who "reached out and took the initiative" in this project. Novick stated that these grant proposals could now be used as models for future projects.

Geo," who teaches cartooning to students during weekly visits. The students learn how to draw cartoons and to produce a trading card with their own creations on the front. On the reverse, they develop written information on the cartoon character, which helps improve language skills.

Novick commented that the cartoon classes have developed from an arts program into a language arts program. Some of these students show "unbelievable creativity," she enthused.

Third Grade Grant

Third grade teacher, Lenhart, was promoted this year. Last school year he taught the second grade TAG (talented and gifted) class and liked them so much he was promoted with them. This year he teaches most of the same children in the third grade. Lenhart has only been teaching a few years as teaching is his second career.

The third grade grant involves pottery making. Students will be exploring Native American pottery and will actually make pottery in the class. Barbara Simon is also involved in this project and earlier pottery classes at Greenbelt Elementary through the Fine Arts in the Classroom program.

Speeding, Unpaid Fees Worry Civic Associations

by Judith Ransom Bell

Mayor Judith Davis opened the March 13 worksession of the Greenbelt City Council by welcoming all Greenbelt civic associations to share "burning issues" concerning their communities, giving the council a chance to find out "what we need to do." Boxwood; Greenbriar Condominiums Phases I, II, and III; the Greenbriar Community Association; Greenbrook Estates; Greenspring II; Woodland Hills; the Greenbelt East Advisory Committee; and Windsor Green were represented at the meeting.

The issues raised included crime and police patrolling, drugs, problems with HUD (U.S. Department of Housing and Urban Development) units, student traffic in buildings, pedestrians and traffic, delayed road repairs and problems with standing water, and what to do about speeding in some communities.

Angeline Butler, Greenbriar Phase III president, raised the issue that some HUD units repeatedly go through a cycle of purchase-default-bankruptcy. A unit is purchased and HUD pays a year's worth of condo fees. When the year is up, the owner frequently is not able to take over the fees. The association then loses out on condo fees (often tens of thousands of dollars) and the rest of the community has to make up for it. Response from HUD was poor until the city stepped in, at which time phone calls were returned.

Davis replied that other cities have bought units from HUD. Cheverly, for example, took HUD to court. Councilmember Alan Turnbull commented that "it seems that HUD isn't doing anyone any favors, giving them a false sense of what they can afford and then they get zinged and end up losing a home. Maybe the condo board and the city, and possibly Congressman Steny Hoyer's office could convince HUD to look at the big picture and whether they're doing anybody a favor and see if they have the discretion to change the structure."

Councilmember Edward Putens mentioned that his community, Greenbrook Estates, has 109 units and 11 or 12 of the units at one point were always late or behind. One of the measures that was taken was that if the fee wasn't paid in 45 days the trash service was stopped, which worked in all but four of

ACE Makes an Ace Of a Contribution

When you think of an ace, you think of the best, the highest card in the deck or a top pilot. When Greenbelters think of ACE, they should be referring to the Advisory Committee on Education. ACE, an advisory committee to the Greenbelt City Council, was formed in the spring of 1995 and ever since has been under the able leadership of Leta Mach. The committee has brought to council and to all of us an awareness of the importance of education to the very existence of the city.

The Advisory Committee on Education has accomplished much in just a few years. It established ACE awards to honor both students and school staff. When the city council presents these annual awards, the pride of each school is evidenced by standing-room only crowds of cheering students, parents, and co-workers.

ACE initiated annual meetings with school principals, with PTA presidents, and with Greenbelt's school board representative. The committee invited Dr. Iris T. Metts, then newly appointed Prince George's County Schools Superintendent, to address the community in an open meeting. This meeting resulted in Dr. Metts' becoming very aware of the interest, knowledge, and power of Greenbelt citizens.

This past year ACE organized a voluntary program to encourage elementary students to read books and write brief reports. A recent reception for participants highlighted their efforts.

Now the committee turns its attention to ways the city and community of Greenbelt can better support the local schools. It has begun this work by interviewing school staff and PTA representatives on what assistance the city could provide to improve the educational opportunities at each school. A completed report will be forwarded to the city council later this year.

We commend ACE on all of its achievements and support its continuing activities to improve the life of all Greenbelt residents — but our students most of all.

Greenbelt CARES

The week of March 12, Robert Freeman, Ph.D. visited with the CARES Family Clinic staff to discuss his views on the use of play with children in therapy. Dr. Freeman, who retired last spring, ran the Parent-Child Evaluation Service at the University of Maryland for over 30 years.

Wendy Wexler has completed interviews of students at Eleanor Roosevelt High School. Wexler began the new teen discussion group Wednesday, March 21. It will run for eight weeks and cover topics including peer pressure, anger management, substance abuse, and school performance.

Teresa Smithson interviewed seventh and eighth grade students at Greenbelt Middle School for two student discussion groups at the school. The eighth grade group held its first session on March 15. Smithson is assisted by Greenbelt Middle School guidance counselors Wayne Davis and Devonne Johnson.

Judye Hering met with Sue Briggs and Nela Singleton, directors of the CIVICUS Program at the University of Maryland, to discuss collaborative efforts. CIVICUS, for University of Maryland students, is a community service learning program with a humanistic learning approach. Many of the CIVICUS students are enrolled as volunteer tutors for CARES.

Sampling Day Offered At Co-op Food Store

The Greenbelt Consumer Co-operative will host a "Sampling Day" presented by The Basic Feast, a local catering company and supplier of organic and biodynamic foods. Selections from the company's cupboards will be offered at the store on Wednesday, March 28, from 4 to 7 p.m. and Saturday, March 31, from 11 a.m. to 3 p.m.

The tasting will focus on items available from both the bakery and Grab n' Go selections sold by the Co-op as well as the special catering menu offered by the company. Representatives from The Basic Feast will be able to explain the thinking behind biodynamic foods and the health benefits of this nutritional approach.

According to store manager Bob Davis, there has been a steady increase in customer demand for natural and organic products. The Basic Feast presents a new product line as it offers biodynamic foods free of hormones, irradiation or artificial ingredients. "This represents yet another way for us to serve our members," said Davis.

OBITUARY

Hyman Gerson

Former long-time Greenbelter Hyman (Hy) Gerson, 86, died Tuesday, March 6, 2001.

Mr. Gerson grew up in the Bronx, New York. While in high school he had a photo booth on Coney Island, where he learned to color photographs. At that time photos were only black and white.

In 1934 he joined the Civilian Conservation Corps (CCC) and was sent to Tennessee.

Later he became a dental lab technician and learned to make dentures.

He came to Washington, D.C. to work in the U.S. Department of Commerce. From 1945 to 1952 he served in the United States Navy.

Mr. Gerson received an apprenticeship with the U.S. Treasury Department with the Bureau of Engraving and Printing, from which he retired in 1976 as a journeyman electrician. For two years after his retirement he worked for the Greenbelt Police Department as animal warden.

Mr. Gerson and his late wife, Estelle (Esther), moved to Greenbelt in the late 1930s, living first in the apartments across from Center School. In 1944 they moved to 45-D Ridge Road, where they lived until October 1998. They then moved to an assisted living residence near their son in Gaithersburg.

In Greenbelt Mr. Gerson was a member of Mishkan Torah synagogue. In 1952, when the synagogue was built by members, he did the electrical work. He was also a member of the Masons.

Former neighbors describe Mr. Gerson as a warm, gentle and caring person. When his son-in-law, a veterinarian, needed someone to feed and care for a small animal, Mr. Gerson would take on that task.

Mr. Gerson is survived by his son, Sanders Gerson, and his wife, Lorraine; daughter, Lois Cohen, and her husband, Stanley; grandchildren, Debbie, Laurie, Amy, Todd and Jay; and four great-grandchildren.

Graveside services were held on March 9 at King David Memorial Gardens, Falls Church, Va.

Memorial contributions may be sent to the Alzheimer's Association.

Celtic Program Offered Stompin' Good Time at the Arts Center

by Barbara Likowski

When we saw that there were only a few members of MacTallah (Echo) present for the Celtic program at the Greenbelt Arts Center on Saturday, March 17, we were disappointed. We had heard this group, who sing in the Gaelic, many times and enjoyed listening to their music and to their several early Scottish musical instruments. But we were pleasantly surprised at the magnificent program these few provided.

Joan Weiss, their leader, as usual explained what the songs were about and how they fit into the environment of early Scotland. The singers were accompanied by Greenbelters John Ward on the fiddle and Trix Whitehall on the bodhran (a Celtic drum). Trix, a member of MacTallah, also sang with the group.

We could picture the workers singing as they pounded the wool they worked on. The audience clapped and stamped along with them.

It was amusing to listen to "mouth music." This was used to dance to at a time when the bagpipes were outlawed and the fiddle called an "instrument of the devil."

The star of that part of the program was Harry Mackenzie from Baltimore, who was the winner of the men's solo at the U.S. Gaelic Mod held at the Ligonier, Pa. Scottish games. Mackenzie sang without accompaniment. Standing in his kilt before the mike, he first explained what his songs were about. His presence was such that the audience was very quiet. He sang in what sounded like faultless Gaelic, beautiful in tone. Then very quietly said "thank you" in the Gaelic.

Later he told us that he would like to compete in Scotland even though he could not compete for the grand prize because he was not fluent in Gaelic. That surprised most of us who did not have the Gaelic because he sounded so fluent.

Another member of the Mackenzie family, 8-year-old Anlara Mackenzie pleased the audience by dancing an Irish jig and then a Scottish dance. We learned she also competed in Scottish games, including the local games in Alexandria in July.

Homespun Ceilidh Band

Featured in the second part of the program was the Home-spun Ceilidh Band led by John Ward who also announced the pieces. Although, again, several of their members were absent, it did not deter the group from playing rollicking, toe tapping reels, jigs and strathspeys.

Additionally there were dances and songs. A member of the band, Jennifer Silverman, did Irish step dancing. She seemed to float across the area, on stage and off. Even though we'd seen her before, we couldn't take our eyes off her as she glided along, sometimes playing the bodhran as she danced. One time she graciously invited Anlara Mackenzie to dance along with her.

Trix was the soloist for this group and she gave it her all. Her sweet voice came over clearly. We particularly enjoyed her "Mrs. Murphy's Band," a song she wrote based on things that had actually happened to the band, a la Murphy's law. It ended with a very discordant note from the band which made the audience laugh.

It was all done in fun — the players seeming to enjoy themselves as much as the audience did. Some jumped up and down as they played. The audience became part of it all, clapping, stamping, sometimes yelling. It really was a ceilidh and we enjoyed it together.

(Later we learned where our missing entertainers had gone. There was a Gaelic infusion in Richmond that weekend.)

Mighty Mites Topic Of Garden Club Talk

For the Wednesday, March 28 meeting of the Beltsville Garden Club, Dr. Ron Ochoa, an acarologist with the USDA/ARS/Systematic Entomology Laboratory, and an internationally recognized authority on mites, will review the various species of mites that are plant pests and those that can be used as biological control agents.

An important aspect in controlling or utilizing mites is their proper identification, which because of their size can prove challenging. Consequently, acarologists, scientists who specialize in the study of mites, play an important role in plant protection.

The Beltsville Garden Club meets at 7:30 p.m. at the Duckworth School at 11201 Evans Trail in Beltsville. (Evans Trail is the first street to the left, at the blinking yellow light, west of Interstate 95, off Powder Mill Road.) Refreshments and door prizes will follow the meeting. Admission is free and the public is invited. For more information, call 301-384-2415.

staff is already "stretched to the limit." GHI will provide the city with a list of its equipment for consideration with respect to sharing.

Possible additional sharing with homeowner associations was discussed. Davis noted that Springhill Lake has equipment and training resources which might be considered as well. Sharing should not be limited to GHI and the City of Greenbelt, she said.

Overdurff noted that GHI needs quickly to get rid of a supply of four-drawer file cabinets. Those interested in the free equipment should contact Joan Krob immediately at GHI, 301-474-4161, extension 138.

Spellman Overpass

Noting that some residents want to close the Spellman Overpass over the Baltimore-Washington Parkway, GHI Director Susan Ready spoke in favor of keeping it open. Davis reported that possible placement of a video camera at the overpass location will be discussed at an upcoming budget work session. Discussion then ensued about placement of cameras, including the possibility of installing one at Buddy Attick Lake Park. Roberts opposed such an installation, saying cameras should only be placed where there is a crime problem. Phelan raised the question of employing someone to monitor the city's cameras.

Entryways

The mayor said block grant funds will be used for a study of needed entryway improvements. She noted that the map at the Southway entrance to Greenbelt does not include either Greenbelt East or Greenbelt West. The matter of excessive signage at some locations was also discussed, with GHI Director Betty Deitch commenting on the poor appearance of the Crescent Road entryway at Kenilworth Avenue.

the cases. With the four they got tougher, passing a resolution allowing for fines of $2 per day, went to court and won, and everybody paid up.

After further discussion, City Manager Michael McLaughlin suggested that representatives of Phase III could describe the situation in a letter addressed to the council and ask for a follow-up. Butler commented that she will now go back to management and say that this is an issue which can be addressed with the city.

Several representatives of the associations complimented the city and the police on services.

Mark Davis reported that the residents of Woodland Hills "love" the speed humps that were installed and would like to see similar traffic calming devices in other parts of the city.

Robert Thomas commented on concerns about speed in Greenbrook Estates. E. Scott Frison strongly expressed a need in Greenspring II for speed humps. Davis advised Frison to write a letter to the Planning Department describing the problem and asking for a survey of the development. After a plan is developed, it would be presented to the community for approval.

You will receive your donation package in the mail during the month of April. You may choose to either mail your donation back to us or bring it to the station and hand it to one of our volunteers. We are located at 125 Crescent Rd., Greenbelt, MD. If you should misplace your donation package you can still mail us your contribution. Our mailing address is Greenbelt Volunteer Fire Dept., P.O. Box #35, Greenbelt, Md 20768.

As in the past I would like to emphasize strongly that you do not accept any solicitations over the telephone from persons identifying themselves as members or representatives of the Greenbelt Volunteer Fire Department and Rescue Squad, Inc. For this annual general fund drive during the month of April, we only ask for donations through the mail.

We have received some questions from concerned citizens as to some of our other scheduled fund-raisers. Our Ladies Auxiliary conducts a picture/portrait drive in the fall. In addition to this fund-raising effort, we conduct what we call our annual boot drive in the month of December. We station our members at various intersections collecting donations.

Again, may I thank you for your very important past and continued support during our upcoming general fund drive.

Harry James

in Greenbelt. At that time, there were only two full-time professional recreation employees in the department and Irving became one of them.

James came to work as a non-classified full-time employee in February 1973. When Lofgren resigned to accept a position with the Montgomery County Recreation Department, Irving became acting director and James acting assistant. After Irving was appointed Recreation Director, James became a regular employee of the city in March 1974 as Assistant Recreation Director.

Then & Now

Since that time, the department has grown. There are now 13 other professional employees besides Irving and James. Then the city had as recreation facilities the Youth Center, Braden Field, McDonald Field, the outdoor swimming pool, Buddy Attick Park and some playgrounds. To that list the city has added the Springhill Lake Recreation Center, Schrom Hills Park, the Aquatic and Fitness Center and the Community Center.

James thinks that the Greenbelt Recreation Department is "one of the best around — as good as any county department." He attributes the department's success to a supportive community and to a diverse professional staff. The people of Greenbelt like having their own recreation department, he says, and have been willing to pay for it. Picking different people with different interests is what makes the department work so well, he says. "It's what makes our program unique and responsive to the community."

James scoffs at employees who ask him for a job description. You just do what needs to be done and what you can do, he believes. That essentially is what he does for the city. James has become the department's number cruncher. About 40 percent of his time is spent on preparing and monitoring the department's budget. He also controls purchasing for the department and maintains time records. Supervising employees and dealing with day-to-day operations of the department takes up another 35 percent of his time, he estimates.

He also does some of the department's programming. He does the scheduling of ballfields, for example. He is liaison to all athletic groups that get contributions from the city. He coordinates softball activities in the city and is a commissioner with both the Amateur Softball Association of the Washington Metropolitan Area and the U.S. Slow Pitch Softball Association.

Chief Cook

Following his philosophy of not paying attention to job descriptions, James has become the department's and city's chief cook. Whenever there is a city function that involves barbecuing, James is there flipping burgers while others party.

His cooking is one of the ways the department saves money, he claims. The city does not pay top dollar for its summer employees, but in recent years the city has had no trouble employing good kids.

Instead of high pay, the city gives the kids extras like pizza parties. James claims that for a few hundred dollars, the city saves thousands.

"It's fun to be with the kids," he says. He enjoys his role as liaison to the Youth Advisory Board. This board has advocated the city building a skateboard park and installing a sidewalk all the way on Hanover Parkway. It sought improvements to the Schrom Hills Park ballfields and gave comments on the city's trails plan.

James seems to like most everything. He says that he doesn't have problems, only incidents. "You may be down for a while, but it's just an incident, and you move on." He likes Greenbelt very much. It's been to him like his second family, he says. "You're treated well. Still are. Greenbelt's a good place to work. I give everything to Greenbelt."

That devotion led his boss, Irving, to nominate him for the Citation of the Maryland Recreation and Parks Association, the highest award the association gives out each year.

James, who has been active with the association throughout his career, received the award at last year's annual conference.

James met his wife, Kathy Fern, daughter of a Greenbelt pioneer family, coaching softball. It was something Irving got him involved with. In return, James introduced Irving to the woman he married. Kathy had two sons and a daughter, which James helped raise. They now have a grandson, Patrick Michael.

The Ferns are Irish, Kathy's grandfather having been born on the immigration boat in New York Harbor. James is Scots-Irish, but says that he favors the Irish side. St. Patrick's Day was, as usual, a big event for the James family.

For the fourth year, the family will be hosting two youths from Northern Ireland for six weeks, one a Protestant and the other Catholic. The eleven to twelve-year olds are from low-income families. The experience has been good both for them and the kids, he feels. James and his wife have also been to Ireland three times.

Travel is in their future plans, too. Both plan to retire together and move to a new home near

The Outlook of the University of Maryland had a feature story and picture on Annette Sardelli and her daughter Sue Hall.

Sardelli has worked for the University for almost 40 years in the payroll office. Hall has completed 25 years in the works control office. Sardelli has always lived, since first married, in Greenbelt and nearby, once being a resident of Springhill Lake. Her daughter, who is active with the Greenbelt Boys and Girls Club as a board member and publicity chairperson, has always lived near her mother.

Bethany Beach, Delaware. For the first year of retirement, at least, they plan to travel. Then maybe, James will consider getting a job. Perhaps on a cruise ship!

Celtic Art Works Shown At Greenbelt Arts Center

by Barbara Likowski

Walking into the Greenbelt Arts Center (GAC) scenes and symbols of Celtic art greet the eye. These paintings, 17 in all, are hung all around GAC's lobby. They are the work of Glen Burnie artist Karen Newhouse.

Before the Celtic music program on Saturday, March 17 a reception was held for Newhouse. Again, during intermission the artist was present to discuss her work and explain the meanings behind them. Of Irish descent, Newhouse became interested in her family background and did research on the Celts before she began to do work on her own.

Besides the paintings, Newhouse had t-shirts on which she had placed Celtic designs. A green one with a large snake was particularly intriguing. The snake's long body was made up of diagonal squares. The Celts moved across Europe, Newhouse explained, and must have been influenced by the Greeks who used the square as an art form. The Celts turned the square diagonally and made their own art form.

Because of Celtic interest in the moon, Newhouse created a new moon, silvery and curving and put it on a black t-shirt.

The third, a red one, had the circling ravens design. Ravens, in Celtic mythology represent the spirits of war, and being carrion birds, followed the soldiers.

These designs were represented in the paintings of Newhouse. Circling Ravens made by ink on homemade mulberry bark paper hangs right inside the GAC door. In the entryway of the theater, Patrick's Cross, done in India ink and copper features designs from ancient sources from 800 BC to 800 AD. It carries the highest price tag.

Newhouse uses different media — pencil and watercolor, sepia and graphite pencil, handcrafted pigments and 23k gold on traditionally dyed papyrus, India ink and copper and more. The paintings feature odd creatures, gryphons, pookah, unicorns, gargoyles, to mention a few.

There are also forms of the Cross. This unusual, delightful mix of artwork can be viewed one more time at GAC — Saturday, March 24, 1 to 3 p.m. Most pieces, including the t-shirts, are for sale.

Ingrid Cowan and Ole Hass of Hillside Road have been invited by the Greenbelt Arts Center to sing at the center on Saturday, March 31 at 8 p.m. They have prepared a completely new program since their performance a year ago. The selections this year range from Ravel to Gershwin to Jabbawocky (from "Alice through the Looking Glass") to German Art Songs to Poulenc. Tickets are required.

"New York Style" Pizza Available at Restaurant

by Barbara Hopkins

Fans of "New York style" pizza may want to try Dimon's (formerly Cetrone's) in Cipriano Square. "New York style" pizza is round and has a thin crust with a thick edge. Traditionally, it's folded up and eaten by hand. Manager Bill Holmes adds that the pizza has special spices in the dough and sauce that set it apart. He says Dimon's makes the crust from scratch on site and aims for fresh, high-quality ingredients in all of their products. The personal experience of this reporter, who sampled the pizza recently, is that it is indeed very fresh-tasting. The toppings were generously distributed, as was the cheese. A member of our party proclaimed it "great!"

The establishment also specializes in a thin-crust pizza that is rectangular-shaped and made from a proprietary recipe with limited distribution. This pizza cooks up crispy and those in our party who otherwise left the crusts behind cleaned their plates entirely of this one.

The menu also includes pasta, calzones, sandwiches, subs, and salads. Holmes' personal favorite is the "grinder" sub, which consists of five kinds of Italian meats, green peppers and onions, all cooked on the grill. Topped with cheese, it's a meal that should quell even the most ferocious appetite. The dessert menu is being expanded from cheesecake and fresh-baked cookies to include key lime pie. Delivery is available, but for those who want to dine out instead of carry out, and leave the dishes as well as the cooking to someone else, the shop has enough tables with blue-checked tablecloths to seat 35 people; and a "sports" TV provides entertainment. There are specials daily.

Movie Club Offers Additional Showing

The First Friday Movie Club (FFMC) feature for April 6 at 1:30 p.m. will be "The Grinch." Will he eat the roast beast?

The FFMC invites Greenbelt Elementary School kids and parents to try an "After School Special" showing at 3:15 p.m. "It's a shame to bring these great family films in and not have at least two showings where the other school kids can get a chance to see them. Besides, the St. Hugh's FFMC kids are challenging the Greenbelt Elementary kids to break last year's attendance record (~100 for "Stuart Little")." says Larry Hilliard, FFMC coordinator.

St. Hugh's school parents have organized a First Friday Movie Club that takes advantage of monthly half days, the school's proximity to the theater, and the willingness of theater operator Paul Sanchez to obtain some family oriented films. Building a new generation of "Greenbelt Theatre-goers" who can wait to see quality films at our local theater will pay off in the long run.
