The Problems of Homelessness And Possible Solutions Explored

by James Giese

At its January 10 worksession, the Greenbelt City Council discussed problems of homelessness with persons who deal with the problem on a day-to-day basis. Councilmembers were also given a hard copy of a visual presentation made on homelessness at a city-sponsored homelessness conference held in November. Although ideas were tossed around on things that might be done to address the problem, no courses of action were considered by council at the meeting.

Present at the meeting were Tim Jansen, executive director of Community Crisis Services, Inc; the Reverend Bobbi Troyer, evangelist, of StreetLights of Bethany; Marcia Voigt, vice president of the board of directors of Help by Phone and Greenbelt Community Church coordinator for Safe Haven; Mary Linstrom of the Catholic Ladies of Charity and Dr. Liz Park, director of Greenbelt CARES.

According to a release by the National Alliance to End Homelessness, more than 744,000 persons are homeless on any single night. This figure is the first nationwide estimate of homelessness made by the Homelessness Research Institute. It is based upon a compilation and analyses of data from local communities nationwide.

According to Jansen, about 1,400 people were homeless in Prince George's County last year. Troyer told council that the number in Greenbelt is down somewhat, but that she will be working with about 25 individuals at any one time.

Park told council that about 20 percent of those homeless are chronically so and the remainder are homeless from temporary situational setbacks.

Conference Presentation

In the presentation made by Andrea E. Morris, M.S.W., at the Homelessness Conference copied to the council, she said 25 percent of those homeless are estimated to be too disabled to work. Some 24 percent of the homeless need medical treatment and 46 percent needed to see a dentist for treatment.

Among adult Washington, D.C., homeless residents in one month, 9.6 percent used an illicit drug, 25.5 percent used cigarettes and 17.1 percent engaged in binge drinking. Up to 35 percent of that homeless population suffer from chronic disorders and many suffer from more than one, such as mental illness and chronic substance disorder.

An estimated 25 percent of homeless adults in Prince George's County suffer from a serious mental illness.

At the meeting it was noted that the number of homeless children is increasing significantly. Morris said that under federal law homeless children are required to be educated in local schools but many are still turned away. Those who do attend have repeated absences, high failure rates and are subjected to bullying and ridicule. Homeless teens have a high drop-out rate. These children are more apt to be born of teenage parents.

Housing Losses

Morris attributes the causes of homelessness to a variety of events. Public housing for the poor became blighted and much has been torn down without being replaced. HIV and crack cocaine have caused additional health problems.

Confining the mentally ill to hospitals was found to be inhumane and hospitals were closed down, particularly during the Reagan presidency, without equal

Council Explores Joining Playful City USA Program

by Barbara Hopkins

Council is looking into having the City of Greenbelt become a Playful City USA, a program modeled after Tree City USA and sponsored by KaBOOM!, a national, not-for-profit organization that promotes play.

KaBOOM!

The organization was incorporated in 1996 by Darell Hammond and Dawn Hutchison after they organized a community playground-build at Livingston Manor in Southeast Washington, D.C. That five-day program involved over 500 volunteers and was achieved with corporate funding from The Home Depot and Minkoff Co., Inc.

Among its other projects, in 2006 KaBOOM! launched Operation Playground: Rebuilding Playgrounds, Restoring Childhoods, which is a two-year initiative to build 100 playgrounds in Gulf Coast communities that were affected by Hurricane Katrina or other storms. It has helped communities build nearly 1,000 playgrounds since its inception.

KaBOOM! hopes for a great place to play for every child in America.

City Participation

At its regular meeting on January 8 council discussed accepting two $600 scholarships offered

Greenbelt by KaBOOM! to defray costs for representatives to attend KaBOOM!'s national U Play! conference in New Orleans early in February. The conference will provide more information about the U Play! program and help identify municipalities to become founding Playful Cities.

Councilmembers showed interest in the program and City Manager Michael McLaughlin said city funds would be available to supplement the scholarships, since costs would likely exceed the amount offered by KaBOOM!. A motion to accept the scholarships and send two representatives passed by a vote of four to one, with Councilmember Rodney Roberts voting no because he thought it sufficient for only one person to go and he did not want the city to spend the money to send two.

In order to be recognized as a Playful City by KaBOOM!, a city must meet a set of commitments that includes creating a local play task force and/or commission, developing an annual action plan for play, auditing play space in the city, setting benchmarks for growth in capital projects spending and maintenance of play spaces and proclaiming and celebrating an annual Play Day.

"Projects to Warm the Heart" Is Focus of Next Artful Afternoon

A community art project to warm the heart will be the focus of the next Artful Afternoon to be held on Sunday, February 4 from 1 to 5 p.m. at the Community Center.

Participants will decorate part of a community mural and see how that part contributes to the whole mural. Inspired by the theme "there are all kinds of hearts in the world," Artist-in-residence Mary Gawlik will lead this workshop from 1 to 3 p.m. Those attending will work with natural materials including wood, cork, rattan and other decorative elements. There are plans to hang the completed mural in the Community Center. There will be an opportunity to make a tile out of cardboard to take home for a Valentine.

New Exhibit

A new exhibit will be open at the Greenbelt Community Center Art Gallery and guests are invited to visit the show throughout the afternoon. The new exhibit showcases the talents of ceramic artists who are contributing to the upcoming "Empty Bowls" charitable fundraising community supper in March. The ticket price entitles the patron to choose a hand-made ceramic bowl to keep from an array donated by local potters. The new exhibit honors the community spirit of the ceramic artists mounting this event and offers patrons a preview of the talent they will see reflected in the bowls at the supper.

Each month Artful Afternoon includes Open Studios (3rd floor, 1 to 5 p.m.) to give art fans of all ages the opportunity to talk with the artists-in-residence as they demonstrate their work. See whimsical sculpture displays scattered throughout the center that were created by community members at previous events.

From 1 to 5 p.m. there will be tours of the historic 1930s home operated by the Greenbelt Museum at 10-B Crescent Road. For a different slant on things consider the question, "Were earlier times really simpler?" during the tour. Artful Afternoons are held the first Sunday of every month with hands-on art projects, open studios and other activities. Artful Afternoon is free and suitable for all ages. For additional information visit www.greenbeltmd.gov/ARTS or call Barbara Dickey Davis at 240-542-2062.

Two New Suits Challenge Construction of the ICC

by Elaine Skolnik

"It's a bad deal, not a done deal," said environmentalists in Montgomery County at a press conference on December 20 called to announce the filing that day of two lawsuits to block construction of the Intercounty Connector (ICC). (That was the deadline day for filing such lawsuits.)

The ICC, a six lane, 18-mile toll highway, will connect Interstate 270 in Gaithersburg with Interstate 95/Route 1 in Laurel at an estimated cost of more than $2.4 billion.

Hoping that the two law suits would block construction of the controversial highway, the Sierra Club, Environmental Defense, the Audubon Naturalist Society of the Central Atlantic States and the Maryland Native Plant Society claim that the ICC "would violate federal environmental standards and adversely affect the region's environment."

State Highway Administration (SHA) spokesperson David Buck told the News Review that the SHA was not a defendant in either law suit. He pointed out that approval of the ICC had been granted on May 29, 2006, by the Federal Highway Administration (FHWA) of the U.S. Department of Transportation. Buck reiterated earlier statements that in this third-round ICC study, unlike unsuccessful studies in past decades, both the state's legal staff and federal agencies have been involved in the process from the beginning. He noted that all involved federal agencies have given the ICC study their blessing.

Although official groundbreaking for the ICC is expected in the coming spring, Buck opined that the SHA would move ahead, continuing its preconstruction process

Letters to the Editor

Hello from New Soccer Comish

My name is Richelle Green. I was recently appointed by the Greenbelt Boys & Girls Club Board of Directors as the new Soccer Commissioner. Many of you in the Greenbelt community have worked with Kim Paz, the former soccer commissioner. The club and I would like to thank Kim once again for her years of service and dedication to the soccer program.

Spring 2007 Soccer Registration has begun and is going strong! We are going to continue the registration process every Thursday and Friday from 7 to 8 p.m. at the Greenbelt Youth Center until the end of February. If there are any youth in Greenbelt or the surrounding communities wishing to join the county champs in a worldwide sport or if you know of anyone that is interested in soccer, please sign up as soon as possible.

Signing up is simple for new members. All you need is a copy of your child's birth certificate or passport, a small picture that we may keep, proof of Greenbelt residency and check or money order for club fees.

Also . . . there are many opportunities for high school students to receive their community service hours with our soccer program. I will be looking into ways we can get the high school students involved, whether it is helping a coach with team management or working one-on-one with soccer kids to help hone their skills. I want to try to get as many people involved in the great sport of soccer as possible. I am so excited about the 2007 soccer year! I feel we have a lot of enthusiastic children, parents, coaches and other community members going into the new year. I look forward to meeting you all!

Grateful to Roberts

The News Review (January 18) reports criticism by Mayor Judith Davis of Mayor Pro Tem Rodney Roberts over his comments at the January 9 school board meeting. I was at that meeting and the problem was not that Mr. Roberts tried to set the record straight in the face of inaccurate statements about the city's position by AIMCO representatives. Rather, the problem was the school board's choice to prohibit comment by any citizens other than developers' representatives. The board thus allowed AIMCO to have the floor for an extended period of time while the public and even their elected representatives were forbidden to speak. As a member of the public attending that meeting, I was disturbed by this silencing of the public in a matter that directly affected us.

I can confirm, however, that Mr. Roberts was recognized by a member of the board as he approached the microphone. Although the board refused to turn on his microphone, they declined to have him thrown out, for which – in the current climate of apparent disdain for public participation by our elected officials – I suppose we can be grateful. Mr. Roberts should be thanked for being the only Greenbelt City

Councilmember present at that meeting to keep an eye on the proceedings, not scolded for trying to speak when the public was being denied the right to have any say in a matter involving the fate of publicly-owned land.

I should add that, although the school board did have a belated public hearing on the matter in which members of the public were given two minutes to speak, this was only after the board had already given the developer the letter of intent he wanted for the transfer of 14 acres of taxpayer-owned land (despite the fact that his meager offer of $20 million for the land is "insufficient to respond to the gap in what we perceive are going to be the impacts on the district," according to School Superintendent Deasy as quoted in the Washington Post January 12, 2007).

If anyone's conduct deserves to be questioned here, it is that of the Prince George's County school board, not Mr. Roberts. Greenbelt citizens concerned about the fate of this public property can be grateful to Mr. Roberts for his presence at the relevant school board meetings and to elected officials of Berwyn Heights who spoke against transfer of the property at the public hearing.

A Recovery Center For the Homeless?

I often avoid Roosevelt Center because of the overrepresentation of homeless and mentally disturbed individuals. I do not believe that this image of dismal failure is what Greenbelt is all about.

Yes, I know, a true Greenbelter, actually wants poverty and homelessness to be visible, as this very visibility, along with the easy opportunity to provide hand-outs somehow allow him to feel less guilty. But, as we continue our handouts year after year and continue to see these same persons doing the same thing year after year, a clue should be evolving. I believe that such giving is irresponsible and is damaging to the recipients as well as to the community and that such givers should be fined.

So, if you feel a need to help but cannot make a major personal investment, there is still hope. It might be well to contribute to the efforts of some churches, especially if their programs are slanted just as much toward personal development and recovery as toward providing food.

A few months ago I attended the yearly meeting of Greenbelt seniors where some of the city council was present. At that time I brought up this problem and received considerable (initial) support from the others present when I suggested that we consider using the vacated post office as a recovery center for homeless and mentally disturbed persons, while at the same time disallowing any of their hanging out in the Center. I understand that such a spontaneously conceived notion might be a bad or unworkable idea – but I just hope it might stimulate more realistic thinking.

As every philanthropist knows, responsible giving requires knowledge, understanding, thought, planning and supervision.

Wonderful Emergency Procedure Available

About a week ago a friend was experiencing chest pains in my house and I drove him immediately to Doctors Hospital Emergency. He said he was having a heart attack and within five minutes he had an EKG and 70 minutes later there was a stent in place in his heart. It was a major artery blockage but the results were great and he is recovering well now at home. The hospital said that if the procedure, done through the leg vein and called a C-Port or cardiac catheterization, takes place within 90 minutes there is little damage to the heart.

I want to congratulate Doctors for having this wonderful emergency procedure readily available. They said if anyone has chest pains even with no medical history of heart problems, call 911 and have the patient tell them right away. The same can be said for stroke symptoms: if a person cannot grip both hands or has trouble smiling or talking call 911 because within two hours a lot can be done. I consider this good information for all of us and we are so fortunate to have a good hospital nearby and a good example walking around.

On Screen

"Notes on a Scandal"

In this psychological thriller, Judi Dench's lonely, embittered character narrates the story of a teacher (Cate Blanchett) who has an affair with a student. Her husband (played by Bill Nighy) gives the film its moral center but every main character evinces a capacity for manipulative behavior and betrayal.

Director Richard Eyre has won numerous awards for directing stage plays and he elicits powerful performances from the whole cast. Their work has been rewarded with four Oscar nominations, including Judi Dench (Best Actress) and Cate Blanchett (Best Supporting Actress). Patrick Marber also received an Oscar nod for Best Screenplay; his past work includes scripting "Closer" (2004) as well as writing for and appearing in Steve Coogan's chat-show-from-hell, "Knowing Me, Knowing You."

"Notes on a Scandal" runs 93 minutes and is rated R for language and sexual content.

The Golden Age Club installed the following slate of officers on January 10: president – Ellie Rimar, 1st vice-president – Frank Corrsen, 2nd vice-president – Bill Souser, recording secretary – Bunny Fitzgerald, corresponding secretary – Rachel Algaze and treasurer – Robert Terrell. Karen Haseley of the Recreation Dept. was the installer. Let's give these dedicated members lots of support for all the next year, the 50th anniversary year.

Many thanks to Bill Souser, our outgoing president, who has served five times in that position. Bill does so many things for the club, it is hard to name them all. He sets up for meetings, keeps the sound systems functioning, creates and sends cards for the Sunshine Committee and is our photographer, as well as one of our computer experts. Hugs and thanks to Bill.

There will be an open meeting on January 31 at the Community Center on public transportation at 7:30 p.m. in the Senior Classroom. Steve Jaffe, chief operating officer, will speak.

Help Available on Money Matters

The City of Greenbelt has trained volunteers available to help "elderly low income" individuals to organize and pay their bills. Services are available for Greenbelt residents only with the goal of promoting and prolonging independent living for people on limited income who are at risk because of their inability to manage their own finances and who have no friends or relatives available to help them.

AARP Foundation provides liability insurance for the services. After initial referral is complete, the volunteers can help the clients sort mail and organize bills for payment, balance checkbook, set up a list of monthly income and expenses, write checks from a designated account for client signature. To qualify for help from this program, maximum household income guidelines are: single, $31,529; two person, $44,613; total liquid assets, $35,000.

The client must be capable of making decisions and be able to sign checks, assist in developing a list of income and expenses and try to keep to it. The client must not have anyone available to perform these functions, must be willing to accept the volunteer's help and must be willing to sign the volunteer/client service agreement.

For more information call the Volunteer Maryland Coordinator Valerie A. Wright at 240-542-2031.

The Greenbelt Skate Park will be closed Friday, Jan. 26 and Saturday, Jan. 27 from 9 a.m. to 2 p.m. for training exercises with the local Fire and Rescue/EMS staff.

Learn About Islam

GIVE THANKS

Every breath that we breathe is a blessing from God and we learn from the Prophet Solomon (peace be upon him) to recognize these blessings each day. The Holy Qur'an tells us how he never forgot to be thankful to God. He is quoted to have said, "This is by the grace of my Lord, to test me whether I am grateful or ungrateful! And if any is grateful, it is (a gain) for his own soul; but if any is ungrateful, truly my Lord is free of all needs, supreme in honor."
- The Holy Qur'an, 27:40

Remember to count your blessings. For more information about gratefulness from an Islamic perspective, call 301-982-9463 or email info@searchislam.org or visit www.searchislam.org.

Greenbelters were saddened to learn of the death of former Greenbelter Jacqueline Sue Gilbert. While working for the City of Greenbelt Ms. Gilbert in the 60s started Camp Pine Tree which is still popular with Greenbelt children.

Our sympathy to Alan Schultz of Research Road on the death of his mother Annabelle last week at the age of 88. A memorial service is being planned at Ridewood Village in Silver Spring, where she and Alan's father, Stanley moved to from Dayton, Ohio, three years ago.

Congratulations to former News Review office girl Sophia Kean, niece of editor Mary Lou Williamson and Jim Williamson, who has been named to the dean's list for the fall 2006 semester at Florida Southern College. Sophia is majoring in graphic arts.

Best wishes to News Review staffer Peter Curtis whose heart is now running better with the help of newly-added stents. He is home recuperating comfortably. We wish him a speedy recovery and look forward to his return to Tuesday's editing table.

Congratulations to the following ERHS students named to the Spring 2006 National Honor Roll: Gbolahau Goriola, Kanwal Haider, Christine Hull, Regina Joseph, Michael Robinson and Oluwatimilehin Ugbade; and to Greenbelter S.Y. Srilekha Jayanthi, who attends the Washington International School.

funding going to alternative forms of services to aid the mentally ill. Welfare reform reduced funding for aid to low income persons.

Section 8 housing, the alternative to public housing, offers significantly fewer housing units, creating waiting lists so long that newcomers can not get on the lists.

Unaffordable Housing

The lack of affordable housing in this metropolitan area adds to the problem. Morris says the Washington metropolitan area is the least affordable region for housing. In 2003 a worker earning minimum wage ($6.15 an hour) must work 152 hours more to afford the same two bedroom apartment as for the previous year, an increase of 22 percent.

Approximately 60 percent of those residing in metropolitan households have incomes below $35,000 and pay more than 30 percent of their income for housing. In the last five years, area housing prices increased 91.2 percent, the biggest five-year gain in the nation and twice the national average.

Jansen noted the replacement of low cost housing in the District with upscale apartments. As better housing is developed there and Metro service expands, the homeless are pushed out into places with lower densities and less availability of transportation.

There are no laws to force affordable housing, Jansen contended. When laws were put on the books to require builders who build more than 20 housing units to provide one out of 20 as an affordable housing unit, builders began taking out permits for 19 units at a time.

He also contended that zoning laws prohibit rooming houses, and that for many homeless who cannot afford the cost of apartments, a rented room could meet a need. (In Prince George's County, zoning regulations do permit homeowners to rent out a limited number of rooms in a home but do not permit housing consisting only of rooms to rent.)

Mayor Judith Davis told council that at the recent National League of Cities Conference, Henry Cisneros spoke on the homeless problem and advocated obtaining housing as the first step in dealing with the problems of those who become homeless. Jansen agreed, but noted that only three permanent shelters were available in the county to offer emergency housing opportunities. After an emergency, there is a need for transitional and permanent housing, he said. Jansen said case managers were also necessary to work with those in need. Prince George's County has many fewer case workers than the District, he noted.

Shelters

Besides permanent shelters, three temporary shelters operate during the cold weather: Safe Haven, Winter Haven and Warm Nights. Run by churches, they house another 95 persons. "The churches participating are doing a marvelous job," Jansen said.

Warm Nights will take anybody and receives county support, Jansen reported. Winter Haven has separate space for single men and single women. Safe Haven, which operates in this area of the county, takes only 15 single men who tend to be chronically homeless.

Davis wanted to know if the county's mega-churches were doing enough. Jansen said no. One church, he said, is providing shelter for a week, but could do more weeks.

Jansen said that following Hurricane Katrina his agency took 4,000 calls offering housing. "If we had that good will for the homeless," he said, "we would not have a problem."

Voigt told council that Help by Phone serves between 55,000 and 65,000 persons a year. The service is intended to bridge the gap while people get approved for food stamps. That used to be a 10-day period but now takes about 90 days.

Help by Phone then organized Safe Haven. Voigt said that about 10 of the men have been with Safe Haven from the start. Others of the 15 there have usually been seen before. They seek food and a safe shelter. They want rules and do not want drug addicts and other problem persons with them. They also want to try and find work.

There are no shelters in the southern part of the county, she said.

Greenbelt Community Church, Greenbelt Baptist Church and Berwyn Presbyterian Church are some of those participating. Each provides shelter for one week during the 10-week cold season. Mishkan Torah Synagogue helps Community Church by providing volunteer overnight supervision on Christmas night since the Community Church is responsible for the week of Christmas. However, not all Greenbelt churches participate in Safe Haven.

Troyer said her job is to find out what help the homeless need and then to get that for them. Sometimes it is birth certificates and other documents needed for assistance and job applications. She can get birth certificates online in many cases, she said.

She determines what church her clients belong to and gets family assistance from the churches. She keeps her car loaded with clothing to satisfy needs along that line immediately. Her biggest need is bus passes so the homeless can get to shelters and to service agencies.

At present Troyer works with 49 people in this area. To find the homeless she walks around shopping centers and drives around the area. She recognizes persons she has worked with and who trust her and gets them to help her find those in need.

Troyer proposed that small groups of churches, no more than seven, work together to aid the homeless. She thought that groups of small cities working together could work, too.

Councilmember Leta Mach thought that corporations could provide revolving loan funds to assist those in need of housing to get started. To rent an apartment requires one month's rent up front as a deposit plus prepayment of the first month's rent, plus deposits with the various utility companies.

Linstrom noted that the city manages a fund to help prevent people from being evicted. That is supposed to be a revolving fund. But most recipients move away and do not come back, she said, or make repayment. City Manager Michael McLaughlin noted that the emergency fund is supported by churches and other groups. Whenever the funds get low, he said, he puts the word out and they are replenished by the religious community.

Barbara Havekost, who accompanied Linstrom to the meeting, pointed out that the fund does succeed in keeping people from becoming homeless.

Park told council that Greenbelt CARES has a whole list of resources to help those in need. There is difficulty, however, in getting such persons to address their problems, she said.

The suspect is described as a black male, approximately 15 years of age, 5'7", 150 pounds with black hair and brown eyes.

The second incident occurred at 9:10 p.m. in the vicinity of Breezewood Drive and Cherrywood Terrace. The victims reported that they were walking to their homes when they were approached by as many as 25 people, who demanded money and the food they were carrying. The victims refused, at which time they were assaulted by the group of people. They managed to flee the scene on foot and contacted police. They declined treatment for their injuries.

The last incident was in the 6200 block of Breezewood Drive at 9:58 p.m. A man reported that four youths began chasing him; he ran into a friend's apartment. The youths followed the man into the apartment and began punching and kicking him, while demanding his jacket. The youths proceeded to take his wallet and cell phone, then fled the scene on foot. Police located them nearby and one of them dropped property belonging to the man to the ground upon being approached by police. The youths were then positively identified by the victim. Two 14-year-old, a 15-year-old and a 16-year-old Greenbelt youths were arrested for strong arm robbery and second-degree assault. All suspects were released to parents pending action by the juvenile justice system.

According to Master Police Officer George Mathews, a police investigator advised that they are looking into the possibility that the incidents are related. The detectives have reached out to the victims for more information. The investigations are ongoing.

Also, in regard to the attempted strong arm robbery which was reported January 12 in the area of Breezewood Drive and Cherrywood Terrace involving as many as 20 to 25 people, further investigation puts the number of suspects involved at eight or nine.

with test soil borings that could in some areas require minor changes in the ICC alignment. He said that SHA will await the judges' early ruling on these matters.

SHA is also in the process of acquiring rights-of-way for the ICC and is negotiating with homeowners who have been notified that part or all of their property would be needed for the highway. Two homes, he said, have already been purchased.

Mike Harold of the Audubon Naturalist Society asserted: "We don't want any ICC construction to take place until the lawsuits are decided. It would be irresponsible to destroy land prior to the courts making their decision."

Two New Suits

Approval of the Intercounty Connector earlier this year by the FHWA is being challenged in two different law suits.

The first is being brought by Environmental Defense and Sierra Club as plaintiffs in the District of Columbia District Court. This suit challenges the approval of the ICC by the FHWA and Metropolitan Washington's Transportation Planning Board, defendants.

According to the plaintiffs' law suit summary: The ICC was approved without properly evaluating its effects "on local particle pollution." Recently the EPA has strengthened the national standard for particle (soot) pollution, which is considered the "deadliest pollutant regulated in the U.S."

The plaintiffs note that the ICC approval had been granted without considering whether the resulting emissions would violate this new EPA standard. Currently all monitors near major highways in the Washington metropolitan area already indicate violation of the national health standard for particle pollution.

The second objection of the plaintiffs deals with the failure of the air pollution analysis to quantify the impacts of dangerous toxic pollutants for which EPA has not yet set federal standards. Maryland's air pollution program prohibits levels of benzene and other toxic components of vehicle exhaust that cause a greater than 1 in 100,000 risk of cancer. Measures of such emissions along I-95 already "exceed these limits," the suit claims.

The plaintiffs' third objection deals with the strengthening by Congress of a provision in federal transportation law requiring that transportation projects be funded only if they "minimize fuel consumption." The plaintiffs charge that this requirement was not considered by the transportation agencies in evaluating alternatives.

Second Suit

The second law suit to block construction of the ICC is brought by several plaintiffs - Audubon Naturalist Society of the Central Atlantic States, Inc., Maryland Native Plant Society and Montgomery County residents Roger Metcalf and Eve Burton. The defendants are the FHWA, the United States Department of Transportation and the United States Army Corps of Engineers.

The plaintiffs allege that the "ICC highway project in Montgomery and Prince George's Counties would be a toll road costing billions to connect I-95 and I-270 while doing little or nothing to alleviate traffic congestion on existing roads, including the Capital Beltway, I-95 and I-270." In addition to "its enormous financial cost," the suit alleges that the ICC would "damage . . . high quality natural resources" and add to sprawl, as well as drawing attention away from other "significant transportation problems in suburban Maryland."

Alex Barnes and Brianne Boylan

Couple Joins Peace Corps As Volunteers in Niger

by Rebecca Boggs

"Barka da Kwana!" Brianne Boylan remarks after searching through several neatly written note cards. Translated, this means "good morning" in Hausa, a native language of Niger, West Africa.

Married in July 2006, Boylan and her husband, Alex Barnes, a Greenbelt native, recently decided to volunteer for the Peace Corps in Niger. They left the U.S. for their two-year assignment on January 9 and are currently doing cultural training in Hamdallaye, 20 miles from Niamey, the capital of Niger.

Boylan, who speaks Spanish, says: "The Peace Corps suggests we learn French, the official language and a little of the local languages. There are six main ones."

Niger, she informs me, is predominantly a Muslim country. Two thirds of Niger is covered by the Sahara desert and it has only one year-round body of water, the Niger River. It is the most sparsely populated country and has the lowest standard of living in the world. Located southeast of Algeria, it is slightly less than twice the size of Texas. The average life expectancy is a mere 43 years.

Boylan and Barnes met in June 2003 at Twin Oaks Community, a commune in rural Virginia, where 100 people live, growing almost all their own vegetables and raising animals for all their meat. Barnes states, "I went to the commune because I saw it as a better way to live."

Boylan adds, "It gave me a closer connection with the people and the land." Regarding their move to rural Niger, Boylan says, "Going from the wealthiest country to the poorest is quite a jump. At least since we lived in the commune we are used to composting toilets and a lower standard of living, making $2,000 a year. But we had running water and electricity."

She continues, "In Niger, I've read in the Peace Corps literature, 'You will sleep outside with only your mosquito net between you and the stars.' It is good to know we will at least have a walled-in courtyard for a little privacy." The Peace Corps guarantees them a courtyard and a cement floor in their hut. They will have to rely on water from a well and there will be no electricity.

Barnes has previous Peace Corps experience. He served in Tanzania teaching math and physics from 1996-1999. He says, "The area I lived in was mostly rural but not as rural as what we are expecting in Niger." Regarding the most rewarding part of his Peace Corps experience, he says: "I don't know, maybe I had a connection with the students, it's hard to say. What I liked most was going to the local market, being with the people, walking in the cashew fields and learning about the cashew harvest - their cash crop."

When asked why they decided to join the Peace Corps, Barnes chimes in: "She thought it was a good idea." They both laugh. "It's a great way to see the world," he continues.

Boylan says, "I haven't traveled a lot and I feel it's important to have an understanding of the way people live. Coming from a privileged area, I want to give back and at least promote good relations. Peace Corps is one of the few things the U.S. government does to work on peace. I like the way the Peace Corps is unique as far as most nonprofits go, since you actually go live with the people, see what they need and want and work with them to achieve their goals." Currently there are approximately 100 Peace Corps volunteers in Niger.

Barnes and Boylan will be assigned to a rural community in Niger. Barnes says, "I will be dealing mostly with food crops like millet and beans and looking for ways to extend productivity, irrigation being the most probable method."

Boylan, who grew up in Iowa, explains, "I will be working with crops, agro forestry, natural resource management, volunteer soil and water conservation and reforestation efforts." Their main goal, though, is to make friends, establish good working relationships and learn to feel at home in their surroundings.

Barnes states: "The Peace Corps mission is for Americans to learn about people of a foreign country. For people of another country to learn about real Americans and to help countries meet developing wants and needs as they see fit."

When asked what they hope for, Barnes replies, "I want to be comfortable." When pressed, he elaborates: "I want to be able to walk out of my house and say 'hi' to the neighbors, go to market and function in the market and go to the capital and function there, too."

Boylan says, "I hope to learn a lot and to bring back that knowledge to the States, to form friendships with some people and make a small difference in at least one person's life. We would love to get letters from people," Boylan continues.

Let them know we wish them well as they step out of their comfort zone to spread peace by making friends and helping people in need in Niger.

City Pioneer Receives Award

by Judy Bell

Joyce Mangum, a Greenbelt pioneer and longtime resident of 13 Court Ridge Road, has been volunteering for Meals on Wheels for 20 years. In December she was recognized with a plaque for going the extra mile. The plaque reads, "To Joyce Mangum for your outstanding service 2006."

Mangum's current duties include chairing Route 2, which covers Greenbelt up to Cipriano Road. She delivers meals on that route four to five times a month, serving as many as 22 people. Last week she had 14 stops.

"It's very rewarding. You get attached to these people, very attached. You help them out when they need it," Mangum said.

Linda Curtis, her neighbor and friend, said that Mangum has worked as many as four or five times a week when other volunteers are unable to work, filling in with duties such as packing meals or other tasks she is called on to do.

The meals are cooked on the premises in College Park. Two meals, sometimes three, are delivered Monday through Friday to people who are unable to prepare their own meals. Mangum said that they have delivered oatmeal on occasion, with an extra slice of bread for toast. "People are appreciative. This week a woman told me 'Yesterday's meals were delicious,'" she recalled.

J. O'Connor's Photos On Display at Patuxent

Former Greenbelt Photographer Jim O'Connor will display his artworks in the Hollingsworth Art Gallery of the Patuxent Research Refuge's National Wildlife Visitor Center through January.

O'Connor, who grew up in Greenbelt, later moved to Annapolis where he found much subject matter for his photographs. He now lives in Ellicott City with his wife and four-year-old daughter.

Using mainly digital photography, O'Connor started taking photographs as a hobby. A couple of years ago he became more serious about photography and now does it as a part-time job while working full time. He photographs a variety of subjects from wildlife to landscapes, architecture to portraiture. He says that experimenting with a variety of subjects "allows me to develop my all around skills" as a photographer.

The National Wildlife Visitor Center is located off Powder Mill Road between B-W Parkway and MD Rt. 197, south of Laurel. For information call 301-497-5763 or visit <http://patuxent.fws.gov>.

Scottish Dancing Fun Takes Place Every Tuesday Here

by Ellen Ternes

Research is showing that dancing is a great way to exercise the body and the brain. Here in Greenbelt, Scottish country dancing, the traditional social dance of Scotland, provides an exciting and fun form of dancing for all ages.

Every Tuesday night in the dance studio of the Greenbelt Community Center, the St. Columba's Scottish Country Dancers hold classes for dancers from Greenbelt and around the area. Classes dance to lively jig and reel and beautiful strathspey tunes that drive the thousands of Scottish country dances.

"It's so much fun," said Betsy Hall-Wallace. She and her husband started dancing just last year. "We had seen the dancing at the Scottish games and decided to try it. Now we're hooked."

In addition to the Tuesday classes, dancers can attend dance parties all over the region, which feature some of the top dance musicians in country. In fact, Scottish country dancers can go anywhere in the world and find groups to dance with.

Scottish country dancing dates back to the 18th century when it was performed in the castles of Scotland. Since a revival that began in the 1920s, Scottish country dancing has become a popular social dance from Greenbelt to Japan, from Scotland to New Zealand.

One of five groups in the Washington-Baltimore area, St. Columba's welcomes new dancers at any time. "You don't have to be Scottish or even have any dance experience to do Scottish country dancing," said Janet Simon, president of the St. Columba's group. "And you don't have to come with a partner. You just have to love to dance and have fun."

St. Columba's Scottish Country Dancers meet Tuesdays from 8 to 10 p.m. in the dance studio, ground level of the Community Center.

Trained teachers provide instruction for new and experienced dancers. Spring beginner classes begin on January 30. Comfortable shoes and clothing are recommended.
