Beltsville Airfield: Adventure On the Internet, in the Field

by Timothy G. Smith

Timothy G. Smith, the reporter or storyteller here, is a Bowie resident, internet enthusiast and father of a nine-year-old boy. His story revolves around interesting places near Greenbelt and a Greenbelt father and son.

Smith, while transporting his son to CYO basketball games in Laurel, passed signs for the National Wild Life Visitor Center on Powder Mill Road. It looked like a good spot for some father and son outings. But looking at an old map, what caught his immediate interest was the airfield next door with "two crossing runways. Each runway was more than 4,000 feet long. I was amazed," wrote Smith. "I had no idea that an airfield making that large a footprint existed" nearby.

He searched the internet to find published aerial and satellite photographs. He struck gold through Google, finding pages of information on a website named "Little Known and Abandoned Airfields." The field, he discovered, dated to the 1930s and had been a WPA project. The Navy took over during World War II using it for training. The field was returned to the Agriculture Department after the war but other agencies made use of it. Rumors suggested CIA activities during the '50s and '60s.

The rumor Smith chose to follow claimed a DC-3 (or C-47) had crashed on the site and might not have been recovered. He next learned from a Navy veterans website, vnavy.org of a "man whose father was killed during WWII when he was just seven years old. He was looking for anyone who could tell him stories about the father, his wartime adventures and the type of man he was."

Part I

The father's name was U.S. Navy Lieutenant William O. Needham. His son is Bill Needham, Jr.

Bill Needham was having a good bit of success in obtaining information about his father. Several people had responded to his posting and the website published much of what came in.

I learned that Lt. Needham was a true American hero. With movie star good looks (he could double for Clark Gable), he joined the Navy as an enlisted man in 1929 and served most of his active duty in the Atlantic fleet. He rose up through the ranks and in 1937 was designated as a Navy Aviation Pilot, an extremely rare occurrence for an enlisted man. In June 1942 he was confirmed as a warrant officer and in July was promoted to the rank of ensign for temporary service.

Needham earned a reputation as a fine airman and an excellent pilot. This reputation landed him a choice assignment to serve as chief pilot for Vice Admiral John S. McCain, Sr., hero of the island-hopping campaigns in the Pacific and the grandfather of Senator John S. McCain, III, of Arizona. Needham fought bravely in the early years of the war and in 1943 received well-earned orders for shore duty.

Needham's shore duty assignment was at Anacostia Naval Air Station in Washington, D.C. While at Anacostia, Needham lived with his wife and two children on Hillside Road in Greenbelt. Early during this tour of duty Needham was promoted to the rank of lieutenant junior grade. In mid-May of 1943 he was promoted to full lieutenant. Two years later, on May 17, 1945, Lt. Needham was killed in a plane crash near Beltsville. As luck would have it, this tragedy happened less than five miles from his home. At the time of his death Lt. Needham was serving as chief pilot for Vice Admiral Aubrey W. Fitch, chief of Naval Operations for Air and hero of the Battle of the Coral Sea.

Was it possible that the wreckage rumored to be in the woods at Beltsville was from Lt. Needham's airplane? Had I stumbled upon an important artifact from World War II right near my own hometown? Of course it was possible. But the only way to prove it was to uncover more information.

What type of airplane did Lt. Needham crash? Could it have been a C-47? If so, why had the Navy failed to recover the wreckage? This mystery was growing fast.

The more I thought about it, the more it made sense. I developed a theory about how and why the wreckage might never have been recovered. There were several important factors to consider:

First, the crash apparently occurred on posted government land (now Beltsville Agricultural Research Center) with extremely limited public access. This land is heavily forested and has been closed to the public since before World War II. The people most likely to have stumbled upon the wreckage were government personnel on official business or

County Municipalities Take Varying Positions on ICC

by James Giese

Other county jurisdictions have shown mixed reactions regarding the proposed construction of the Intercounty Connector (ICC), unlike the Greenbelt City Council, which has long been strongly opposed to the planned super-highway. The ICC would cross Montgomery County and end at U.S. 1 or I-95 in Prince George's County south of Laurel.

Greenbelt officials fear that such a highway will be tied into a proposed extension of Kenilworth Avenue, resulting in Montgomery County eastbound traffic being funneled into Greenbelt. The neighboring cities of College Park and Bowie also are concerned with potential traffic impacts from building the ICC.

College Park strongly opposes building the highway. It is particularly concerned about the road's impact on streams that flow through the city. Bowie, however, is opposed only to its construction east of I-95. That city took no position on the remainder of the highway. Its council fears funneling of traffic from the ICC along Maryland Route 197, the Laurel-Bowie Road into Bowie.

On November 24, the Laurel City Council took a position in support of everything opposed by the other three cities. Specifically Laurel's resolution supports the Corridor 1 alternative, provided that the alignment continues easterly until reaching Kenilworth Avenue extended or U.S. Route 1.

The Laurel council also supports construction of a proposed interchange with I-95 at about Muirkirk Road. Further, Laurel's council specifically endorsed construction of an extension of

by Randy Crenwelge

Thirteen members from Greenbelt from the Maryland National Guard Charlie Company, 115th Infantry, have been given their orders. They are to report on January 7 to Fort Stewart, Ga., for approximately 100 days of intense training.

The Army National Guard won't tell these soldiers what they are being trained for. All they have been told is to be prepared to serve in Iraq. At Fort Stewart they will refresh their infantry skills, learn new ones and undergo rigorous testing. They will train until they have passed all their tests. At day 100 they should be on their way to Iraq.

These National Guardsmen (NG) do not know when their period of mobilization will end. They expect approximately a year. Everyone in Charlie Company who is eligible and has volunteered to serve has been deployed or is in the process of being deployed.

When asked what their families thought about their being deployed to Iraq, the soldiers responded by saying that their families are not extremely happy about it. Their wives knew when they married them that they were soldiers and this day could come.

"My wife is pregnant with a baby boy on the way. I won't get to be here when Joseph Anthony Herbert Inzeo is born," said PFC Michael Inzeo, an electrical technician. "I have a job to do and I am not going to back down what I committed myself to do by enlisting in the Maryland National Guard," he said. Others in the group are Sgt. John Vicars, who manages a landscaping company in civilian life; SPC Michael Chiddo, an electrician apprentice; Sgt. Joshua Heskett, a network engineer with CACI; and PFC Jose

Letters to the Editor

THANKS

On behalf of the Greenbelt New Year's Eve Committee, I would like to thank all who attended the celebration. It is the committee's hope that everyone had a great time – it appeared that everyone did.

A big thanks goes to the Greenbelt Recreation, Public Works and Police Departments for their invaluable support and coordination with the committee. Without them there would be no celebration. The entertainers as well as Sight & Sound DJs and Talk of the Town provided talent and professionalism which made for great shows all night long. Thanks to the Greenbelt Swim Team for some really wacky hairstyles, the artists at the Community Center for some creative arts and crafts, the St. Hugh's Home and School Organization, Girl Scout Troop 2142 and Chef Lou for providing good food all evening, Chris Cherry, Chris Fominaya (and others) for the entertainment at the Arts Center and GAVA for its show at the movie theater. The New Deal Café is to be thanked for its "first breakfast of 2005" offering and for its great jazz!

A big thanks goes to all of the businesses and individuals who provided monetary support for the celebration, especially the Greenbelt Co-op for selling discount wristbands prior to the celebration.

And last, but certainly not least, I would like to recognize the wonderful members of the committee and the volunteers who worked that evening. The celebration would not be possible without you. From the bottom of my heart, thank you.

See you next year.

Grinch on Plateau?

To My Neighbors in 6 Court Plateau Place:

I came home today to a most distressing sight. I have some very simple Christmas lights strung on the fence of the service side of our yard at 6-Z-1. Someone cut one of the strands of lights and a second strand of lights had a nick in the wire covering.

We leave our Christmas lights on from dusk to dawn in the hopes that everyone gets a chance to enjoy them. Apparently someone either does not like the lights or else has way too much time on their hands. If the lights have bothered any of our neighbors, we would hope that they would either leave us a note or come and talk to us about the lights.

Our hope was to replace the larger bulbs that we have been using to smaller lights but since this incident has happened I am not sure that I want to bother to light up the fence line in years to come. This does not mean that we won't have outside lights – it just means that we may have to make it a little harder for wire snippers to reach our lights.

Merry Christmas and Happy New Year.

Kenilworth Avenue to connect with the Contee Road interchange and allow secondary access to Van Dusen Road in Laurel.

In explanation of its position, the Laurel council stated that it was important to form a regional network of roads to accommodate both regional and local traffic. To achieve this outcome, the council urges a change in the Master Plan route for an extended Kenilworth Avenue to turn westward following its intersection with Van Dusen Road and to intersect I-95 at the Contee Road interchange. Council contends that this change is necessary to provide needed access to the proposed Konterra Town Center and to allow secondary access to motorists wishing to continue northerly along Van Dusen Road into Laurel.

According to Greenbelt Mayor Judith Davis, the Town of Berwyn Heights also supports construction of the ICC provided that a proposed parallel bicycle path is constructed as part of the project. The bicycle path is no longer part of the proposal because the State believes it to be too costly.

County Position

The Prince George's County government is divided on the ICC issue. Seven of the nine members of the county council proposed and supported a resolution last June opposing the ICC in its entirety. Among these opponents were Douglas Peters, who represents the Greenbelt-Bowie council district, and Thomas E. Dernoga and Thomas Hendershot, who represent Greenbelt's neighboring jurisdictions.

County council declared a number of reasons for its opposition. It believes that the ICC will draw economic and investment jobs out of Prince George's County to Montgomery County and the I-270 corridor. It notes that both a Transportation Solutions Group and the State Highway Administration have found that the ICC will not relieve Beltway traffic in any significant way and would leave many intersections at both ends of the highway badly congested.

The council declares the Master Plan alignment of the ICC to have severe environmental impacts. It supports the Transportation Solution Group's recommendations for a combination of link, intersection, land use and transit improvements including the Inner Purple Line proposed for Metro as viable alternatives. Lastly, it notes that travel data indicates projected trips in the county to be highly varied in Susie is a young girl learning to study science using her five senses. Through exploration and examination, she learns that snowflakes have six points. She also recognizes six bright stars in the night sky that she uses to make a snowflake. A tour of the January skies follows the presentation. The Owens Science Center is located at 9601 Greenbelt Road in Lanham. This program is open to the public. There is a fee. For information, call 301-918-8750 during school hours.

Arousing the Intellect

"Kinsey," which opens Friday, January 7 at Old Greenbelt Theatre, takes a fresh, inside view behind the controversy primed by publication of the 1948 landmark book, "Sexual Behavior in the Human Male" and five years later, "Sexual Behavior in the Human Female." Director Bill Condon and cast (Liam Neeson as Professor Kinsey, Laura Linney as Mrs. K. and John Lithgow as Kinsey's fire-and-brimstone preacher father) have won widespread plaudits – and an R rating. The New York Times, while acknowledging there are "explicit images and provocative scenes," says, "It is your intellect that is most likely to be aroused."

We see how Kinsey's own problems help prompt the biology prof to start a fledgling sex education class at Indiana U. Thousands of interviews and personal adventures by him and his wife (his former student) led to the earth-shaking books. While one minority magazine view finds that the film "ultimately [seems] pedestrian," far more typical are such reactions as "one of the year's [2004] most satisfying films" and "intelligently written, well directed and filled with excellent performances."

He will discuss Dr. Eric Pearl's book, "The Reconnection," which emphasizes healing as miracle. This book is subtitled "Heal Others, Heal Yourself." The healing described is instantaneous and permanent and so simple that anyone can do it.

Baluch, a Greenbelt resident and retired elementary educator, is a member of the International Association of Near Death Studies and has been published in its newsletter "Vital Signs." He believes that every moment, every breath one takes, every thought, every feeling, every emotion is a miracle.

Explorations Unlimited is a speaker series held every Friday from 1 to 3 p.m. at the Greenbelt Community Center. Everyone is welcome to attend and questions are encouraged. Call 301-397-2208 for more information.

Help resuscitate the temporarily moribund Poetry Plus discussion group. Since the loss of leader Emily Nutku, the group has wandered in a dark wood, bereft of the scintillating discussions she inspired.

The group is an informal gathering of people who enjoy reading and discussing poetry. No expertise or regular attendance is required. Each month the group discusses poems on a particular topic, such as "love" or "changing seasons." Attendees may bring 10 copies of relevant poems to share. Poems written by attendees are also welcome.

Poetry Plus meets on the second Saturday of every month from 10:30 a.m. to noon on the lower level of the Greenbelt Library, directly across from the elevator. For details call Jim Link at 301-982-4455. The next meeting, "New Beginnings, Renewal," will be held on Saturday, January 8.

The Greenbelt Concert Band Delights Holiday Crowd

by Mary Moien

The Greenbelt Concert Band performed its Holiday Lights Concert on December 19 to an enthusiastic audience. Tom Cherrix conducted and Joan Culpepper introduced the arrangements, adding a little background information to each. A children's choir, composed of children and friends of the band, joined in the music near the end.

Many traditional pieces were included – "It's Beginning to Look a Lot Like Christmas," "Waltz of the Flowers" and "The March of the Wooden Soldiers" from the "The Nutcracker Suite." A Chanukah celebration gave the concert an ecumenical feel.

Holiday music is an excellent venue for highlighting various instrumentalists in the band. "Frosty the Snowman" was a showcase for the clarinetists. "A Christmas Solo" featured Steve Wood on the clarinet. The entire trumpet section was up and swaying for "Holiday for Trumpets." And the saxophone quartet – including one member dressed as Santa – was highlighted in "Winter Wonderland."

Children joined the band on stage to perform "The Christmas Song" and "Jingle Bells." The group ranged from four to 12 years old and Sarah Quillen, the oldest, appeared to be the group's informal leader. Other children included Amelia, Zachary and Amber Itteilag; Caroline and Grace Rowe; Haley Giraldi; Caroline Campbell; Laurel Glover and Andrea Gormley. The children's choir was directed by Jim Moore, assistant band director.

The next band concert in Greenbelt is scheduled for Sunday, May 1.

Greenbriar Seniors Invited to Lunch

Senior residents of Greenbriar and a guest are invited to a luncheon on Tuesday, January 11 at noon. A guest speaker will describe upcoming and ongoing city events following lunch. This event is free, but seniors are asked to register by Friday, January 7.

St. Hugh's Parish Christmas Dinner Is a Rousing Success

by Mary Moien

Grenoble Hall at St. Hugh's was transformed into a magical setting for what was planned as the first annual St. Hugh's Christmas dinner held this year on December 12. Father Walter Tappe, pastor since June, had called upon the parish Sodality under the direction of Prefect Marti Galvin, to bring the plans to fruition. The resulting party exceeded all expectations.

Nearly 300 parishioners participated in the dinner set amid candy canes, pink poinsettias, lighted trees and silver garlands. The tables were covered with pink cloth; pink decorations being in honor of Gaudete Sunday, the third Sunday in Advent when the church is covered in pink to celebrate the nearness of Christmas.

Parish members feasted on turkey, ham and vegetarian lasagna. Hot cider was a real hit. A separate dessert table was laden with goodies provided by the Sodality ladies. Eighth grade students from St. Hugh's helped serve the dinner under the watchful eye of youth minister Al Kovacic.

Sodalists Cleopatra White planned the menu, Cindy Perry planned the decorations, Kathleen McFarland and Bridget McDermott spearheaded ticket sales and Beth Osborne oversaw the serving. Accordionist Phil Ventura entertained the party with Christmas songs and other favorites. It was a wonderful afternoon, a chance for members of a very large parish to begin to get to know each other better.

HEED THE GUIDANCE

As we witness the escalating death toll from the tsunami in southeast Asia, it is important to ponder the nature of the trials or tests of this world. In the Holy Qur'an, Allah (God) states, "No calamity befalls, but by the decision and Divine preordainments of Allah, and whosoever believes in Allah, He guides his heart. And Allah is the All-Knower of everything." (64:11) These trials are but reminders of our own limited lives on this earth and opportunities for us to grow closer to Allah by showing thanks for the many blessings that He has provided.

Cat Lost Again

by Terri Gates

Jasper, formerly Lucky, has strayed from his home again. Several years ago, Lucky adopted 5 Court Laurel Hill Road. To find the owner, members of 5 Court put his photograph in the News Review. Lucky's owner called to identify the cat.

In the meantime, Lucky had been apprehended by Animal Control. Members of 5 Court Laurel Hill Road came to the rescue. Fines were paid and a housing unit was created in the rear of Don Comis' house.

A new owner was accepted. Mary and Michael Giles became owners of Lucky, changing his name to Jasper.

Jasper was last seen on December 30 at Ridge and Laurel Hill Roads. He is not wearing a collar. The owners have posted a $100 reward. Call 301-614-0954 or (work) 301-405-5804.

poachers hunting wild game. Without general public access, it is possible that wreckage from an aircraft could lie in the woods undisturbed for decades.

Second, the crash occurred on May 17, 1945. That was barely one week after the German surrender and less than four months before the war's end. When the war was finally over, the military was burdened with a huge inventory of ships, airplanes, tanks, vehicles and all manner of other weapons and equipment, more that it could possibly maintain or use during peacetime. The answer was to destroy the equipment, an expensive and time-consuming process.

Third, the military was downsizing its personnel. Troops were being mustered out. Bases were closing. Beltsville airfield, one of those short-lived bases, was closed for military use just after the war. Records show that the Navy turned the facility over to the Department of Agriculture soon thereafter.

My theory considered these factors as well as the likely condition of Lt. Needham's plane after the crash. Surely it had been severely damaged or destroyed. Perhaps the Navy decided it was too much trouble to deal with the wreckage in the woods and that they would leave it for some later assignment. Then, before the wreckage retrieval work could be assigned, the Navy closed the Beltsville facility and the wreckage was forgotten.

To prove this theory, I needed more information. In my search I soon exhausted every lead about the airplane crash that came up on the internet. Reluctantly, I moved to the next best source for answers. I attempted to contact Bill Needham, sending an email message to the address he had posted. However, his posting was several years old and the email address had expired.

Next I sent email messages to the webmasters that ran the Abandoned Airfields and vponavy.org websites. I gave each of them a brief outline of my findings and asked if they could provide any help.

The webmaster of the Abandoned Airfields website had been my source for the rumor about the wrecked plane in the woods at Beltsville but he had never heard of Lt. Needham and had no additional information to share about the wreckage. I had greater success with the vponavy.org webmaster. He provided an address and phone number for Bill Needham.

It turned out that Bill lived in La Plata, less than 30 miles away. I telephoned him immediately. I told Bill that I had read his posting and that I had information to share about the wreck of his father's plane. I gave him all the details.

Bill was happy to hear the news and happy that I had taken such an interest in his father's story. He furnished everything he knew about the crash. He found my theory about the possibility of finding the wreck of his father's plane to be plausible and he became just as excited about the effort as I.

Bill's information was tantalizing. His father's aircraft type was not a C-47 or a DC-3 but something very similar in size and configuration. It was a Lockheed Lodestar R-50.

The Lockheed Lodestar is an old twin-engine, propeller driven, tail dragging transport plane used in the 1940s. It is comparable to the DC-3. I could easily imagine how wreckage of an R-50 might be mistaken for wreckage of a DC-3, so this was not a problem. The mystery was really starting to look interesting.

It had never occurred to Bill that the wreckage of his father's plane could still be lying where it had crashed more than 59 years ago. Although he had visited the Beltsville airfield, he assumed that the Navy had removed the wreckage long ago. Nor did he have information on the exact site of the crash. Now, after hearing of my discoveries, he certainly wanted to return and join in the search.

Bill provided other details of the incident. He had spoken with the copilot, CDR Fowler, who had survived the crash that killed Bill's father. He gave Bill a very good first-hand eyewitness account of the accident. Their conversations occurred several years ago, just before CDR Fowler died.

Those whose current employment is unknown are POC David Parks, PFC Daniel Jett and PFC Craig Notice.

For Vicars, Heskett, Bowan, Jarvis and Fiske it is not the first time they have been called to active duty. They were called to protect, guard and provide security at Aberdeen Proving Ground after September 11, 2001. The soldiers agreed that they are much better trained this time and that the quality of their personnel is superior.

"Nobody has been chosen but they have to do it for their country," explained one NG. When this reporter commented that this is a serious commitment, another guardsman responded, "At times it feels overwhelming. It's my country and it's my turn to do something."

One Family's Art Show in Laurel

In January, Montpelier Cultural Arts Center hosts an exhibition of artwork by four generations of the LaRoche family. "One Man's Family" will be in the main gallery January 7 through 26 with an opening reception Friday, January 7 from 7 to 9 p.m.

This Prince George's County family came to the attention of Montpelier staff through the Normandy Portraits exhibition first mounted at the art center in June 1995, the 50th anniversary of D-Day. Gerard LaRoche loaned Montpelier sketches he had made while serving in France and mentioned that artists ran in his family, beginning with his father, J. Arthur LaRoche. He became a United States citizen in 1924 and several of his eight children became artists. Examples of their works are included in the exhibition.

Gerard's daughter, Hyattsville resident and artist Marianne LaRoche, along with her brother Jerome, represent the third generation. The fourth generation includes Jerome's daughter Catherine. For information call 301-953-1993, TTY 301-490-2329.

Requests for Senior Surveys Honored

Two communities in Massachusetts requested copies of the senior needs assessment survey done in Greenbelt.

The Ludlow Council on Aging and the Greater Northampton Faith in Action Alliance are both developing needs assessments for their senior populations.

Diane Hayden from the Hampshire Community Action Commission in Northampton observed that a comparison between Greenbelt and Northampton seniors "would provide Greenbelt with the ability to generalize its findings to other seniors, caregivers, service providers and pre-seniors and would give Northampton the ability to do the same." The City of Greenbelt responded positively to both requests.

M-NCPPC Receives National Award

The Maryland-National Capital Park and Planning Commission (M-NCPPC) has earned national accreditation from the Commission on Accreditation for Parks and Recreation Agencies (CAPRA). The local parks, recreation and planning agency serves both Prince George's and Montgomery Counties in Maryland.

During an 18-month process M-NCPPC met each of the 155 standards in 10 categories, such as strategic planning, resource management, public information and marketing, human resources, fiscal management, programs and services, facility and land use management, safety and security, and research and evaluation.

The final report cited M-NCPPC for a number of strengths: "... not in the facilities and programs that are offered, even though they are tremendous. The real strength of the agency lies with the pride, professionalism and enthusiasm of the staff. Everyone, no matter what their job, truly enjoys working for this agency and providing quality services to the residents and visitors of the region," the report said.

"The commission is privileged and delighted to accept this CAPRA accreditation on behalf of the 1.7 million residents we serve in Prince George's and Montgomery counties," said Elizabeth M. Hewlett, chairman of the Prince George's County Planning Board and the commission. "It is truly an exceptional honor to be nationally recognized as the best in our field."

Those wishing to volunteer to deliver books to the homebound in Greenbelt or to enroll in the Homebound Book Program should contact Belicia Swinson at 240-542-2036. Enrollment begins Tuesday, January 4. Training for volunteers delivering books will be Monday, January 31 or Saturday, February 12 at the Greenbelt Library, 11 Crescent Road. All ages of homebound Greenbelt residents are welcome.

Historic Photo Collection at NAL

An early 20th century soybean collecting expedition in Asia comes alive in a collection of historic photos at the U.S. Department of Agriculture's National Agricultural Library in Beltsville. More than a thousand prints documenting the expedition are preserved in paperboard or clothbound photo albums. A small collection of the prints is also available on the library's website.

The expedition was made from 1929 to 1931 by pioneering plant explorer Palemon Howard Dorsett and colleague William Joseph Morse. They were assigned to travel throughout the rural countryside of Japan, Korea and Manchurian China. Their goal: find and send home examples of rare, wild and cultivated soybeans, a crop that had captured the interest of American farmers. The explorers brought back about 4,500 soybean specimens. Some of these plants had prized traits such as resistance to harmful microbes that could otherwise devastate the crop.

Researchers visiting the library can, by appointment, view the albums. Armchair travelers can conveniently read about the expedition and view nearly 50 prints by logging onto the library's website at <http://www.nal.usda.gov/speccoll/findaids/dorsett>.

Cocoa Beans Disease Research

Here's some sobering news for Valentine's Day gift-seekers: All is not well in the world of chocolate. That's because several fungi, most significantly Crinipellis perniciosa, are attacking the cacao trees that produce the seeds that are the chief ingredient for cocoa and chocolate. This fungus penetrates the stem and fruit tissue of cacao trees inhibiting formation of seed pods and destroying mature pods.

But scientists with the U.S. Department of Agriculture's Agricultural Research Service have been tackling the problem. Raymond J. Schnell and colleagues at ARS' Subtropical Horticultural Research Unit in Miami, Fla., have studied cacao's genome and have found genetic markers for resistance to witches' broom, the disease caused by C. perniciosa.

Schnell is currently in the third year of a five-year cooperative agreement with Masterfoods, Inc. of Hackettstown, N.J. — makers of M&Ms, Dove Chocolate and Snickers candy bars — to breed cacao that resists serious diseases. Breeding populations established in Costa Rica and Ecuador have shown tolerance to witches' broom and to frosty pod and black pod, both of which rot cacao pods, as well as to another fungus that causes cankers on branches and stems.

Emergency Alerts Broadcast Locally

Emergency managers at the federal, state and local government level rely on the Emergency Alert System (EAS) to pass emergency or disaster information to participating radio and television stations. EAS replaces the Emergency Broadcast System. The major difference is that the EAS uses digital technology to distribute messages.

In Maryland all television stations in the Washington and Baltimore media areas carry EAS messages. The radio stations that carry EAS messages in Prince George's County are: WMUC 88.1 FM, WPGC 95.5 FM, WHUR 96.3 FM, WBIG 100.3 FM, WMMJ 102.3 FM, WTOP 107.7 FM, WMAL 630AM, WILC 900 AM, WTOP 1500 AM and WPGC 1580 AM.

The National Weather Service also sends emergency weather information through NOAA Weather Radios, which are commercially available, to warn listeners about severe weather events.

The EAS stations are listed on the Emergency Preparedness pages of the Verizon telephone books for each county. They also are listed on each county website. More information about emergency management can be obtained from the Maryland Emergency Management Agency (MEMA) at 800-422-8799 or by visiting the MEMA website at www.mema.state.md.us.

License Contains Security Features

Maryland's new driver's license and identification card will contain improved security features to deter fraud and identity theft. Maryland's first new driver's license in 10 years was introduced in Annapolis against a backdrop of law enforcement officers from jurisdictions around the state.

Dubbed "All-in-One" by the Maryland Motor Vehicle Administration (MVA), the new sleek, credit-card-style licenses and I.D. cards contain embedded security data. The new card stock, use of holograms and a two-dimensional bar code increase their security and durability. The color-coded licenses and I.D. cards include fresh and whimsical graphics like the Maryland blue crab. Full-face pictures now grace the new vertically-formatted under-21 license, a change that will allow for immediate recognition of underage drinkers and smokers.

The technology supporting the new licenses and identification cards allows for all facets of the driver's license or I.D. card transaction to take place at a single point of customer service, eliminating the use of a paper application – and the potential for fraud. The single point transaction eliminates the nuisance of having to migrate from one MVA counter to another and wait in multiple lines.

The MVA is presently operating the new All-in-One system and issuing the redesigned license and identification cards in Waldorf only. The new license and I.D. cards will be available statewide by this summer. For additional information, visit the MVA online at www.marylandmva.com or contact 1-800-950-1682.

Coyotes in Greenbelt?

Coyotes, once associated only with the Great Plains of the Western states, have been gradually migrating eastward over the past century. Coyotes are now located in every state in the continental U.S. They have even been spotted in Rock Creek Park and in Central Park in New York City. Greenbelt's Public Safety Advisory Committee cautions that it is possible that coyotes could be in this area and offers safety information and tips.

A coyote is generally dark brown to light gray and weighs 25 to 50 pounds. They are primarily nocturnal and would normally be frightened of humans; however, contact with urban areas has made some animals more aggressive than usual.

Their diet adapts to whatever is available including fruit and nuts but they prefer small rodents and have on occasion caught small dogs or cats.

People spotting a coyote should resist the urge to approach it. According to the National Park Service most injuries caused by coyotes occur when humans get too close. Be safe, leave the area and notify Animal Control at 301-345-5417 or the police at 301-474-7200 or 301-474-5454 in an emergency.

$100 REWARD FOR RECOVERY OF LOST CAT

Jasper is a large tomcat with gray and black tiger stripes on his back but his chin, chest, front legs and underside are entirely white. Jasper was last seen on Thursday, December 30 at the intersection of Ridge and Laurel Hill Roads. If you have information about Jasper, please call 301-614-0954 in the evening or 301-405-5804 during the day.

The Department is offering a reward of up to $500 for information leading to the arrest and conviction of a suspect in any of the unsolved crimes reported in the blotter. Citizens may anonymously report suspected drug activity by calling the Drug Tip Line at 301-507-6522.

Greenbelt Greet the New Year with Fun for the Whole Family

The City of Greenbelt and various sponsors pool their resources each year to provide a safe and fun-filled New Year's celebration for local residents. This year's shindig attracted young and old to an alcohol-free celebratory night filled with arts, music and community-building activities. The evening's festivities culminated in the Community Center gym which rocked with music by the Latin Jazz All Stars, John Hill and DC Motors as hundreds of Greenbelters welcomed in the New Year.

"It's fantastic to be able to smile again, which I haven't done in a long time," Mike says. The McCarl Dental Group is pleased and proud to have been able to help a member of our community!

AFTER

It's never too late to give yourself a beautiful smile. For over three generations the McCarl family has provided a full range of dental services to Greenbelt and the surrounding communities. From the Photo Album

From time to time, we collect photographs of Greenbelt events and residents that are fun to pass along. Due to limited space, however, many of these never make it to press. Here are a couple that were too cute to pass up.

Big shoes to fill? Greenbelter James McMichael, Arlington County Deputy Sheriff, had a big costume to fill as a giant deputy at the Arlington County Fair. To show how tall he was, James posed with Greenbelt friends Barry and Mary Moien, below.

Girl Scout Cookie Sales Begin Friday

The 2005 Girl Scout cookie sale will run from January 7 through March 26 with a goal of selling 4.25 million boxes. Enthusiastic Girl Scouts will soon fan out to entice folks in the Greater Washington region – which happens to be home to the largest number of consumers of Girl Scout cookies in the nation.

The annual cookie sale benefits girls in many ways. Working as a team, they learn how to plan and achieve a goal, sales and marketing techniques, individual responsibility and money management. And troops are able to underwrite educational, service and fun activities that the girls plan for the year.

Brownies through Senior Girl Scouts will begin taking orders on January 7 and cookies will be delivered from mid-February through March. During March, Girl Scout troops will set up booth sales at area shopping locations.

Complete information of the 2005 Girl Scout cookie sale is available at www.gscnc.org/cookies2005/. Information also is available by calling the Girl Scout Council of the Nation's Capital at 800-523-7898.

Greenbelt Artists At New Deal Café

The current show of Greenbelt artists at the New Deal Café will be extended through the month of January. Over 20 local artists have their work on display. People who have been too busy to see this exhibit should stop by before January 30. The monthly art shows at the New Deal Café are sponsored by the Friends of New Deal Café Arts, with a supporting grant from Prince George's County, arranged by County Councilmember Douglas J. J. Peters.

State Launches New Reading Initiative

Maryland students will soon be able to take advantage of an unusual form of literature not often associated with schools as they strengthen their reading skills. The Maryland State Department of Education (MSDE), is developing an instructional toolkit that will allow schools to supplement traditional literature with comic books and graphic novels.

MSDE's new reading initiative is being assembled by a creative team that includes award-winning teachers, reading specialists, educational administrators, library specialists, comic book authors and publishers.

"Reading is a wonderful activity in all of its many forms," said Dr. Nancy S. Grasmick, Maryland State Superintendent of Schools. "Our job as educators is to help children learn to enjoy reading, making it a pleasurable experience rather than a burden. By using nontraditional materials along with our regular materials, we believe students will become even more excited about reading."

Greenbelt, often on the cutting edge, has been offering an advanced project of this type for more than five years. Artist George Kochell (Mr. Geo) and teacher Beth Novick have been among those who have worked on a unique activity at Greenbelt Elementary School. There, students do not learn to read by using comic books, they draw and narrate their own comics and stories. Parents have reported that their children have been inspired by this program.

Maryland's statewide project will not mandate comic books or replace traditional classroom materials. Rather, the program will provide options for teachers as they seek to encourage reading across the grade spectrum.

Diamond Comic Distributors and Disney Publishing Worldwide are partners with the state. Diamond has given the state a $10,000 project grant to support substitute teachers and other costs associated with the pilot programs currently underway. The corporation also has provided thousands of dollars in materials to creative team members and pilot schools to help launch the project. Disney has agreed to provide materials for the elementary school roll-out and will be creating new titles for Maryland elementary programs.

Graphic literature has drawn increasing interest from educators. They can be used as powerful motivational tools, provide context for written text for students who have difficulty with visualization and provide reluctant readers with the foundations they need to move on to more challenging materials. Comic books have found their place in both remedial and gifted classrooms.

Plans are for the Maryland Comics Initiative Instructional Toolkit to be completed by June, with a roll-out of the program to state systems scheduled for fall of 2005.

DORS Opens Office for Blind

The Maryland Department of Education's Division of Rehabilitation Services (DORS) has established an office for Blindness and Vision Services. The new office expects to serve 2,200 blind and vision impaired people in the upcoming year.

Susan Schaffer will direct the office for Blindness and Vision Services. Schaffer, who is legally blind, has a long association with DORS, beginning in the 1970s, when she participated in DORS programs and services as a Montgomery County high school student. Since beginning employment at DORS, she has worked as a rehabilitation specialist, supervisor, training specialist, business support director and, most recently, as director of the Workforce and Technology Center.

The new office of Blindness and Vision Services will oversee the following DORS programs and services:

Rehabilitation counselors in DORS field offices throughout Maryland specialize in employment and independent living issues for people who are blind.

Rehabilitation teachers across the state deliver community-based services such as mobility training, household management skills and communication device training. These teachers also provide independent living training to individuals who have a vision impairment, are age 55 and over and not seeking employment.

The Maryland Business Enterprise Program for the Blind, provides opportunities for individuals who are legally blind to operate vending, gift or food services businesses in public and private facilities.

Programs for individuals who are blind are located at the Workforce and Technology Center. These programs include academic evaluation and training, Braille training, orientation and mobility and peer support groups. More information can be obtained from DORS at 410-554-9385 or toll free at 1-888-554-0334.

Tax Tips from IRS

Earlier is better when it comes to working on taxes. Besides avoiding the last-minute rush, early filers get a faster refund. Get a jump on taxes long before the April 15 deadline rolls around by following some easy tips:

Gather all records in advance, including W-2s and 1099s. Keep a copy of each for future reference. Get the right forms. They are available around the clock on www.irs.gov in the Forms and Publications section.

Take plenty of time. Don't forget to leave room for a coffee break when filling out a tax return. Rushing can mean making a mistake and that can be expensive.

Double-check math and social security number. These are among the most common errors on tax returns and checking them reduces the chances of hearing from the IRS.

E-filing is easy. E-filing catches math problems, provides confirmation that the return has been received and gives a faster refund.

Don't panic. For problems or questions, the IRS is there to help. Try www.irs.gov or call the toll-free customer service number at 1-800-829-1040.

2006 School Budget Includes Increases

Prince George's County Public Schools CEO Andre J. Hornsby has recommended a $1.4 billion FY2006 operating budget to the Board of Education. The amount is a 12.1 percent increase over FY2005. The proposed budget priorities include improving high school assessment test results, major school improvement efforts, improving technology in the schools as well as student access to technology, expanding pre-kindergarten classes, enhancing the core curriculum with a focus on mathematics and science, providing appropriate staffing at the school level and providing salary improvements for all staff in accordance with contractual negotiated agreements.

The development process for the proposed budget included three public forums, held in October and November, to receive public input on budget priorities. The Board of Education will hold three public hearings in January, as well as public work sessions on the budget in January and February. In addition, the school system's website (www.pgcps.org) now includes a survey to gauge public opinion and gather feedback on budget policies and priorities.

The FY06 proposed budget includes more than $50 million in program improvements including: $12.7 million in special education improvements; $6.8 million to purchase new textbooks; $6.3 million for instructional technology improvements; $5.7 million to expand pre-kindergarten; $2.1 million in science and math curriculum improvements; $1.2 million for teacher certification; $1 million for the system-wide purchase of school furniture, lab equipment and uniforms; $800,000 for school security and $300,000 in Choice Option Schools.
