GHI in a Stew over County Building Permit Review Snafu

by Diane Oberg

It all seemed so simple. At the May 19 annual membership meeting of Greenbelt Homes, Inc., (GHI) Board of Directors Chair Julia Eichhorst described a recently rediscovered county law from 1988. The law requires a detailed site plan for all additions that expand by more than 25 percent the gross floor area of a unit. The law (CB-134-1988) applies only to developments in the old portion of Greenbelt (GHI, Lakewood, Lakeside, Woodland Hills, Lastner Lane extended and the American Legion tract including the five free-standing homes).

The tone of the discussion was that Greenbelt was being unfairly singled out. In a quick show of cards requested by Eichhorst, GHI members present overwhelmingly voted to ask County Councilmember Douglas J.J. Peters to request that GHI be exempted from this requirement. On Tuesday, May 24, if the Greenbelt City Council supported it, Peters agreed to introduce legislation to that effect.

Investigation since the meeting, however, reveals that the law was actually passed at the request of an earlier city council and that the 25 percent provision was put in at the request of GHI.

Annual Meeting

According to Eichhorst, both the board and GHI staff were unaware until recently of this requirement. She spoke of the added costs that would be brought on by this law. According to the city, she said, public notice signs would cost $30 each and there would be a $500 fee to revise the county master plan (although applicants can request that the fee be waived). The board has not yet discussed the issue in detail and had scheduled their first substantive discussion for the May 26 regular board meeting.

Eichhorst told the members that the county had not previously been enforcing this requirement but now that the Maryland-National Capital Park and Planning Commission (M-NCPPC) staff are aware of the law, they have put a hold on all permits relating to additions in old Greenbelt until they can determine how to proceed. Steve Skolnik of Ridge Road asked about the legal status of additions built since 1988 that exceed the 25 percent threshold. Eichhorst said that she hopes they will be grandfathered. Eileen Sutkin of Ridge Road urged GHI to seek an exemption from the law since the corporation now has alternate review procedures in place.

Eichhorst had invited Peters to attend the meeting. Peters said that if GHI could come up with wording that it wants to exempt the cooperative from this provision, he could get legislation through fairly quickly. He offered to send a lawyer who drafts legislation to meet with GHI.

Eileen Farnham, of Ridge Road, asked whether anyone has looked into the legislative history and stated purpose of the

Yardlines, Site Plan Review Challenge GHI Membership

by Diane Oberg

It was almost like the old days. The May 19 Annual Meeting of the members of Greenbelt Homes, Inc., (GHI) featured controversial topics, hints of a villain, an overflow crowd and more board candidates than open positions for the first time in several years. With roughly 5 percent of inspected members receiving citations, the report from the Yard Police – excuse me, the report on the Community Beautification Program – was met with little more than a yawn. Instead, the hot topics were recommendations by the ad hoc yard line review committee and a 1988 law that appeared to single out old Greenbelt for extra regulatory hassle that had not previously been enforced.

Things started out quietly enough. Quorum requirements were not an issue – attendees far outnumbered chairs; those without seats sat quietly along the walls, in some spots two or three deep. Routine business was disposed of quickly. Board Chair Julia Eichhorst noted that the officers' reports were printed in the annual report. "Any questions?" she asked. Hearing none, she turned the gavel over to Nominations and Elections (N&E) Committee Chair Alan Turnbull. The N&E Committee had found three candidates for the audit committee, despite having none when the biographies were prepared for last week's News Review and Elizabeth Wellborn agreed to fill the final spot on the roster for the N&E Committee. (See box on page 7 for election results.) And Lora Katz, chair of the Woodlands Committee, reminded everyone to get their free plants. Then things got interesting.

Yard Lines

Don Hudson, chair of the ad hoc Yard Line Review Committee, described the work that his committee had done since last year. The charge to the committee, he said, was to resolve three problems: confusion during resale, confusion during the permitting process and how to deal with member encroachments onto woodlands and other common areas. In addition to Hudson, the committee consisted of Lora Katz, chair of the Woodlands Committee; Bill Wilkerson and John Nichols, co-chairs of the Architecture and Environment (A&E) Committee; and Susan Ready.

Hudson said that his committee had spent more than 500 hours on the pilot in which five courts on Ridge Road and one court on Hillside Road were reviewed. In making recommendations, the committee considered a variety of factors including the member handbook, the 1937 hedgelines, existing hedge and fencelines, yard plats and significant natural or manmade features, such as slopes and parking lots.

After the committee conducted a field survey, it used the factors described above to establish a preliminary yard plat for each unit in the pilot. It then sought member input and forwarded its recommendation to the board. The board would either certify the committee's recommended plat for a unit or return it to the committee for further consideration.

Of the 60 units in the pilot, the committee has presented 46 plats to the board. No plats have yet been certified.

Eichhorst stressed that this year's review was a pilot. She said that the board will discuss the issue further and determine how to proceed. She then asked for comments. And the members obliged.

Marat Moore, of 19 Court Hillside Road, protested what she called the proposed devaluation of her cooperative share without a vote. The plat developed by the committee proposed taking 40 percent or more of the garden side yards from the members in

2006 Budget

"Slim Pickings" for Council As it Works on the Budget

by Thomas X. White

The Greenbelt City Council met on Wednesday, May 18 for its final budget worksession on the city manager's proposed Fiscal Year 2006 budget. Starting at 8 p.m. and going to just after midnight, they looked everywhere either for increased revenue or reduced expenditures. But in the end they came up with savings of just $90,800.

That amount would shave a little more than one-half a penny off the proposed 6 cent tax rate increase proposed by the manager. Council asked City Manager Michael McLaughlin to follow up on some identified areas on the revenue side that could get them to saving a penny or more by the time the budget is adopted at the June 6 council meeting.

As identified or noted during the several departmental budget worksessions over the past eight weeks, several items that had been raised for further consideration during those sessions were projected on a screen for the meeting. These served as the council's agenda for action either to accept or reject potential candidate items for savings.

Some items were considered as givens; that is, the item was either based on realities identified during the budget process or items that a clear majority of council had accepted for change in the final budget. In this category on the revenue side was a reduction of $40,000 in expected Highway User Revenues from the state, based on decisions made by the governor in the budget adopted by the Maryland General Assembly.

Savings

On the expenditure side, council had already identified agreed savings of $36,300 from reductions in various budgets. Deleted was $5,000 for a city council visioning process and a savings of $300 resulted from

AIMCO Moves Quickly On Springhill Lake Plans

by Elaine Skolnik

The Greenbelt City Council will hold a worksession on the Springhill Lake Redevelopment (SHL) Concept Plan next Tuesday, May 31 at 8 p.m. in the Municipal Building's Council Chambers. On the following night, Wednesday, June 1 at 7:30 p.m., the concept plan will be the focus of the city's Advisory Planning Board (APB) meeting.

Attending both sessions will be representatives of Apartment Investment and Management Company (AIMCO), owner of the SHL apartments; and Duany Platter-Zyberg and Company (DPZ), the internationally recognized design firm located in Florida that planned the community of Kentlands in Gaithersburg. They will brief council and APB members on the concept plan which has already been filed and received by the Maryland-National Capital Park and Planning Commission (M-NCPPC) and respond to questions.

At the earlier May 9 city council meeting, Greenbelt's Planning and Community Development Director Celia Craze had pointed out AIMCO's "aggressive and ambitious" schedule to move ahead quickly. She said it was critical for council to develop its position, recommendations and concerns with respect to the concept plan, which was based on a density of 4,500 apartment units.

Presently, less than 3,000 units

THANKS

On Sunday, May 8 the Greenbelt Boys and Girls Club (GBGC) teams held their end-of-spring-season awards party and BBQ at Schrom Hills Park. The all-day event was attended by more than 200 players, parents and family members.

Coaches from five girls and four boys teams presented their players with soccer trophies. Coaches' awards were presented to eight head coaches by Commissioner Kim Paz. Players from the University of Maryland soccer team were on hand to encourage the youth of Greenbelt to stick with the sport so they too could possibly be the recipients of sports scholarships some day in the future. The fun-filled day was complete with several parent vs. player games, good food and lots of fun for all.

The GBGC would like to acknowledge and thank the following for their donations: Crescent Road Mini-Mart, Ramon Paz and Georgetown Prep School of Bethesda, Greenbelt Co-op, Beltway Plaza Giant, Greenbelt Safeway, Beltway Plaza 3-Brothers Restaurant, Beltway Trophy and Party City. Also special thanks to Coach Sasho Girovski, Mark Burch and Jason Garey from the University of Maryland Men's Soccer team, Greg Varda of the Greenbelt Recreation Department, Anita Woodruff of CJM Photography Services as well as all the volunteer coaches, team parents, parents and players who made my first season as soccer commissioner a success.

The event was a big success due to the above businesses and people making donations to the community and its youth.

On Screen

"Walk on Water" Opens

The riveting Israeli film "Walk on Water" opens at the Old Greenbelt Theatre Friday, May 27. A troubled Mossad assassin (Lior Ashkenazi) is assigned to track and kill an aged Nazi figure missing from his post-World War II refuge in South America. First contact: a sophisticated grandson from Berlin (Knut Berger) visiting his alienated sister (Carolina Peters) in the kibbutz where she has moved. A complex play of character and sharply-edged ethical concerns drives matters in tightly-limned settings from Israel to Berlin and back, after a start in Istanbul. Director Eytan Fox leads a cast of superb actors with intensity and cool command. Unrated, the film – 94 minutes – contains violence, obscenity, nudity and some discussion of sexuality. A powerful early candidate for foreign film honors at Oscar time.

comprise the SHL apartment development. These will be torn down and replaced with new apartment units and townhouses. Not only will apartments be replaced but also the city's Springhill Lake Recreation Center and the Springhill Lake Elementary School. However, the fate of the school will be decided by the Prince George's County School Board. The concept plan proposes a small number of owner-occupied town homes.

Craze was concerned about AIMCO's fast-tracking of the process. The company's redevelopment schedule envisioned that the concept plan would be heard by the board of the M-NCPPC on July 1. A design charette for design professionals and limited to architectural issues has been scheduled for July 15.

M-NCPPC Planner Coordinator Gary Wagner told the News Review that a hearing on the concept plan would probably occur in mid-July. Expected changes in the schedule for a later hearing date before the Planning Board and for the charette would give the city council, staff and APB more time to study the concept plan and provide their input and recommendations.

Mishkan Torah Honors Long Term Teacher

On May 21 Congregation Mishkan Torah held a friendly roast of Saul Oresky, a member of the congregation who tutored bar and bat mitzvah students for the past 28 years. Oresky has been accepted as a full-time student at the Reconstructionist Rabbinical College (RRC) in Wincote, Pa. There he will begin a five-year course of study to become ordained as a rabbi and receive a masters degree in Hebrew literature.

Students from the 1970s up to this year were there to do him humorous honors. Over 200 people attended. Through it all, Oresky's laid back humor was exhibited – the humor which endeared him to Mishkan Torah's members and to his students. Oresky received many words of praise, mementos and awards, one of which was the establishment of a scholarship fund to help Oresky pay for tuition at RRC.

Greenbelters were saddened to learn of the death of former long-time Greenbelter Rubye Virginia Mikesell, who died in Blackfoot, Idaho, on May 17, 2005.

Army National Guard Spec. Michael J. Chiddo, an infantry driver with three years' military service, the son of Michael and Janice Chiddo of Mathew Street, recently completed desert warfare combat training at the National Training Center (NTC) in Fr. Irwin, Calif. Chiddo is a member of Bravo Company, 1st Battalion, 115th Infantry Regiment based in Olney. The desert training site, located in southern California in the Mojave Desert, provides rugged terrain and environment to provide a realistic and grueling test for troops of the 48th Brigade Combat Team in preparation for deployments to Iraq. He was a 2002 graduate of Free State Challenge Academy in Aberdeen, Md.

A U.S. Military Academy representative congratulated twin brother high school seniors James and Joseph Fasone on May 17 at the 2005 Eleanor Roosevelt High School Awards Ceremony on receiving admission into West Point, NY. Applicants to West Point are evaluated on academic, physical and leadership potential and are appointed to the Academy by their congressional representative.

Congressman Steny Hoyer appointed the brothers, who will join around 1,200 incoming students who enter the Academy on Reception Day each year, around July 1.

Congratulations to big brother Younes Slaoui, 2, of Ridge Rd. who welcomed sister Houada into his family on May 6, 2005. Houada weighed in at 7 lbs. 11 oz. Parents Pauline and Radouane are delighted to have a new daughter. Grandmothers Agnes Finn from Los Alamos, N. What is Islam?

In today's busy world, have our personal interests overtaken our moral virtues or will we still stand for the truth? Justice is one of the greatest virtues in Islam.

"O ye who believe, stand out firmly for justice, as witnesses to God, even as against yourselves, or your parents, or your kin, and whether it be against rich or poor: for God can best protect both. Follow not the lusts (of your hearts), lest ye swerve, and if ye distort (justice) or decline to do justice, verily God is well acquainted with all that ye do."

When Eichhorst asked for a show of cards to see how many members support excluding GHI from CB-134-1988, the vote was so one-sided that she declared it a clear majority and did not call for a count.

Peters said that he would introduce legislation on May 24 (that can be amended in committee) to exempt GHI from this requirement. Although Peters expected to attend the May 23 regular Greenbelt City Council meeting, the issue was not discussed there.

History

CB-134-1988 was passed during the review of the county master plan for Greenbelt and College Park. Originally the M-NCPPC proposed eliminating the Residential Planned Community (RPC) zoning overlay that had governed the city's zoning. At that time the Greenbelt City Council was concerned that eliminating this overlay would open the door to higher densities in parts of the city. GHI was concerned that such a change would make its units a "nonconforming use," which would require all proposed changes to undergo detailed site plan review.

This article is based largely upon a review of various documents (News Review stories, city council and GHI minutes and materials) and a limited number of interviews with GHI and committee sources. As such, it represents a preliminary look at the issues.

In 1988 the city did not yet own the woodlands known as Parcel 1 and Parcel 2, located between GHI, Ridge Road and the Baltimore-Washington Parkway near Northway. Residents were concerned that the proposed master plan would allow for higher density development of existing open space and that, some time in the future, it could be used to allow higher density redevelopment of existing areas of the city.

The former Greenbelt mayor, Richard Castaldi, then headed the County Council's Planning and Zoning Committee. He introduced legislation that would retain the city's coveted RPC overlay. However, during the master plan discussions, it was determined that much of the original city had been removed from the RPC zone through piecemeal rezonings. No zoning plan for the RPC zone had ever been formally adopted by the county. CB-134-1988 adopted the master plan as the official RPC zone and required that any development occurring after January 1, 1989, undergo detailed site plan review.

This had pluses and minuses from the city's perspective. Prior to its adoption, no site plan review was required for developments such as that proposed for Parcels 1 and 2. CB-134-1988 changed that, providing additional development safeguards. On the other hand, homeowners who wanted to improve their properties would now be subjected to additional legal requirements.

At the November 17, 1988, board meeting, GHI General Manager Ronald Colton suggested that this review not be required for additions that are 25 percent or less of the total floor space of the home. The board directed Colton to try to negotiate an amendment to the legislation "which would exempt as many additions as possible from Planning Board Review."

Back to Present

At its December 2004 meeting, the board of directors suspended review of all addition requests for 60 days to allow the Architecture & Environment (A&E) Committee to review GHI's rules for additions, particularly as the rules are affected by the proposed Historic District

Guidelines.

The GHI membership has voted to seek Historic District status for central Greenbelt. The city is still reviewing this request and has recommended some changes to the guidelines drafted by GHI. No application has yet been made to the county's Historic Preservation Commission, which will have the final say.

In January the board extended the freeze for six months and directed the A&E Committee to provide a proposal for reviewing GHI rules. In February the board approved the committee's proposal for the CLEAR Project (Clarify Language Eliminating Ambiguous Rules) and directed them to provide a proposal at the July board meeting. The board also exempted requests in compliance with current guidelines from the moratorium.

In the course of investigating external constraints (such as city and county law), the committee came across the 1988 law. Initial inquiries indicated that it did not apply to GHI, according to a May 23 letter from A&E Co-Chairs Bill Wilkerson and John Nichols to GHI President Julia Eichhorst.

Upon further inquiry to the county, they found that county maps still showed GHI as a federally-owned project. (It has not been federally owned since the 1950s.) As a result, applications for GHI additions were being approved by the county without review, since federal projects are exempt from county zoning regulations. Now, aware of their mistake, the county put a hold on all GHI applications for building permits while they reviewed the relevant laws and their procedures.

On April 27 Wilkerson briefed GHI staff and Eichhorst on their findings. The issue was scheduled for board discussion on Thursday May 26.

After the Meeting

The precise impact of this legislation on GHI members and homeowners elsewhere in the RPC-zoned area is not yet clear. One thing that is clear is that the relationship between the board (or at least the board chair) and the A&E Committee (or at least its chairs) has been damaged.

On Monday, May 23, A&E Co-chair John Nichols emailed a letter to Peters expressing his "vehement opposition to what appears to be a thoughtless rush to action to effectively rescind CB-134-1988 . . ." He urged "your restraint in pursuing a rescission of CB-134-1988." Greenbelt's mayor, city council, the GHI Board and two newspapers received copies.

Later that same day, Nichols and Wilkerson sent a five-page letter to Eichhorst, copied to the city, various county planning officials, Peters and the two newspapers that protested Eichhorst's handling of the issue at the annual meeting. They protested presenting this issue to the membership prior to any substantive board review and without accurate information on its background.

Wilkerson and Nichols said "it appears that a campaign of misinformation was conducted at the annual meeting which misled the membership about the zoning requirement. The statements made by you [Eichhorst] at the annual meeting directly conflict with the information presented to you and the staff on April 27, 2005. Inaccurate statements made by others went unchallenged by the chair."

Wilkerson and Nichols stated that Eichhorst's reaction to this briefing "was to question the motives of the subcommittee members' actions and to characterize the appropriateness of the research as conducted without board permission."

Blood Donors Badly Needed

As the Memorial Day holiday approaches, the Greater Chesapeake & Potomac (GC&P) Blood Services Region of the American Red Cross reports a significant decline in blood appointments. A strong and immediate response from community blood donors is imperative so that the needs of patients in local hospitals can be met in the days leading up to and following the holiday weekend. Appointments are available at all community blood donor centers and blood drives and can be obtained by calling 1-800-GIVE-LIFE. Platelet donors are critically needed as well and are asked to call 1-800-272-2123.

As a special token of appreciation, between May 23 and June 5, the American Red Cross will present all participants at all community donor centers and blood drives with a commemorative T-shirt in honor of the Memorial Day holiday. Further information about the blood donation process, as well as a complete listing of donor centers and community blood drives is available by visiting the GC&P Region online at <http://www.myredcross.org>.

The American Red Cross strongly encourages businesses and community groups to schedule and organize blood drives. Any groups interested in scheduling a drive or obtaining further information are asked to call 1-800-787-9282, ext. 4925.

Eichhorst, who had just received the Wilkerson-Nichols letter Tuesday night after work, responded to the News Review's earlier phone call asking for a comment. "Right now emotions are high and we need time to sit down and think," she told the News Review. "The board will be meeting Thursday night. The issue before us is the members and what the members want for their co-op."

her court. Some of her neighbors were to lose more than half their yards under the committee's proposal. In addition to the loss of land, Moore objected to the lack of involvement of the residents and the short time they were given to respond to the proposal. She noted that clearly drawn yard plats provided to the residents during settlement were not being honored. She urged members in other courts to make sure they have their property plats and urged that the committee be disbanded.

Bill Phelan, of Ridge Road, noted that members in end-unit frame homes were subject to a rule that limits their yards to 25 feet. This rule, he noted, does not apply to other types of units. He asked the board candidates for their positions on the "corporate encroachment" described by Moore and on the 25-foot rule.

Kris White, of 14 Court Hillside, called the committee's approach to the yard line issue a waste of time and energy. For the committee to spend over 500 hours on a pilot is "beyond the pale," she said. The emphasis was supposed to be on encroachments into woodlands and city property, issues that affect a relatively small number of units. She also expressed concern that GHI would not honor a member's plat.

Eichhorst said that the board is still considering how it wants to proceed with the yard line review and urged members to be involved. She noted that 400 units do not have a previous, certified plat and that there are units that are encroaching on the city right-of-way. Of the board candidates who addressed Phelan's question, all felt that GHI must respect members' plats.

A 1988 law that appeared, from the discussion, to single out old Greenbelt for special limitations on additions became a very hot item. (See separate story.)

During the discussion, the role of an unnamed member of the A&E Committee in bringing the issue to the county's attention became a source of friction.

Phelan charged that the A&E Committee had drifted into something not as diverse as the community. Although frame homes have different issues than other units - "There is nothing historic about the barracks-like structure I live in," he noted that just two of the 11 committee members live in frame homes.

Phelan moved "that the board be directed, on an advisory basis by the membership, that the A&E Committee be dissolved and reconstituted to represent a more balanced, diverse group of people to represent the community." He then accepted the amendment by Kiki Theodopolus to amend the motion to reflect diversity of thought.

Andy Carruthers of Gardenway called the motion impulsive and imprecise. He suggested more caution and consideration before taking this step. Theodopolus suggested there be a worksession on the topic. Holly Wheeler urged the members not to disband a committee when GHI depends upon the hard work of its volunteers.

Phelan's motion received just 27 votes. Eichhorst declared the "No" votes to be a clear majority and did not require a count.

Pet Regulations

Kris White, chair of the Companion Animal Committee, reported on the new regulations approved by the board and distributed to members this year. The new regulations change terminology (for example, "animal companion" replaces "pet," "guardian" replaces "owner") and attempt to address the most frequent causes of complaints - barking dogs and dogs and cats running loose. Two of the new regulations, White noted, go beyond city and county code and the national model. Under the new GHI regulations, 1) all pets must be sheltered inside the home whenever the owner is not at home and 2) tethering or chaining an animal is prohibited at all times. White said that the Humane Society of the United States and the U.S. Department of Agriculture both consider tethering inhumane. She said that animals are usually tethered due to failure by the guardian to properly train the animal and that tethered animals may become aggressive since they cannot flee a perceived threat.

Member Survey

Last year, the A&E Committee conducted a member survey. Bill Wilkerson, co-chair of that committee, reported that 25 percent of units had responded. The results distributed to members showed that 267 of those responding felt that sheds do not detract from the community's appearance, while 102 said they did (247 of the respondents had sheds). When asked if "the large variety of fence types in GHI diminish community appearance, 305 said no vs. 60 yes (200 of the respondents had fences). And 47 respondents said that trash piles in common areas did not erode GHI's curb appeal vs. 333 who said they do.

Member Payments

Within the next few months, GHI will no longer process member payments in house. Instead, members not participating in the "automatic payment plan" will be asked to send their checks, with an accompanying coupon, to a bank. GHI Treasurer Sylvia Lewis said that members will still be able to bring their payments, with the coupon, to GHI for delivery to the bank. To encourage participation, Lewis said, GHI will hold quarterly drawings among participants with the winner getting a $200 credit toward their GHI fee. New enrollees signing up by June 30 will get two chances in the October drawing, she said.

Doug Love, of Plateau Place, expressed his appreciation for GHI continuing to allow members to take their payments to GHI. He was concerned that in the future members will be forced into the automatic payment plan. Having been a victim of identity theft, he does not want anyone having access to his checking account.

Jason Hawkins Is Honored With Craig Scholarship

by Shamla Shakir

High School Senior Jason Jerome Hawkins said he was "completely floored" when the David R.S. Craig Memorial Scholarship Fund presented him with an $8,000 scholarship May 17 at the 2005 Eleanor Roosevelt High School Awards Ceremony. The scholarship, which is awarded annually to an outstanding senior at the Eleanor Roosevelt High School in Greenbelt, gives recipients $2,000 per year for four years.

Hawkins, a tall, friendly 18-year-old from Lanham had been asked to attend the ceremony but remained uninformed as to what award he would receive.

"I was caught off guard," Hawkins said, describing his reaction to Scholarship Fund Committee member Bruce Mangum calling him onstage to accept a check for $2,000.

"When he heard his name, he didn't know what to do," said his mother, Felicia "Faye" Hawkins who attended the event to support her youngest son. She added, "We're just very excited and grateful."

The motto of the David R.S. Craig Memorial Scholarship fund is "well-rounded, well-rewarded," President Doug Mangum said.

"We're not looking for 4.0 students," he added. "We're not interested in just one thing."

Candidates should be actively involved in the community, school, church (of any religion) and sports and demonstrate academic, religious and community values. Mangum said, "Jason was a very, very deserving candidate."

Hawkins fits the motto well. In his spare time he volunteers at the Rhema Christian Center, he serves as vice-president of his school's local chapter of the National Society of Black Engineers Jr., he is a member of Eleanor Roosevelt's track and field team, as well as part of the improv comedy team Aloniz - and these are just a few of his extracurricular activities. Mangum said he especially liked that Hawkins acted in a school production of "One Flew over the Cuckoo's Nest."

The National Honor Roll student said he plans to major in economics at Carnegie Mellon University in Pennsylvania so he can "get a job."

"But I'm definitely coming back [to Greenbelt] after college," he added.

When asked what his inspiration to succeed is, Hawkins pointed to Faye. "Because she always worked so hard."

The scholarship fund was set up in 1985 in memory of David R.S. Craig, an Eleanor Roosevelt High School alumnus killed by a train in Beltsville in 1984. Mangum, who graduated with Craig in 1979, described him as "the kind of guy that made sure people didn't feel left out," a person who was active in school, church and enjoyed sports."

The committee, made up mostly of friends and family of Craig as well as a few past recipients of the scholarship, look for similar traits in potential winners.

Interested Eleanor Roosevelt High School seniors can pick up an application for the scholarship at the guidance office. Applications must be received by April 30.

Sports, Arts, Exhibits Will Mark Greenbelt Day, June 5

by Mary Moien

On Greenbelt Day, June 5, Greenbelt is celebrating its 68th anniversary. This annual celebration includes a full weekend of activities and festivities starting early Friday, June 3 and continuing through Sunday evening. The Greenbelt City Charter became effective on June 1, 1937, although residents did not begin moving into the new town until the first family moved in the end of September. The mayor and city council members will commemorate the 68th anniversary with a brief presentation on Sunday at 2:50 p.m. at the Community Center.

Every day there will be many activities to enjoy. One can swim all weekend in both the indoor and outdoor pools and take in the ball games at Braden and McDonald Fields with players ranging from Little League to parents versus coaches to a seniors exhibition softball game.

The Greenbelt Police Department is hosting the United States Police Canine Association certification trials on Friday and Saturday at Schrom Hills Park. The Greenbelt Photo Club will have an exhibit at the Aquatic Center – “Small Wonders; Images for Spring.” This will also be the final weekend for the Nature of Green Man art exhibit in the Community Center Gallery, featuring works of more than 20 local artists. Also in the Community Center will be a Greenbelt Museum Exhibition, “Living the Healthy Life: Sports, Health and Fitness in the New Deal Era.”

A family swim night from 8 to 10 p.m. at the outdoor pool will be the highlight of Saturday evening.

Sunday, Greenbelt Day

Many activities are concentrated on Greenbelt Day itself – Sunday, June 5. Greenbelt Homes, Inc. (GHI) will hold a Home & Garden Tour featuring remodeling and renovation projects as well as landscaped gardens. Walking tour maps will be available at the Community Center. The Greenbelt Museum historic house at 10-B Crescent Road will be open for visitors.

At Greenbelt Artful Afternoon an art project will be hosted for all to join in at the Community Center. Participants will create whimsical sculptures that will later be used for the July 4th celebrations at Buddy Attick park. No experience is necessary to participate. (See article on page 5.)

Many of the artists-in-residence at the Community Center will have studio open houses that afternoon. Following Mayor Judith Davis’ comments on the 68th anniversary, there will be a performance of Japanese Dance, Kotobuki Kai. This presentation, for the entire family, will also be at the Community Center.

The weekend festivities end with a reception at the New Deal Café on Sunday night. The Friends of the New Deal Café Arts will be sponsoring a reception for two Greenbelt artists whose works will be on display. The community is invited to come and meet photographer Dorian Winterfeld and artist Shirl Hayes.

(The back page of this issue lists the full schedule of events for Greenbelt Day weekend.)

sharing an expenditure for legal counsel with the City of Laurel. Other savings were $20,000 in police vehicle purchase costs by buying less expensive Chevrolet Impalas instead of Ford Crown Victorias. Another $9,000 was saved by council’s agreement with the Public Works recommendation to discontinue the use of biodiesel fuel and $2,000 by closing the Community Center at 7 p.m. on Sundays.

Based on information provided by the city manager at the meeting the unexpected retirement of a long-time recreation coordinator would realize savings of $15,000 because her replacement would be hired at entry level. That brought the total expenditure savings up to $51,300 without controversy.

Left were the more difficult items that had been raised during previous work sessions and deferred to this one for decision. If council agreed to make these changes to the budget in addition to the $51,300 already agreed upon, the total savings would have amounted to $301,500, just over a 2 cent reduction in the proposed tax rate increase. However, that was not to be.

There was at least three more hours of discussion on the pros and cons for each of the items and some were accepted by a majority of council, some were not and some other items were thrown into the mix. The outcome was that the council fell short of even a penny savings.

Positions Stated

Mayor Judith Davis made her feelings known at the start. She told her colleagues, “I would like to find reductions that would allow up to a 2 cent decrease in the manager’s budget, making sure that no city department suffered disproportionately, while restoring the 85 percent/15 percent split for employees health benefits.” In order to realize that goal, council would have to find approximately $350,000 in budget savings. ($290,000 for the 2 cent reduction in the tax rate and $60,000 for maintaining the status quo on the health benefits.

Councilmember Rodney Roberts indicated that he was interested in maintaining the health benefits but he wanted to do that by not hiring any new employees in the budget.

Councilmember Leta Mach said that she wanted to allow the hiring for the employee slots authorized in last year’s budget. “I cannot see a 2-cent decrease. Some decrease is possible, but looking at the long term structural problem, I just cannot see how we can do 2 cents,” she said.

Councilmember Edward Putens wanted to know where you could cut. “I am not in favor of reducing . . . [the budget]. We knew it was going to happen and it was planned for,” he asserted.

McLaughlin held out some hope that County Councilmember

Council Actions

In reviewing the departmental budgets along with the list of items needing decisions, council made the following determinations:

- Sending only one member of council to out of town conferences at a savings of $11,000 was rejected.
 - Less glossy printing/photos for the budget document to save $1,500 was also rejected.
 - Adding a fourth code enforcement inspector position was supported at a cost of $40,000.
 - The council did not support the purchase of an eighth police vehicle ($23,000) but agreed to change the red light camera system technology to digital which would add revenues for the city of $20,000.
 - Reducing funds in the Public Works budgets for building contract maintenance ($15,000) and streets contract maintenance ($6,200) were not approved, but removing planters at Roosevelt Center ($1,500) was approved.
 - Neither adding a half-time CARES counselor ($25,000) nor funding a strengthening families CARES program ($15,000) were approved.
 - The unfilled recreation center coordinator position at $40,000 was approved for budget elimination but a proposal to fund the position for just a half-year received the necessary third vote for a net budget reduction of $20,000.
 - There was no support for reducing the budget for grounds maintenance by $5,000 but a proposed additional playground maintenance position ($32,000) was deleted from the budget.
 - McLaughlin was unable to convince council that it should use Program Open Space grant funds to help pay for the new skateboard park which would have reduced using other city funds by $135,000.
 - Council then rejected the manager’s proposal to require city employees to pay a larger percentage of their health insurance benefit costs which added $60,000 to the budget.
 - Council agreed to fund contributions to organizations aided by the city at the same level as this year, the amount proposed in the budget.
 - In the Capital Projects budget, council agreed to reduce the amount proposed for roadway improvements by $40,000 taking into consideration the expected reduction in state highway revenues that are used to fund road improvements. Council also reduced the amount of general funds transferred to the Capital Projects Fund by $66,000 resulting in another budget reduction.
- In the final analysis, the net savings for the evening amounted to $90,800. With possible revenue increases if the county decides to fund the Greenbelt SRO program and if the Maryland Comptroller’s office accelerates income tax distributions to local governments. Whether those windfalls occur in time to influence the final budget is unknown.

ERHS’ LaRusso Awarded Credit Union Scholarship

by Marbury Wethered

Eleanor Roosevelt High School senior Adam LaRusso has received some welcome news. Educational Systems Federal Credit Union has notified LaRusso that he is one of five college-bound high schoolers who will receive its 2005 Dorothy Marvil Memorial Scholarships.

Adam LaRusso

The young Berwyn Heights resident won his scholarship by writing an essay on the topic “What steps will I take to secure my financial future?” His essay and those submitted by the many other students who had heard about the scholarships were reviewed by a committee that included former teachers and members of the Educational Systems Federal Credit Union Board of Directors.

Participation in the competition was limited to high school seniors who met Educational Systems Federal Credit Union’s membership criteria. Since all Prince George’s County Public Schools students and their immediate family members are now eligible to join the credit union, LaRusso had no trouble qualifying.

LaRusso says he will use his $1,000 scholarship to attend the University of Maryland, where he plans to major in architecture. If he replicates his academic performance at Roosevelt, he will excel at Maryland. At Roosevelt, his scholastic achievements earned him membership in the National Honor Society.

Douglas J.J. Peters may come up with some funding support for Greenbelt’s School Resource Officer (SRO) program, since the county is funding SROs for other parts of the county. He also is expecting action by the Maryland Comptroller on an early distribution to local governments of their share of state income tax revenues. He could not say for certain that these increased revenues would be realized before council has to make a decision on the budget, but he will provide any news to council as soon as it is received.

Citizen Comments

Citizen input at the final budget work session came mostly at the end of the meeting. Clement Lau expressed appreciation to the council for working so hard on the budget but he was disappointed that council “. . . did not find enough cuts. After talking with my neighbors, I am concerned that an up to $500 increase in city taxes for people retired or on a single income could drive people away (from Greenbelt).”

Marc Siegal noted that for the long term, council has to look for more reductions and for increased user fees for city programs and services.

Earlier in the evening Robert Zugby, president of Greenbelt Access Television, Inc., (GATE) noted that for the third year in a row, the city has arbitrarily reduced the city’s agreed upon level of contributions to support GATE and asked that council make an effort to restore the committed funds. Council while sympathetic was reluctant to commit to restoration until it saw what the final budget condition was.

Once inside, the men pistol-whipped the residents and took money, cell phones and a laptop computer. One of the victims was transported by ambulance to the hospital for treatment of a head laceration. The suspects are described as two black males both 20 to 25 years of age with black hair and brown eyes. One was 6' to 6'2", 125 to 150 pounds, wearing black pants and a black-hooded sweatshirt. The second was 5'6" to 5'8", 200 to 250 pounds, wearing blue jeans and a blue-hooded sweatshirt.

The suspect advised the victim to follow him into the building's laundry room in order for the suspect to plug the phone into an outlet. Once inside the laundry room, the suspect produced a handgun and took a necklace from the victim and also attempted to sexually assault him. The victim then pushed the suspect away and fled the scene on foot. The suspect allegedly fired a shot toward the victim as he exited the building but it did not strike him. dreadlocks wearing a camouflage shirt.

May 19, 5:16 p.m., Beltway Plaza Mall, a man reported that while walking in the rear parking lot a black pickup truck came to a sudden stop. He was knocked to the ground, punched and kicked by four black males and held down while they searched his pockets and took currency. The victim then heard tires screech and saw the black pickup truck fleeing toward Cherrywood Lane.

May 19, 7:48 p.m., 100 block of Westway, a woman reported that when she answered a knock at her door, two men displayed a silver-colored automatic style handgun and asked for a person by name. When the woman responded that she did not know where that person was, the men demanded her purse. The woman said that there was nothing in her purse and the men fled the scene in a white, two-door Ford Thunderbird. The suspects are described as two black males, ages unknown, one 5'7", with brown short hair, thin beard, dark complexion and brown eyes, wearing a gray colored sweat-shirt. The second had brown hair and eyes and was wearing a green colored T-shirt.

Spring's Last Blasts, Summer's First Fruits

by Lady Aster and Miss Lily

As we say "Ta Ta" to spring and welcome summer this Memorial Day weekend take advantage of the extra time to do a few garden things. Explore the plant nurseries and farmers' markets in the area – you can get a list of Maryland's farmers' markets at <http://www.ams.usda.gov/farmersmarkets/States/Maryland.htm>. Buy a new perennial to add to your garden family and mulch that last bed in the corner of the yard. And as you walk off your celebratory hot dogs and chips, check out the array of blooming plants that are still making a show around Greenbelt.

on varieties that would do well in your garden as well as information on how to grow clematis, see the American Clematis Society's website at www.clematis.org.

Although they are fading a bit, you can still enjoy the heady fragrance of the wonderful species of rose in the island of the Co-op parking lot. The dense floral scent is enhanced by dozens of fist-size blooms each having layers of deep fuchsia petals. There are equally impressive displays of bearded, Dutch and Siberian irises blooming around the community (many with contrasting standards and falls) in addition to a soon-to-pop peony population. If peonies are at the top of your plant list, a "must see" is the incredible display at the National Arboretum's Boxwood Garden. This wonderful, almost-local garden should be on everyone's list to visit throughout the year. For more information and directions see their website at <http://www.usna.usda.gov/>.

Now that all the trees and shrubs are once again embracing us in their verdant leafy arms and the bawdy azaleas have slipped into the background, one of the most impressive collections of local color to seek and enjoy are the clematis. These vines are wriggling across fences, up trellises and along porch eaves with flowers in blues, pinks, rubies and whites – and stripes! Whether you say "clematis," "cle-mah-tis" or "clem-itis," this profusely blooming and incredibly diverse group of vines, which are members of the buttercup family, is in need of being explored and exploited.

To see what we mean, compare the different clematis growing at 6 Court Crescent Road. Another comparison can be made along the fence at 3 Court or the trellis at 13 Court Ridge. And in case you are interested there is an evergreen version (C. "Armandi") and a fall-blooming native that is fragrant (C. virginiana). This last species is a good example of why it pays to use the botanical name because the same common name – Sweet Autumn Clematis – is used for the non-native C. terniflora. For more information

In case you're in need of a small tree (or large shrub) for your garden that is a bit unusual, check out the White Fringe Tree (Chionanthus virginicus) that is blooming just west of the corner of Parkway and Crescent Roads. This particularly showy native – and fragrant – tree is in glorious full bloom. If you take time to look at the flowers you won't be surprised that another common name for this tree is Grancy Greybeard.

Quote of the Month: "Flowers are sunshine, food and medicine to the soul." – Luther Burbank

(In case you don't know the name, Luther Burbank (1849-1926) is considered one of the world's foremost plant breeders who introduced the Shasta daisy and the Russet Burbank potato, better known as the Idaho potato.)

Greenbelt Community Gardens Unite Generations

by Susan Stern

Even if things run amuck, you won't stop the community garden clean up across from the GHI offices! Saturday, April 30 brought lots of rain, mud and almost 20 gardeners traipsing through the muddy trails with plastic, glass, metal, rubber and other trash collected from the gardens and surrounding areas. This marked the annual "tailgate party" with the city trash truck.

This event at the community gardens unites generations. Father and daughter teams included John Henry Jones (fondly known as the Garden Captain) and daughter Coritta, Wayne and Becky Williams and Craig and Ursula Tooley. From age 76 down to 12, all gardeners had fun uniting and helping each other beautify the gardens.

John Henry is a pioneer of the garden with 15 years at this present area. You can tell by the rich, dark soil in his plot! Popular now in this unplowed section of the community gardens are organic methods – feed the soil, not the plants. Leaf mulch, available at Northway Fields, is one ingredient for composting and building a healthy soil and garden.

Sustainable methods like composting allow gardeners to raise fresh, nutritious vegetables. Raising children in this natural way also provides healthy outcomes! Successful gardening requires hard work and patience but provides the great reward of learning from nature.

Gardener Joey Murray helped demonstrate working with nature when he taught how to make rope from the bark of a tree that had to be trimmed. Renata Atkinson discovered a robin's nest with eggs while clearing an overgrown fence. She and Joey artfully wove branches to restore a sense of cover. Garden Area Coordinator, Susan Stern, demonstrated water saving by filling buckets from the irrigation channels active from the rain. By the end of the day, John Henry observed one inch of rain in his gauge. Even if it rained a lot, it was a day made beautiful by the shining smiles of the gardeners.

The community garden is a respite for many local residents including, from top: Kuan Hsu, John Henry Jones and daughter Coritta and Craig and Ursula Tooley.

Field Day at BARC

On Saturday, June 4 the Agricultural Research Service, Henry A. C2005 BILL CORNETT

For photographer Bill Cornett, Greenbelt holds an endless array of creative opportunities. Cornett found these two beavers grooming each other near the bridge at the base of the peninsula on Greenbelt Lake last Tuesday. The beavers continued their affectionate behavior even as various groups of onlookers stopped to view the proceedings, halting only when startled by mallards taking off nearby. They were there off and on from sunup to sundown.

Museum Lecture Explores American Wedding Customs

by Katie Scott-Childress

On Sunday, June 5 at 4 p.m. the Greenbelt Museum will host the lecture "Something Old, Something New: Inventing the American Wedding" in the Community Center Multi-Purpose Room 201. In this lecture Alden O'Brien, curator of Costume and Textiles for the D.A.R. Museum in Washington, D.C., will explore the origins of wedding traditions in the United States.

Traditions such as a white gown and veil for the bride, a cake-cutting ceremony and tossing a bouquet seem to be age-old customs, yet most of them were invented during the Victorian Age as a combination of Christian, Jewish, pagan and royal traditions. Religious symbolism and fashion coincided in the choice of the white gown. Folklore and superstition were the source of other traditions.

O'Brien explores the history of wedding customs through diaries, fashion plates, photographs and paintings from the Revolutionary period to the Jazz Age. This illustrated lecture will highlight wedding fashions from 1920 to 1940.

O'Brien has curated numerous exhibits at the D.A.R. Museum including the popular "Costume Myths and Mysteries" which featured a room full of period reproduction corsets and hoops to try on. Last year she curated "Something Old, Something New: Inventing the American Wedding." Two years ago she assumed curatorship of the D.A.R.'s well-known quilt collection. She frequently gives lectures on the history of costume.

The Greenbelt Museum sponsors a bi-monthly lecture series that is free to the public. The lectures explore aspects of the history of the Great Depression and World War II era. For more information call the museum office at 301-507-6582 or email museum@greenbeltmd.gov.

Bus Tour Will Revisit Slave Adam Francis Plummer Sites

Many African American histories can only be speculated about, but the Riversdale estate has a well-documented story of one, that of Adam Francis Plummer. This patriarch of a family who became pillars of the African American community in Prince George's County, Adam Plummer was born into slavery. He grew up at Riversdale, learned to read and write and recorded events of his life in a diary. He wrote of his tribulations and triumphs through slavery into freedom in the 19th century.

On Saturday, June 18, a bus tour will follow Plummer's experiences from plantations to homestead. The day begins with a tour of Riversdale at 8:30 a.m. Other sites include Kingdom Missionary Baptist Church where daughter Sarah Miranda founded a congregation in 1866; Harmony

Memorial Park where many of the family are laid to rest; Mount Hebron in Howard County where Plummer's wife, Emily, was taken in 1855; and a final visit to the site of Mount Rose, the family homestead in present-day Edmonston.

The bus returns to Riversdale at 4 p.m. The Rev. L. Jerome Fowler, a great-great grandson of Adam Francis Plummer, and historian Susan Pearl will lead the tour. A fee includes travel by motorcoach, box lunch and morning snack and admission fees. Advance reservations are required by June 6.

Riversdale, a National Historic Landmark, is located at 4811 Riverdale Road in the town of Riverdale Park. For more information or reservations call 301-864-0420; TTY 301-699-2544. Website: <http://www.pgparcs.com>; email Riversdale@pgparcs.com.

Octava Piano Duo Plays For Enthusiastic Audience

by Judy Bell

The Octava Piano Duo delighted our town once again on a balmy April 17 evening, performing in concert for approximately 125 enthusiastic listeners at the Greenbelt Community Church.

Wei-Der Huang, the church's organist and musical director and Hsien-Ann Meng played piano four-hand and included the works of Beethoven, Thome, Rachmaninoff, 20th-century composers William Gaither and John Corigliano and a playful P.D.Q. Bach sonata in their diverse program.

A well-blended interplay between the organ and piano was evidenced in Thome's "Andante Religioso," a serene piece by a composer described as a neat, refined artist. The instruments complemented each other and the use of the chimes was an added touch.

The "Sonata in D Major, Op. 6" by Beethoven was played in perfect unison. Each year the duo continues to grow and this piece particularly demonstrated their talent for piano four-hand.

Octava brings energy and excitement to their work, as demonstrated in Corigliano's "Gazebo Dances," at times played with overlapping hands, interweaving the moods and textures of energy, serenity and gaiety throughout this work. The suite concluded with a tarantella, a lively and fast dance believed by some to be a remedy for one that has been bitten by the tarantula.

P.D.Q. Bach, a persona invented by the American composer, arranger and humorist Peter Schickele, lampoons Baroque and classical music. In the second movement of the "Sonata Innamorata, S. 1+1" Octava performed a surprise move – switching positions midstream – accomplished through Meng kneeling down, continuing to play her part, while Huang moved around behind her, also continuing to play, with the duo switching back later in the movement. They also turned and faced the audiences and made kissing sounds, adding a delightful dimension of humor to their repertoire.

Finale

The grand finale, Rachmaninoff's "Six Pieces, Op. 11," began with an exquisitely played, hauntingly beautiful barcarolle, switched to a lively scherzo, a Russian theme, an accelerated waltz, a dark, spinning melody called "Romance" and the last piece "Slava" providing a taste of each of the previous six and completing the work.

Comments like "amazing," a "real treat," "another magical evening" and "what a treasure," were heard after the performance. "The selections were rich and diverse. We were totally engrossed in the music and were able to forget all our troubles for a while," Suze and Jim Marley said.

Pianists Wei-Der Huang and Hsien-Ann Meng, friends since graduate school, obtained their doctor of musical arts degrees from the University of Maryland at College Park. The Octava has performed locally at the Levine School of Music, Howard Community College and Strathmore Hall Tea Time, nationally in California and internationally in Taiwan.

Their next performance will be May 10 for the Montgomery County Music Teachers Association at Stone Ridge School.

Early Openings Set At Aquatic Gardens

No special reservations are required. The waterlily festival is scheduled for July 16, from 11 a.m. to 2 p.m. For further information contact Park Ranger Kate Bucco at 202-426-6905.

Duo Presents Interesting And Challenging Program

by James Giese

Two talented young women again performed in concert before an appreciative crowd at the Greenbelt Community Church on April 17. The Octava Piano Duo, consisting of Wei-Der Huang, Community Church organist, and Hsien-Ann Meng, both doctoral graduates of the University of Maryland Musical Arts program, performed for the third year at the church, offering once more an interesting, unusual and challenging program. It would take someone with greater knowledge and training than I to tell you just how good these two are but there is no question that the audience, which gave the two a standing ovation, found them to be outstanding.

Their program started off with two pieces written for the piano and organ, a combination that I find particularly beautiful and grand. "Andante Religioso" by Francis Thomé is a lush, melodic combination of the two instruments that got the program off to a good start. It was followed by a powerful and stirring rendition of William Gaither's familiar hymn "Because He Lives" as arranged by John Innes and Bill Fasig.

No classical piano performance would be complete without a work by Beethoven and for this concert the duo choose his "Sonata in D Major." In two parts, a joyful allegro molto and a more subdued moderato, the piece wove the melodic lines into the upper and lower registers to give both pianists the opportunity to work with it.

The last piece before the intermission was a modern work by John Corigliano "Gazebo Dances." After a strong overture a waltz movement followed that was not danceable by anyone other than a ballet dancer who might be performing something out of a weird dream sequence. The following adagio, too, was dreamy in a weird sense. The concluding lively and fast tarantella gave the duo quite a work out.

Following intermission the duo took on a two-handed work, the "Sonata Innamorata, S. 1+1," by P.D.Q. Bach, the fictional composer created by humorist Professor Peter Schieckele. According to program notes this work was written for the purposes of seduction with a second movement constructed according to "Bach" in such a way as to make the desirable happen. As performed by the duo, while continuously playing, positions at the piano were reversed and then reversed again in the allegro impetuoso movement. Then in the andante con cozyta movement, first the duo began playing with overlapping inside hands and then for a while each played the opposite side of the keyboard with both hands crossed over or under their partner's. The work concluded with a fast-paced presto obsessto. Were one to hear this work without seeing it performed, one would probably consider it to be a pretty good representation of a Mozartian era piano work.

The final work "Six Pieces, Op. 11" by Sergei Rachmaninoff, was unfamiliar to me and was more modern in tone and style than his more familiar works. When the piece moved to the fourth and fifth movements, a waltz and romance, I again felt that I was listening to something that might accompany a weird dream. These pieces, which continued to demonstrate the versatility of the performers, ended with a rousing series of variations of the theme "Slava" (Glory), a melody made familiar outside Russia by Modest Mussorgsky in the coronation scene of the first act of his opera "Boris Godounov."

Following the standing ovation, Huang played a very brief encore, the very familiar Happy Birthday song with which the audience joined in singing in honor of Meng's birthday.

Greenbelt Pianist Balzer At Night Music Concert

by Jessi Britton

"Eine Kleine Nachtmusik" was the theme of a moving recital on April 23 at Chevy Chase United Methodist Church with Greenbelt pianist Muriel Balzer. The listeners were captivated by a beautiful blending of poetry and emotions of music of the night by "Music Amongst Friends."

Balzer accompanied internationally acclaimed tenor James Moore and soprano Gina Moore in much more than a "Little Night Music." The audience was treated to a collection of music from the old masters, among them Strauss, Brahms, Schubert, Mahler, Schumann, Chopin and Puccini, to the more recent Rodgers, Holmes and Andrew Lloyd Webber. This music expressed to the audience all the powerful emotions that darkness evokes - romance, love, joy, desire, passion, the fears of loneliness, abandonment and death - it ended with "Music of the Night" from "Phantom of the Opera."

This recital was sponsored by Rick Jones Pianos of Beltsville.

Balzer has done extensive solo, chamber and accompanying work. Most notably, she was accompanist for the international opera star, Veronica Tyler. She has performed throughout the U.S. with numerous performances in Weill Hall at Carnegie Hall, Merkin Hall, the Kennedy Center Concert Hall and many others and has taught piano and music theory at the Johns Hopkins University, Peabody Conservatory of Music, Preparatory Department.

Balzer is founder and artistic director for "Music Amongst Friends." For information, visit www.musicamongstfriends.com.

Slings the Blues at the New Deal Café

by Shirl Hayes

Spinning out the pre-WWII acoustic blues down at the New Deal Café on Saturday, April 23 were Ian Morrison, Waverly Milor, Tommy Foerter and Dru Lore; a vibrant harbinger of blues to come for the June 18 festival this summer.

"I love playing at the New Deal. The people genuinely love the music," said Morrison. "I play in bars usually and that's to the drunken masses. [At the New Deal] there is a really good vibe."

The evening started out with the genial, chatting crowd listening to Ian and Waverly by the flickering light of candles cupped in stained glass. At the opening chords the diners became the audience and they quieted but did not fall completely silent. The swirl of conversations added an improvisational background to the music that has always been meant to ebb and flow around people like water around the stones and plants of a living river.

"We like the kind of music by Mississippi John Hurt and Muddy waters and North Mississippi hill-country blues by R.L. Burnside and Jr. Kimbrough," said Milor. "We rarely play the same song the same way twice . . . we go where the song takes us."

The first set started out with

An evening of North Mississippi Hill Country Blues at the New Deal Café.

Ian and Waverly talking between songs in an approachable, casual way about their music so that even someone who knows nothing about blues could feel like they belonged. The two performers kidded around between songs with the laidback enthusiasm of a couple of guys sharing something they love with a roomful of automatic friends.

"I've been playing the harmonica seriously for the last seven years," said Milor. "I played around with it when I was younger because there were some cool harmonica parts in Black Sabbath songs."

Morrison has been playing the last 12 years. "My dad is a musician and he bought me a guitar," said Morrison.

Lore and Foerter showed up for the second set adding a resonator and another harmonica as well as new voices to Milor's harmonica and Morrison's guitar, jumping up the energy level and turning the music out in all directions, making the "swinging easy" turn into foot tapping "yeah, man." The singing varied in flavor and tone from apple brandy in a sunlit jelly jar, to gravy on grits, to what it would sound like if Tennessee road dust could grab a microphone and belt out Hank Williams.

Like fire that burns and entrances, yet is not permanent, the evening did end but left everyone the warmer for it.
