City Council Disposes of Mixed Agenda at Its July 10 Meeting

by A. Neil Deo

The regular monthly meeting of the Greenbelt City Council took place on Monday, July 10.

Among the smaller but no less significant announcements was the news that Mayor Judith Davis had been reelected to the board of the Maryland Municipal League. Also the council thanked all who made the July 4th Independence Day events a success despite the rainstorm earlier during that day.

Meals on Wheels

The mayor and councilmembers welcomed Don Byrd, director of Meals on Wheels. Davis presented Byrd with a check for $600 made out to Meals on Wheels. Greenbelt residents participate and benefit from the non-profit program which is located in College Park.

In accepting the check on Monday, Byrd shared samples of his food, anecdotes of his clients and examples of his dedication to Meals on Wheels. Volunteers, especially drivers, are needed for any number of days a month that could be donated.

P&J Coalition

Doug Love and Bill Orleans, both Greenbelt residents, presented a petition to the city. Speaking for the Peace and Justice Coalition, they wanted to update the city on Peace Month celebrations. Love and Orleans, members of Prince George's United for Peace and Justice, requested the city consider its members' concerns on a number of political and justice issues.

Thanking the coalition, Davis accepted their petition requesting that the city express to NASA the urgency of allowing NASA scientists to speak freely, especially on global warming. The mayor said while no action could be taken that night, council would have to investigate how best to broach this topic with NASA.

Museum Year

In recognition of the 100th anniversary of the American Association of Museums, 2006 has been declared the "Year of the Museum." The Greenbelt Museum is part of this celebration, which coincides with its successful fundraising to fulfill its commitment to a challenge grant from the National Endowment for the Humanities.

Stephen Oetken, president of Friends of the Greenbelt Museum, received a proclamation signed by Davis calling upon "all our citizens to experience, celebrate and support the Greenbelt Museum and to participate in the wide variety of programs offered by the Friends of the Greenbelt Museum."

Oetken accepted the proclamation and remembered former volunteer and Greenbelt pioneer Lucille Howell who died in June. He said she had been an inspiration to Oetken and many others in Greenbelt.

Davis suggested the museum might consider celebrating May 18 every year as Museum Day, with activities to match.

Playground, Skatepark

City Manager Michael McLaughlin provided documents relating to an application for upgrading two playgrounds in Greenbelt East, one at 8301 Canning Terrace, the other at 7128 Ora Glen Court. A letter from Derek Thompson, president of the Windsor Green Home Owners' Association, was sent to Program Open Space in the Department of Natural Resources in Annapolis. The city supported the association's request for $34,257 for the Canning Terrace Playground

Museum Members Celebrate Meeting NEH Challenge

by Jill St. John, Curator

In December 2003 the Greenbelt Museum received a Special Initiative for Local History Challenge Grant from the National Endowment for the Humanities (NEH). This challenge grant helped the museum raise $100,000 over a three-year period. As a matching grant, every dollar the museum raised was matched by the NEH, up to $100,000, resulting in a $200,000 endowment. This endowment will be used to pay the salary of an education/volunteer coordinator for the museum.

The fundraising efforts were divided into one-year goals – raising $40,000 in 2004 and $30,000 in both 2005 and 2006. Each year the museum met its goal, exceeding the final goal by over $3,000. This ambitious fundraising endeavor for the museum has expanded its fundraising and programming abilities.

Election 2006

A Crowded Field of Candidates In Race for U.S. Senate Seat

by James Giese

Much of the information obtained for this article is from the candidate's own websites and has not been verified for accuracy. Persons interested in visiting candidate websites may easily be directed to them by logging onto the Maryland League of Women Voters website at www.lwvmd.org/vg/index.html.

There has been a mad rush of candidates to fill the vacuum created by the decision of Maryland's United States Senator Paul Sarbanes to not seek another term. On the ballot for the September 12 primary election will be 18 Democratic candidates seeking to fill Sarbanes's shoes and 10 Republicans. A Green party candidate, Kevin Zeese, will be on the general election ballot but not the primary.

The most interesting race for those who follow politics will be the Democratic primary. The two major contenders are Benjamin L.

Cardin and Kweisi Mfume. Cardin, a resident of the Forest Park section of Baltimore, is currently serving as congressman for the 3rd Maryland District, a position he has held since 1987. Before that he served eight years in the Maryland House of Delegates where he became the youngest person to be elected speaker. Cardin has received the endorsements of numerous state elected officials led by 5th District Congressman Steny Hoyer and Maryland Senate President Mike Miller. He also is reported to have a sizeable amount of camaign funds to spend.

Mfume, who was once a five-term Maryland congressman and more recently the president of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People (NAACP), is believed to have strong support among African Americans who reportedly constitute some 40 percent of those registered as Democrats. While Mfume now leads in some of the polls, pundits believe that could change when Cardin begins advertising. Issues that might be raised relate to Mfume's troubled youth, after which he turned himself around and obtained an education and success. Also, while Mfume did a good job of raising funds and returning the NAACP to good financial health, his departure from that organization was under a cloud that has never been clearly discussed. Mfume has many endorsements including the strong support of Prince George's County Executive Jack

City Assumes Inspection Of South Core Grading

On July 10 the city's Director of Planning and Community Development Celia Craze, sent a memorandum to Greenbelt City Manager Michael McLaughlin advising him that the city has permitted and is now inspecting grading work on the South Core of Greenbelt Station, the former A.H. Smith sand and gravel operation property. Greenbelt Station is the projected mall and housing development in Greenbelt West. The South Core is on the east side of the Metro tracks between the Metro Station and Greenbelt Road.

In the memorandum Craze provides a history of the city's earlier problems in obtaining county enforcement of previous grading work. At that time the property lay outside Greenbelt's corporate limits. It has been recently annexed.

Since its annexation this project is finally under city authority and subject to its sediment and erosion control enforcement. Previously that had not been the case.

History

Starting in August 2004, the developers of Greenbelt Station began the grading and reclamation of wash ponds and spoils stockpiles on the site of the former A.H. Smith property, purchased by Greenbelt Station in early 2000. The reclamation activity consisted of removal of concrete spoils and filling of large pools of water which had been sand and gravel wash ponds.

When Greenbelt Station initially started work, sediment and erosion control measures were sparingly installed. A sediment

He is a professor of chemistry at the University of Akron, where he specializes in spectroscopy. For the past 12 years he has worked with digital imaging and has taken over 20,000 images documenting travels throughout the world. He specializes in landscape, nature and scenic photography although he says he will take a picture of anything anywhere if it will produce an appealing image.

The Rinaldi exhibit is co-sponsored by Friends of New Deal Café Arts and supporting grants from the Prince George's Arts Council and Prince George's County.

Correction

In Jeannie Smith's American Realty ad last week the notation "under contract" appeared over the wrong house for sale. The house at 7-E Laurel Hill Road is under contract; the house at 16-Z-5 Ridge Road is not under contract. The News Review regrets the error.

Looking for Beauty in the Woodlands

by Glory K. Houck

"Get outside and appreciate the beauty around you," the News Review reminded us recently. Get a guidebook on birds, trees, flowering plants, reptiles or mammals and a pair of binoculars. Woodlands are more than plants – they are a vast complex, connected layer upon layer, a myriad of living organisms on a geological strata.

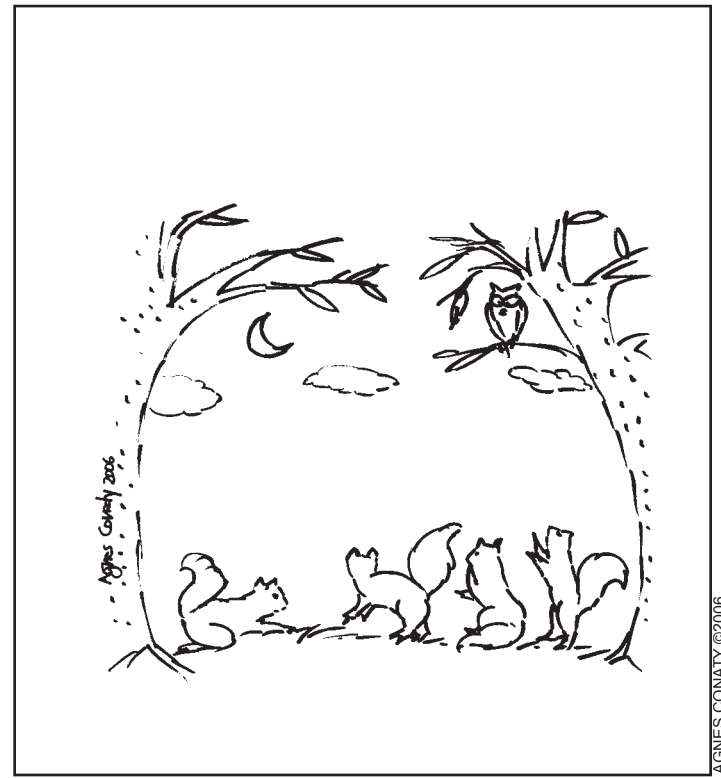

Look now for birds – right now a breeding population but soon to be migratory – passing through, wintering and resident. Do you know about the precipitous drop in migrating warbler populations? Once the woodlands literally vibrated with their songs and movement. Now the woods are almost silent – not because of pesticides but habitat destruction.

Know as you walk the forest litter teems with creatures marking your passage – shrew, voles, moles, mice, toads, frogs, snakes (hog-nosed and black), worms, insects (bees, beetles and darkling beetles, jumping and wolf spiders), endangered salamanders and Eastern box turtles. In the canopy are squirrels – fox and flying (night) – and dead trees with woodpecker apartments.

Look closely at the furrowed bark of a tree – observe fungi, the web of a dwarf spider and spider webs glistening in the sun on an overhanging branch.

Who can name all these marvelous things before your eyes? Try – see a mosaic of leaves, of beautiful and marvelous beings waiting for you to find them and love them.

Bridge at Beaverdam Creek Is to Be Fixed

The State Highway Administration's Bridge Inspection and Remedial Engineering Division (BIRE) has arranged for the repair of the stone bridge over Beaverdam Creek on Edmonston Road (Md. 201) north of Cherrywood Lane. The work will maintain the historical integrity of the bridge, according to Cecil Kincaid, team leader.

The subcontractor assigned to make these repairs, 3-State Construction, will use existing and purchased masonry stones to repair the parapets. The purchased masonry stones will match the existing stones in aesthetics and material type.

3-State Construction will perform the majority of the masonry work by hand. BIRE has used this subcontractor on multiple historically-sensitive structures. The work for this project could begin in as early as six months.

Artists, 18 years or older, who live, work or go to school in Prince George's County are invited to enter "Folk Art: Tradition and Innovation," a juried exhibition competition. Artists may submit artwork in any media but it must have been created in 2005 or 2006.

The selected works will be featured in an exhibition to open in November 2006 at the Arts/Harmony Hall Regional Center, Fort Washington and remain on display through December 2006.

There is no fee to enter the competition. The deadline for entries is Friday, September 22 at 5 p.m. For a prospectus and for more information contact the Arts and Cultural Heritage Division, 301-454-1450, TTY 301-454-1472.

Our sympathy to the Travis family on the death of their mother Genevieve Travis. Mrs. Travis had taught at Greenbelt Junior High School in the 1970s.

Greenbelters were saddened to hear of the death of Avis King who had worked at GHI as director of Human Resources before her retirement.

Congratulations to Kenneth Silberman of Greenbelt-CERT, who made his first parachute jump on Saturday, July 29. He jumped from a plane two and a half miles over the Delmarva Peninsula. During a one-minute free fall, he made three 360° right-hand turns and shook the videographer's hand in midair. After deploying the parachute at 5,500 feet he completed a high-G left turn and made a soft landing in the drop zone with his instructor.

Did you know?

Do you feel restless,
like you have lost your peace of mind?

That we don't know what to do and where to find satisfaction? Our Lord has the answer to all our problems, as He tells us that, "... He guides to Himself those who turn to Him in penitence, those who believe, and whose hearts find satisfaction in the remembrance of God. For without doubt in the remembrance of God do hearts find satisfaction."

As part of the on-site assessment, agency employees and members of the community are invited to offer comments at a public information session August 7, 2006 at 7:00 pm. The session will be conducted in the Greenbelt City Council Chambers located at 25 Crescent Road, Greenbelt, Maryland.

Agency employees and the public are also invited to offer comments by calling 240-542-2105 on August 8, 2006 between the hours of 1:00 and 4:00 pm. Comments will be taken by the Assessment Team.

A copy of the standards is available at Greenbelt Police Headquarters, 550 Crescent Road, Greenbelt, MD 20770. Local contact is Sergeant Carl Schinner, 301-507-6502.

Anyone wishing to submit written comments about the Greenbelt Police Department's ability to comply with the standards for accreditation may send them to the Commission on Accreditation on Law Enforcement, Inc. (CALEA), 10306 Easton Place, Suite 320, Fairfax, Virginia, 22030-2201.

upgrade and $29,229 for the Ora Glen Playground.

Dr. Thompson's cover letter to Program Open Space stated: "The Windsor Green HOA has entered into an easement agreement with the City of Greenbelt whereby the public is granted access to playgrounds in our community. In exchange for this easement, the city has agreed to bring the playgrounds up to current standards and perform routine maintenance and inspections."

Other Business

Over the weekend the city received permits for the skatepark to be built next to the Community Center. McLaughlin announced that ground breaking would take place on July 17.

On another congratulatory note, John Shea, who assists City Solicitor Robert Manzi on city legal work, has been elected president of the Maryland Municipal Attorneys Association.

and erosion control plan, grading plan or permit had not been filed. Immediately the city's inspection personnel made inquiries of county inspectors, who issued a violation notice and placed a stop-work order on the site.

These actions, however, were subsequently rescinded following intervention by the director of the Prince George's County Department of Environmental Resources (DER), who had approved a six-month temporary permit according to Craze. Although city staff met with the DER director to explain its objection to the county's relaxed regulatory approach to the active grading at this site, the work continued.

State Intervention

In response, the city contacted state inspectors, who intervened. The state officials required that Greenbelt Station file a Sediment and Erosion control plan and obtain a county grading permit. On November 5, 2004, a consent order was executed between the state and Greenbelt Station setting forth violations committed by Greenbelt Station, agreeing upon remedial actions and levying a fine.

On November 12, 2004, the Prince George's County Soil Conservation District approved the Sediment and Erosion control plan for the site, and on March 22, 2005, the Department of Environmental Resources issued a grading permit.

Forced Compliance

The city's appeal to State of Maryland officials was heeded and Greenbelt Station was forced into compliance. While officials were determining how to respond to the violation, city inspectors were excluded from site meetings though kept apprised of the state's actions.

Ultimately sediment and erosion control devices were installed, regular inspections conducted and appropriate regulatory actions taken.

Craze's report concludes that the site is now under the control of the city's inspection personnel and that the site is in compliance. The city's sediment and erosion control program is audited by the state on a regular basis, as it has final authority.

Challengers

Three other candidates, and possibly a fourth, could affect the outcome of the race and one could possibly become the winner. All are expected to take more votes away from Cardin than from Mfume.

Josh Rales has undertaken an early and extensive television advertising campaign. Born in Pittsburgh, he grew up in Bethesda and obtained a law degree from Georgetown Law School. In 1984 he founded RFI Associates, a real estate investment company. Its success has apparently enabled him to finance his election campaign. He has not previously held elective office.

Dennis Rasmussen of Essex, the former Baltimore County executive and now the principal in a successful lobbying firm, has received past support from many of the same constituents as Cardin. He also once served in the Maryland House and Senate.

Allan Lichtman, with a Ph.D. from Harvard and 30 years as an educator and now a professor and former chair of the History Department at American University, is a well-known political commentator on television and in newspapers. Like Rales, this Montgomery County resident has never held elective office.

The fourth person who could impact the race is a political unknown with a famous Maryland political surname. Mike Schaefer of Baltimore is the president of an investment firm, a legal writer, a tobacco farmer and a former prosecuting attorney and city councilmember. Schaefer claims to have come in second in a 1986 U.S. Senate primary with little expenditure because he has the same surname as former governor and now State Comptroller William Donald Schaefer, who is no relation. He now expects to win this primary because of his last name.

Another candidate with an interesting background, although little known to most Maryland Democrats, is David Dickerson of Cockeysville. With a bachelor's degree from Loyola College, a masters in international marketing from Johns Hopkins and a doctorate from Cambridge University in England plus a specialty in weapon's instruction as an Air Force reservist, he has had a varied career in international marketing and airline security. He is an adjunct professor with Hawaii Pacific University and has taught and conducted research throughout Asia. He is a published author on engineering change and cross-cultural business strategies.

Another professorial candidate is James H. Hutchinson who has been a practicing physician and psychiatric consultant for 35 years. He is an adjunct professor at Georgetown University and resides in Montgomery County.

Other Democratic candidates who have filed without known websites are George T. English of Montgomery County, Anthony Jarworski of Montgomery County, Robert A. Kaufman of Baltimore, Thomas McCaskill of Fort Washington, Bob Robinson of Havre de Grace, Theresa C. Scaldaferrri of Prince George's County, Charles Ulysses Smith of Baltimore, Blaine Taylor of Towson, Joseph Werner of Harford County and Lih Young of Montgomery County.

Republicans

Lieutenant Governor Michael S. Steele, considered to be the only viable Republican candidate for the U.S. Senate on the ballot, is being challenged by seven others. A resident of the Landover Hills area of Prince George's County, he has the distinction of being the first African American to hold a statewide elective office in Maryland. He was elected lieutenant governor in 2002 when Robert Ehrlich was elected governor. He holds a degree in international relations from Johns Hopkins University and a law degree from Georgetown University. For three years he studied to be a Catholic priest but decided instead to become a lawyer. As one, he specialized in financial investments for Wall Street underwriters, product liability litigation and other corporate matters. He founded his own business and legal consulting firm, the Steele Group. Raised in a Democratic family, he became a Republican at an early age. Before becoming lieutenant governor he had been chair of the Prince George's Central Committee, a delegate to national party conventions and in 2000 chair of the Maryland Republican Party.

Challengers

Two of the most unique candidates for the Senate are challenging Steele. Ray Bly is the owner of an appliance shop in Hyattsville and a resident of Howard County. According to his website, he has been convicted of child abuse, assault and battery of a minor and a fourth degree sexual offense involving his step-daughter, a minor. However, he contends his innocence because his step-daughter is actually dead and the person he is accused of assaulting is not a minor but an alien instead.

Daniel Vovak is on the ballot with the nickname "Wig Man" between his first and last names. He has been contesting this with the Maryland Board of Elections and in court because he contends it should be "The Wig Man." He got this nickname in an article written by John DiStaso for the New Hampshire Union Leader when he spoke there about political philosophy during the Third Party national conference but his website does not explain how the nickname came about. Although he states that he has a residence in Rockville much of his political activity has been in Ohio and Illinois. By profession he is a ghost writer and president of Greenwich Public Relations. Vovak claims to be the founder of Gangs for Change, an organization to overthrow incumbents in Maryland, although he has endorsed Ehrlich for governor.

Other Republican candidates include Thomas J. Hampton, a corporate controller/accountant and life-long Maryland resident from Severna Park who advocates reforming the political process and transforming the Chesapeake Bay. John Kimble, a 30-year resident advocates bringing the troops home to protect the country's southern border from the invasion of illegal immigrants. Corrogan Vaughn, who grew up in Baltimore, was an airline pilot laid off after 9/11 and is now a small businessman, co-host of two radio shows and a deacon at Sharon Baptist Church who has attended Baptist national meetings.

Republican candidates without known websites are Earl S. Gordon of Montgomery County, Edward Raymond Madej of Pasadena, Daniel Muffoletto of Ellicott City and Richard Shawver of Sykesville.

Police observed a suspicious occupied vehicle in a parking lot and recognized the driver as having been banned from the apartment complex by agents of the property. Police approached the vehicle on foot and ordered the driver to show his hands. Instead, he started the vehicle and attempted to flee the scene, pinning the officer against a nearby parked vehicle. The officer was able to avoid injury by diving over the hood of the parked vehicle. The man then fled the area at a high rate of speed. He lost control of the vehicle in the area of Ivy and Cherrywood Lanes, with the vehicle leaving the roadway and striking a utility pole. He was arrested and was transported to the Department of Corrections for a hearing before a district court commissioner.

The newly established endowment will fund in perpetuity an education/volunteer coordinator position for the museum. Interviews have been conducted and a coordinator will be chosen shortly. The new employee will serve half-time while the museum continues to raise funds for a full-time position.

The coordinator's duties will include training and managing the museum's many volunteers, who operate the museum's historic house on Sundays, scheduling special tours and developing both on- and off-site educational programs for local school groups.

In celebration of its success the Greenbelt Museum held a grant completion party on July 29 at the New Deal Café in historic Roosevelt Center. Over 70 friends and supporters attended the event. Former Curator Katie Scott-Childress came to the party as did state Delegate Anne Healey and Councilmember Leta Mach.

The museum staff is grateful to all who contributed to the campaign and especially to co-chairs of the fundraising efforts, Julia Eichhorst and Mary Linstrom.

Anyone interested in learning more about the Greenbelt Museum or making a donation to the NEH Endowment is asked to call the museum office at 301-507-6582 or museum@greenbeltmd.gov or by mail at PO Box 1025, Greenbelt, MD 20768.

MVA Makes Changes To Combat Fraud

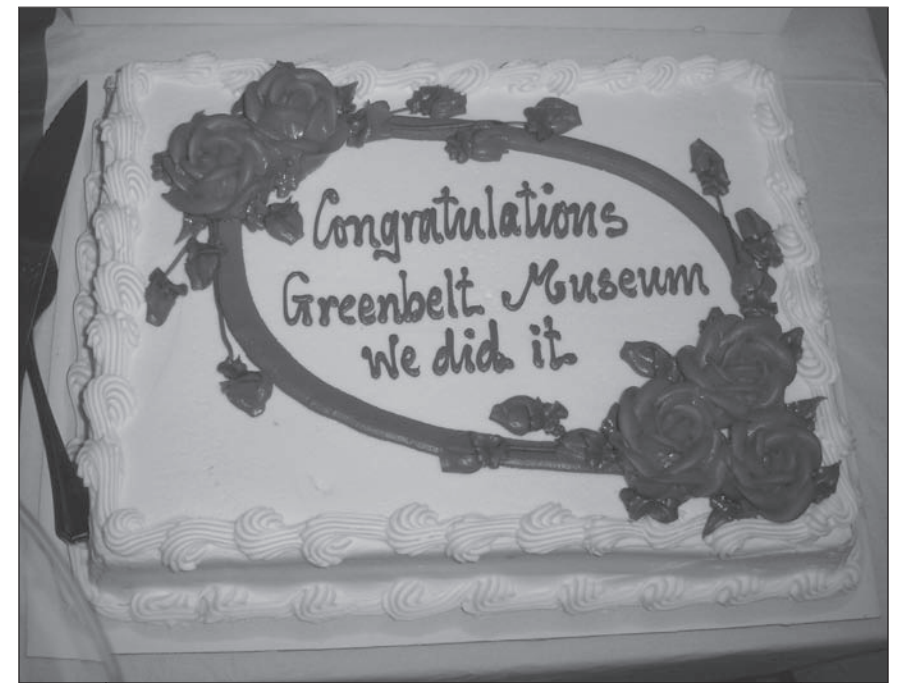

Due to an unprecedented increase in fraudulent cases of individuals applying for driver's licenses and identification cards, the Maryland Motor Vehicle Administration (MVA) announced it has completed and filed emergency regulations to strengthen and protect the integrity of the Maryland driver's license and identification card. In 2003, 146 cases of fraudulent documents were handled by the MVA. Last year, over 515 cases of fraudulent documents were handled, a 233 percent increase.

Along with the tightening of accepted documents, the MVA is also recommending the use of additional documents, not currently accepted as identification or proof of residency, to make the process more amenable for Maryland residents.

The proposed emergency regulations also mark the administration's first significant effort to come into compliance with the requirements of the U.S. Department of Homeland Security and the Federal REAL ID Act, which requires all motor vehicle administrations nationwide to use only those documents that can either be authenticated or verified when issuing driver's licenses or identification cards.

Enjoying the evening's celebration are Dorothy White, FOGM treasurer; Katie Scott-Childress, past curator; and Sandra Lange, past FOGM president.

This congratulatory cake with its red roses was the centerpiece of the refreshment table.

Health Workers Seek Health Care Voters

In a display of grassroots organizing, Member Political Organizers (MPOs) and volunteers from 1199 SEIU United Health Care Workers East, Maryland-DC Division, are going door to door to spread the message about the importance of the health care issue. Their goal: knock on 30,000 doors by August 5.

"As health care workers, we see everyday that families and children in our communities are suffering because they lack access to health care," said MPO Dorothy Boyd. "We believe candidates ought to be addressing these issues and we're finding out that many voters agree."

The canvassers are sweeping Prince George's and other Maryland counties, as well as Baltimore City. So far, the organizers have enlisted more than 7,000 constituents to sign cards pledging to be "health care voters." More cards are received in the union headquarters every day by mail and organizers expect to have 10,000 pledges by August 5.

"It's not surprising that we're getting this response from voters," said Samuel Epps, the Healthcare Equity and Access Laws/Md. program coordinator. "More than 690,000 Marylanders went without health insurance last year. People need relief and they expect their elected officials to provide solutions to this growing problem."

For more information call 1199 SEIU Maryland-DC Division at 410-332-1199.

Greenbelt's Successful Swim Season Ends with a Splash

by Leslie Hilliard

It's tradition that potlucks begin and end Greenbelt's competitive swim season. So it is fitting that the PrinceMont Swim League, Division C Champs, the Greenbelt Barracudas, cater their awards banquet with a potluck. Potlucks celebrate in food individuality and creativity, each dish striving to stand out among the others – just like a swimmer, doing his or her personal best among the competitors.

In addition to individual awards, high point winners in each age category received special recognition. They are: girls 8 and under, Kristine Pham, 1st place; Chelsea White, 2nd place; and Miranda Shade, 3rd place and boys 8 and under, Hunter Freeman, 1st place; Jakob Trangsrud, 2nd place; and Drew Wallace, 3rd place.

Girls age 9-10 Genavera Gannon, 1st place; Michelle Gray, 2nd place; and Gabrielle Kuhn, 3rd place and boys age 9-10 Stephen Irving, 1st place; Michael Stevens, 2nd place; and DevinRe Adams, 3rd place.

Girls age 11-12 Amanda Freeman, 1st place; Asia Goodridge, 2nd place; and Chelsey Murphy, 3rd place and boys age 11-12 Kory Otto-Jacobs, 1st place; Luke Dickerson, 2nd place; and Noah Perry, 3rd place.

Girls age 13-14 Melissa Gray, 1st place; Kate Faryniarz, 2nd place; and Malin Lindvall, 3rd place and boys age 13-14 Alexander Rilee, 1st place; Kenrick Rilee, 2nd place; and Bryce Tidwell, 3rd place.

Girls age 15-18 Maresa Like-Mathews, 1st; Jill Lau, 2nd place; and Jenny Lindvall, 3rd place and boys age 15-18 Daniel Rehner, 1st place; Kyle Daniels, 2nd place; and William Dunham, 3rd place.

High point winners for the team were Courtney Like-Mathews, age 12, with a cumulative of 106.25 points and Joseph Lau, age 16, with a cumulative of 91.5 seasonal points.

Greenbelt's awards banquet was immediately followed by the traditional splash party. No striving for perfect strokes or sneaking a peak over at your competitor in the next lane between breaths, just a good old fashioned water free-for-all with pool floaties, super soakers, lots of laughs and freeze pops to cap off the last evening of a successful season.

Barracudas Bid Farewell to Two Stars

by Leslie Hilliard

Thirteen of Greenbelt's best competed in the elite meet of the season, the PrinceMont Swim League's (PMSL) All Star Meet on July 29.

For two of Greenbelt's best swimmers, this was the last event they would compete in as swimmers in the PMSL league. Both 18 years old this year, Jill Lau and Kyle Daniels will be "too old" next summer, according to league rules. They are "aging out" of eligibility. This year was a competitively successful one for both of them, each achieving second place overall in team points in their age category.

Jill grew up on the Greenbelt swim team, starting when she was about six. As a swimmer for Eleanor Roosevelt High School (ERHS), she made the 2005 Gazette All-county Swimming Team Second Team. Jill, a National Honor Student, is majoring in Biology at the University of Maryland and is a "driver" on UM's Women's Water Polo Team.

Kyle began swimming with Greenbelt in 2005. As a swimmer for ERHS, he made the 2006 Gazette All-county Swimming Team Second Team. Kyle will be attending the University of Maryland this fall, majoring in biochemistry.

Even though they will be "too old to swim" with Greenbelt, they'll both be back as coaches, sharing their years of swimming experience and fun with others.

Final deadline for Outstanding Citizen Nominations is Monday, August 7.

There was an auto fire on the Baltimore-Washington Parkway at the off-ramp to Greenbelt Road on July 19. At 5:06 p.m., Engine 353 arrived at the scene to find a single vehicle in flames. The engine crew quickly extinguished the fire.

Cool Science Show for Hot Summer Days

One remedy for hot summer days is cool science experiments to perform right outside the door. From noon to 4 p.m. on Saturday and Sunday, August 12 and 13 the Maryland Science Center will celebrate Backyard Science Days.

The event is filled with fun, hands-on activities and the thrilling live bat show "Bat Encounter." Visitors will create natural art to take home by placing leaves, shells or other objects on photosensitive paper that allows the rays of the sun to make shadowgrams. Other activities include stomp rockets, chalk art, plus the infamous Mentos and Diet Coke geyser experiment.

The highlight of each day will be a live bat show with international bat celebrities Rob Mies and Kim Williams. Their "Bat Encounter" show introduces the nocturnal strategies, habitats and benefits of bats and will share the secrets of bat navigation by using a bat detector to let the audience hear a live bat's echolocation.

Backyard Science Days is free with paid admission to the Maryland Science Center. The Maryland Science Center is located at 601 Light Street at Baltimore's Inner Harbor. For information and tickets, visit www.maryland-sciencecenter.org or call the 24-hour information line at 410-685-5225, TDD: 410-962-0223.
