Greenbelt's official party to welcome the new year will be held on Wednesday, December 31 from 6:30 p.m. to 12:15 a.m. at the Greenbelt Community Center and the Greenbelt Youth Center. There will be no shortage of local talent ringing in 2009 at the New Year celebration.

Eastern Standard Time

The lineup of bands includes: Eastern Standard Time (E.S.T.), a D.C. area favorite ska band. E.S.T. keeps people on their feet while they play. They will be on the stage in the Community Center Gym from 7 to 9:15 p.m. Preview their sound and learn more about the band at www.easternstandardtime.com.

Our Carriers Bring Holiday Greetings

Around this time of year the youngsters who deliver the News Review traditionally leave holiday greetings envelopes at the homes they serve. The News Review does not pay our carriers much, so your generous holiday donations and expressions of appreciation help make their jobs worthwhile.

Most carriers range in age from pre-teen to the middle teens. For the younger boys and girls, delivering the News Review is their first job experience. Many older carriers started at a young age and continue to deliver the News Review mainly as a service to their neighborhood. It is a learning process for all these youngsters and, in some cases, the instillation of responsibility takes time and patience.

The holiday season affords all of us a chance to show appreciation and to provide encouragement for the efforts of these youngsters and at the same time to show understanding for any failings that may have occurred during the year.

Again this year, the carriers will leave envelopes. We hope these envelopes, identified with the carrier's name and address, will be helpful to you as you show appreciation. If your carrier's name or address is in doubt, mail your envelope to the News Review, 15 Crescent Road, Suite 100, Greenbelt, MD 20770-1887 for forwarding. Please include your address so we can identify your carrier.

New Deal Café Music County Historian Will Visit Here Saturday

Former Greenbelter Alan Virta, author of the 1984 volume "Prince George's County: A Pictorial History," will be visiting family in the area this year and taking his first look at the new location in Greenbelt of the Frederick S. DeMarr Library of County History. The facility is located on the lower level of the Greenbelt Library.

Virta will be joining library staff and other visitors at 12:30 p.m. Saturday, December 20. This will be his first visit since the library moved to Greenbelt and formally opened on May 31.

Virta was very involved over many years with the historical society library. He has been a member of the society since the early 1970s and from 1974 to 1986 served as editor of the society's newsletter, "The News & Notes."

Prince George's County: A Pictorial History was printed in an expanded Tricentennial edition in 1998. Copies of this awardwinning book are available for purchase at the library and can be signed by the author during his visit.

Virta left Greenbelt in 1986; since 1987 he has been archivist and head of Special Collections at Boise State University in Boise, Idaho.

Normal visiting hours for the historical society library are between noon and 4 p.m. on Saturdays, though special arrangements can be made to use the facility at other times. Staff members say that more and more people are making use of the library, which contains ephemeral material, such as old newspapers and pictures that can be invaluable sources for genealogical and other historical issues relating to the county.

Ursula Hollwig Schmid

Ursula Schmid, 83, died early Thanksgiving Day of kidney failure following a bout of cancer. She lived on Maplewood Court.

She is survived by her husband Lawrence (Larry); sister Ilse Hollwig, who lives in Germany; sister-in-law Krista Hollwig (widow of Ursula's brother Richard) and their daughter Irina of Germany; sister Gudrun Greiffenhagen of Austria; and Larry's sisters with their numerous children and grandchildren scattered throughout the United States. To all of these she has been a devoted and loving sister-in-law and aunt.

Mrs. Schmid was born and raised in Berlin, Germany, where she completed secretarial and business schools. During World War II she was assigned to a secretarial position in the Air Transport Ministry. After the war she went through interpreter's school where she became fluent in English. This led to a job with the U.S. State Department in Germany, and later to a position with the U.S. Army in Washington, D.C. There she met her husband Larry, who was a research physicist at Goddard Space Flight Center. She left the U.S. Civil Service to become executive secretary to the regional manager of Lufthansa Airlines, where she worked for many years except for a short period when she worked for the 3M Company in their Washington office.

Ursula and Larry married in June 1962 and moved to Greenbelt in January 1966. Mrs. Schmid was a warm-hearted and gregarious woman who was known and loved by many Greenbelters. She was a gracious hostess and an enthusiastic gardener, who was proud of her colorful azalea display.

According to her request, her ashes have been scattered among these azaleas so that she could continue to be a part of her beloved garden.

to earn National Board Certification. With the addition of 60 new board certified teachers, the county is third in the state and Maryland the ninth in the nation in board certification.

It was nice to see James and Arlie Dobbin at the Co-op. They played Mr. and Mrs. Santa Claus at Beltway Plaza for many years. Mr. Dobbin still looked the part, with his red cap and white beard which he assured us was the "real thing." They - and we - wish everyone Happy Holidays.

Greenbelt Historian, Knepper At Work on Her Third Book

by Brian Hooks

Brian Hooks, a University of Maryland journalism student, had the opportunity to interview historian and author Cathy Knepper.

Cathy D. Knepper reads a lot. She is a historian with a focus on 20th century American culture, who received her Ph.D. in American Studies from the University of Maryland in 1993 after 20 years as a social worker and genealogist.

In 2001 she wrote Greenbelt, Maryland: A Living Legacy of the New Deal and followed that with a book of letters addressed to Eleanor Roosevelt by Americans worn thin from the Depression and World War II. The introduction to the latter work includes a quotation from "Mrs. President" during a radio broadcast, taking a tone somewhat pertinent to issues of today. "There is little that I haven't seen in the course of the last few years which touches the third of the nation which is ill fed, ill housed, ill clothed and I think that estimate is a low estimate." said Roosevelt.

Now Knepper is working on her third book. It focuses on the little-known 1948 trial of six black men charged with murder in Trenton, New Jersey. The work ties into present-day issues of recession, civil rights, local government and even socialism.

The story gets little attention, she said, because the men were eventually found innocent. Nevertheless, the lack of proper judicial procedure and the involvement of local citizens against a death sentence for the men make these events noteworthy.

Knepper, who works out of her Kensington home in a cozy office decorated with antique fine china and well-organized stacks of books and old newspapers, is avidly opposed to the death penalty. She volunteers at Amnesty International, a human rights advocacy organization. Her van outside her home is plastered with bumper stickers saying, "Death Penalty is Dead Wrong," "Execution is Not the Solution" and "Denounce Torture," side by side with "USA" and "War Is Not the Answer." She said her own rights have never been extremely violated "but for some reason I am very passionate about people's rights and justice" and this spirit carries over into her research and writing.

ters belonging to the "pioneers" of Greenbelt.

The federal government, under President Franklin Roosevelt's New Deal, funded the building of similar low-cost housing in many places across the U.S. – including the two other "green towns" of Greendale, Wisconsin and Greenhills, Ohio – but Greenbelt served as a prototype for planned communities, most of which Greenbelt has outlasted.

Roosevelt Letters

In her Roosevelt book Knepper focused on the people who appealed to Eleanor Roosevelt during the hardship of the Depression and World War II. "I'd like to see someone try to go through that book without shedding at least one tear," said Mark Knepper. Eleanor Roosevelt helped to inspire public interest in the building process in Greenbelt after she paid a visit here and wrote a story about the city in her syndicated newspaper column, My Day. Knepper said the story was a response to a letter from a discouraged citizen who feared the city would not reach completion. She added that Mrs. Roosevelt's interest in the lives of the people of Greenbelt was one reason that later residents opted to name the local high school after the former first lady rather than after her husband.

Mark Knepper admires the unique perspective of his wife's work. "It's more a history of how people think than a history of wars or leaders," he said.

HSAs to Be Explained At Meeting January 7

The Prince George's County Board of Education wants to ensure that students in the Class of 2009 receive their diplomas this spring and is sending a message – if you do not sit and pass the High School Assessment (HSA) tests you do not walk at graduation.

Students must complete all four HSAs in algebra, biology, English and government with a combined score of 1,602 in order to graduate. If students do not pass a test after taking it twice, they can work on a Bridge Plan project to meet the requirement.

The board has panned two parent meetings in the northern and southern areas of the county to provide information to parents and guardians of students who have not passed the HSAs. Parents of Eleanor Roosevelt and DuVal High School students will meet Wednesday, January 7 at 7 p.m. at Northwestern High School, 7000 Adelphi Road in Hyattsville.

Knepper was passionate about her Greenbelt research. Though she has never actually lived in Greenbelt, she probably knows more about the city's history than many of its residents. It took her roughly 10 years to finish the book, she said. "I also had a house, a husband, two kids and two cats to take care of." She and her husband Mark of 38 years have two sons, Ross and Ben, who live in Pittsburgh and Pensacola, respectively. "Pie," as Mark Knepper calls his wife, would leave the kids at home and work on the book from 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. on Saturdays.

In writing about Greenbelt, she focused on "the families and how they coped with the Great Depression and World War II," she said. Knepper's research included rummaging through issues of the Greenbelt News Review, public and personal files and letwant for Prince George's County Public Schools.

Hite, the current deputy superintendent, has been working with Deasy since he announced on September 30 that he would leave to join the Bill and Melinda Gates Foundation.

College Savings Plans Enrollment Open Now

The College Savings Plans of Maryland (CSPM) announced that the Maryland Prepaid College Trust (MPCT) opened its 2008-2009 enrollment period on December 1 and will continue enrollment through April 6, 2009. The MPCT is one of two Section 529 plans offered by the CSPM that give families an opportunity to help hedge against tuition inflation by locking in tomorrow's tuition at today's prices and is backed by the security of a Maryland Legislative Guarantee. Prices for the MPCT University Plans have increased by only 1.1 percent over last year, due primarily to no tuition increase at most Maryland public four-year colleges for the 2008-2009 academic year. Prices for the Community College Plans have remained the same.

Both plans offer generous federal and Maryland state tax benefits and may be used at nearly any accredited college in the country. For details call 410-767-2037 or visit www.collegesavingsmd.org.

a book of majors. I saw a bulletin for health and thought it was interesting," he said. Jakob says he was attracted to the subject matter because it dealt with all the things he had interest in, such as anatomy, physiology and psychology.

After graduating from Hunter College, Jakob received his master's degree from the University of New Mexico at Albuquerque. While teaching at a junior high school in Brooklyn, Jakob wanted to try something "very different" from what he was doing. So he found a master's program at the University of New Mexico that he thought looked "interesting" and went for the change. He later received his doctorate in health education from the University of Maryland at College Park.

Jakob has been teaching for 37 years. He taught at 10 schools prior to Roosevelt, where he has been for 14 years. He calls his experience at Roosevelt "amazing," the "finest school" where he has ever taught. "At other public schools," Jakob says, "the classroom experience was 50 to 80 percent discipline compared to real teaching time. At this school, students are so prepared that most of the time in class is real teaching time. So it is a joy for a teacher who loves the subject matter; you can really apply your craft.'

According to Jakob, the administration of the school is "outstanding" and the students "amazing" and "some of the smartest" he has ever met. Jakob says he respects the community very much because the people are "super supportive" and they "provide assistance for students who need it."

Shows Respect

In the classroom, mutual respect is important for both students and teachers. Roosevelt junior Julia Ruth says that Jakob shows his students the highest level of respect. "[He] treats every single person with the best of intentions for their self growth and well-being. He gives every one of his students individual attention and treats them with respect," she says.

Jakob is known around the school for his corny jokes and his playful manner in the classroom. "He knows how to mix the jokes with the learning and make it fun for everyone. He can be easygoing yet harsh when it is really important," Ruth says.

Jakob is a teacher who tries to do everything he can to make sure all his students are succeeding. Only a handful of teachers ever go the extra mile for their students but Jakob makes a habit of it. "I look forward to his class knowing that no matter how I go into the class feeling, I will come out excited and full of useful knowledge for the real world," Ruth said.

various student events and dances. "Being the SGA coordinator I get the opportunity to work with students in a non-academic setting."

Ari Melenciano, a sophomore at Eleanor Roosevelt High in the SGA class, said having Stern as a teacher is a great experience. "I love Mrs. Stern as my teacher. She is an understanding teacher and doesn't talk down to us as students, she's great," said Melenciano.

The SGA coordinator has a hard job trying to cater to the interests of thousands of students but Stern has been successful and enjoys the work. "Every year is different," she says. "There are new challenges and new good things every year. It never gets boring," Stern comments. "Dealing with diverse personalities makes SGA different.'

Stern's students range from sophomores to seniors and they enjoy her classes. She also teaches AP Human Geography, which is a course that gives an in-depth analysis of human development across the world. "She is a funny teacher and is one of the most optimistic teachers I know," said senior Laura Pinsky.

Well-liked

In turn she has become one of Roosevelt's well-liked teachers. Her bright and quirky personality works well with the students at Roosevelt and with the staff.

U.S. History teacher Brian Secker, who works alongside Stern, has been teaching at Roosevelt for three years and believes she is a "fantastic and supportive co-worker." He goes on to comon all levels and all grade levels. She takes on a lot of work and is the first person I go to for schoolrelated problems. She is an extremely helpful person."

"I go to her to assist me for things, big or small. She does for other people and goes out of her way to help," comments Secker.

Stern is also a role model for those who also want to be teach-ment, "She connects with students ers. "I encourage more people to become teachers. It's a lot of work but it's worth it. I love to influence students.'

> Senior Funmi Akinyode, one of her students, says about Stern and her inspiration to be a teacher, "I've always known I wanted to help other needy people but Mrs. Stern's passion gave me that extra push to continue my own dream of teaching."

scribed Michael Robinson, of the Berwyn Heights Volunteer Fire Department and Rescue Squad, as a "fearless go-getter, who was always anywhere work needed to be performed." He put in over 1,000 hours of fire and rescue training with the University of Maryland and is known for his dedication to his job, putting in extra work to organize the annual fund drive and to assist the treasurer with administrative duties.

This is the first year that Berwyn Heights, the first responder for fires in Greenbelt West, has been invited to the awards ceremony, Greenbelt Mayor Judith Davis said.

Bill Milligan, Vice Commander of the Southern Maryland District Legion, was glad for the event honoring these men. "We don't do enough to recognize our first responders," Milligan said.

The ceremony was held at Post 136 on Greenbelt Road. There were about 22 tables of people at the buffet style dinner to recognize the public safety officers.

Attendees included Davis, other councilmembers and city officials, a representative from County Councilmember Ingrid Turner's office, various members of the police and fire departments, legionaires and community residents. We can't thank the Legion Post enough for holding the awards dinner, Davis said.

'They really show our appreciation to our public safety officers," she said. "They're out there protecting us. They keep us safe so we can sleep at night. I'm very proud and very appreciative."

Combined Choir Presents Annual Community Concert

by Rachael DeNale

Greenbelt Community Church hosted its annual holiday concert Sunday night, December 14. The freewill concert presented by the Greenbelt Combined Choir has been hosted at the church for longer than many of the parishioners have attended this church.

The choir started out as three choirs, said bass Tony Fominaya, a member of the Greenbelt Community Church. They would sing in three locations at different times over an evening rather than in one location at one time, Fominaya explained.

The choir began rehearsal this year in September, its usual beginning phase, said Bea McCarthy, a member of the church for 21 years.

Members are mostly older, Fominaya said. They are mostly in their 60s to 80s, though there are some younger members. Fominaya's sons are in the choir. His son Chris Fominaya is one of the two music directors.

The choir is open to anyone in the community. Some people come from churches outside of Greenbelt, Fominaya said.

In recent years the concert has been held in conjunction with a spaghetti dinner. While the dinner charges a small fee to benefit the church's youth group and the Boy Scout Troop #746, the concert is always a free program for the community.

The songs chosen by the choir are mostly religious. A number of them are traditional Christmas music, accompanied by the piano, said Kathy Fominaya, Tony's wife.

The choir warmed up shortly before its 7:30 p.m. debut on Dec. 14 while the community residents ate spaghetti in the church basement, which serves as a community room.

During warm-up, the choir went through a few of its musical selections. They also practiced standing and sitting in unison to help give a professional feel to their performance, which was televised on the Greenbelt channel.

During Bea McCarthy's 21 years as a member of the church, she remembers only a few years when the concert did not occur, and that was because the director retired, she said.

"I definitely look forward to it each year," McCarthy said. She likes to stand in the church's loft so she can see everything. This year the choir, which has

25 members, had a few variations in its style. In years past the choir did only one or two duets, said the other music director, Jean Cook, a member of the choir since 1974. That changed drastically this year, she said, where the choir did a number of duets and quartets. So many people had distinct voices, Cook said, that they wanted to give them the chance to show that talent.

The numbers ran from duets within the choir, to invitations to include all the people in attendance to sing along from books or the program provided. "I was very pleased," Cook said about the concert. "Everyone had a good time."

The choir also performs with other groups in a combined concert at Thanksgiving and they offer a show at Green Ridge House, Fominaya said. This year, the Green Ridge House show was held on Thursday.

Following the concert the choir and those in attendance were welcomed into the community room of the church, where there was punch and an assorted buffet of cookies provided by the choir.

City Notes

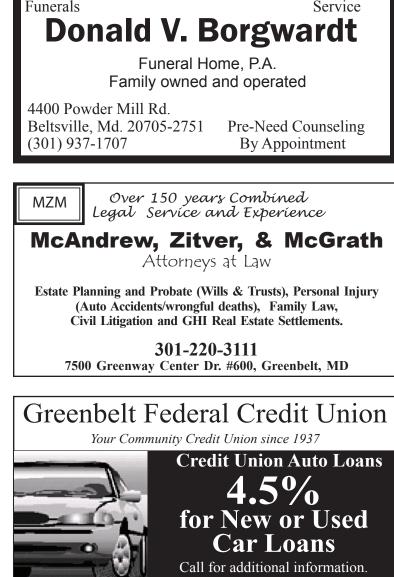

Planning staff met with Animal Control and a veterinarian to discuss the best rehabilitation method for a shepherd mix that had been running at large and was captured last week.

Parks and Playgrounds rebuilt a damaged snowplow, saving $1,000 to $1,500 in replacement/ repair costs.

Recreation Department staff continues work on the ACHIEVE grant application. If the city were to receive this $30,000 grant it would expand the Get Active Greenbelt initiative throughout the community, including staff training, promotion of fitness programs, ensuring proper nutrition and ways to address policy, systems and environmental changes.

Church Spaghetti Dinner Is a Popular Holiday Event

by Rachael DeNale

Greenbelt Community Church has hosted a spaghetti dinner for its members and people in the community for years. This year's dinner was held on Sunday, December 14.

The annual dinner began as an effort to bring together the community for the annual Greenbelt Combined Choir Concert and has been going on for as long as many of the church's current members have been involved with the church.

An estimated 200 people attended over the course of the dinner's two-and-a-half hours.

The proceeds from the dinner were divided between the church's youth group and the Boy Scouts of Greenbelt, #746, said Kathy Fominaya, a member of the church and the "kitchen cabinet," or those who "work the kitchen," she said.

The Boy Scouts helped with the set-up of the church's basement room where the dinner was held and with the food preparation. The youth group is too young to help with this part, Fominaya added.

Preparations for the dinner start about a week in advance with people working on homemade sauce for the spaghetti, Fominaya said. Her husband Tony Fominaya worked on the sauce in batches over the past week, she added.

The preparations go from 3 to 5:30 p.m. when the dinner starts, Fominaya said. Dinner continued until 7:30 p.m. when the Greenbelt Combined Choir concert began.

During the concert, volunteers assist with cleanup and reserve some of the spaghetti for the choir members, who generally prefer not to eat before the show.

The dinner included spaghetti, meat and meatless sauces, salad and garlic bread. The food was set up buffet style.

The basement of the church was decorated with a Christmas tree and other Christmas ornamentations.

People attending the dinner, many members of the church, came as families, their ages ranging from young children to those in their 80s. The church has a very welcoming community. "Welcome to our humble church," said one member to a newcomer.

Bea McCarthy, a member of the church for 21 years, looks forward to the concert and dinner every year. "It's a very family-oriented church," Mc-Carthy said. "There are a lot of families," she added, mentioning a few family names that had multiple members active in the church

And it's a very community oriented environment, she added, talking about a number of activities church members participate in, like helping the needy of Prince George's County or hosting an exchange student.

Fair Trade Items

The dinner also was a location for Marsha Voigt to sell fair trade products from all over the world through SERRV International, a non-profit organization locally based in New Windsor, Md., Voigt said.

The products were listed at 50 percent off, Voigt said, because she was trying to sell off the remainder of the products. She tries to sell most of them at the fall bazaar each year.

Following the concert in the main hall of the church, attendees filed back down into the basement and community event room for punch and cookies. The cookies had been provided by different members of the choir for this event and differed in size and type.

Overall, the spaghetti dinner was like a social hour, said Mayor Judith Davis. "It was like one big family."

Seasonal Foods At Riversdale

Anvone who has ever visited Riversdale House Museum on a Sunday afternoon from April through November may remember visiting the early 19th century kitchen where volunteers from the Riversdale Kitchen Guild re-create historic foods on the open hearth. Usually this group douses the fire and closes up shop for the winter. However, winter visitors to the mansion will no longer be denied the opportunity to see these cooks in action with a new program called "Seasonal Selections." This program will offer monthly special cooking events all year long that will focus on a different topic each month. Holidays, the schedule of seasonal fresh produce and/or the traditional cycles of an early 19th century farm will inspire each month's "Seasonal Selection." These food-ways programs are sponsored in part by Giant Food.

December's "Seasonal Selection" is "Martha Washington's Great Cake"; it is scheduled for Saturday, December 27 from 6 to 9 p.m. After taking a candlelit tour of Riversdale House Museum, persons can journey out to the dependency kitchen to watch Riversdale Kitchen Guild members prepare holiday fare, 19th century style. Ever seen or tasted a cake made with 40 eggs? Guests will be able to see and sample Martha Washington's massive "Great Cake."

Visit Riversdale on Friday and Sundays from noon to 3:30 p.m. There is a nominal admission fee. The "Seasonal Selections" program is included in the Sunday admission price.

Riversdale, a National Historic Landmark, is located at 4811 Riverdale Road in the town of Riverdale Park. For more information, call 301-864-0420; TTY 301-699-2544 or visit the website www.pgparks.com; email Riversdale@pgparks.com.

National Gallery Has Holiday Caroling

Shop with a Cop Brings Joy To Springhill Lake Children

by Rachael DeNale

On Saturday morning, December 13, 20 children from needy families attending Springhill Lake Elementary School joined 20 employees from the Greenbelt Police Department for the second annual "Shop with a Cop." The idea behind the event, which started at 9 a.m. and ran until about 1:30 p.m., is to take the students holiday shopping at Target in Beltway Plaza.

It was sponsored by the Greenbelt Fraternal Order of Police with the dual intent to "come out and help the community" and to show youths "the good side of police officers," said Scott Kaiser, coordinator of the event.

All adults involved were sworn officers or civilians from the police department or the school and parents. "These are the officers who work in this community," said Chris Wichtendahl, special education coordinator at Springhill Lake Elementary. "It helps the kids view the police differently." "We're here on our day off donating our time," Kaiser said.

Local businesses donated to the cause as well. Each child got a gift card to Target of $100, Safeway donated $25 gift cards to each child for the holiday season and Three Brothers donated pizzas to be eaten after the shopping trip. Target also made cupcakes, ices and sodas available to the ofwas corralling the children. "This is going to be an interesting shopping trip," said Jackie Curley, administrative assistant to Greenbelt Police Chief James Craze, before the group left for Target.

Individualized

The trip was individualized for each child or group of children. Each adult was assigned a child before they headed out in police vans to Target. Some of the students made lists of what they wanted to get. Others decided what to get when they saw the merchandise in the store.

Jessie Houle, a dispatcher for the police department, got to work with sisters Ridda, 7, and Mishal, 6, who had vastly different ideas about what they should and could get. The girls did not know what gifts to buy but did know whom they wanted to shop for, their parents and their younger sister.

"I always wanted to do it and my supervisor said I could this year," Houle said. She had been scheduled to work but was able to get off in order to participate with the outreach-shopping trip.

Each adult needed to make sure their children stayed within their $100s budget while still getting all the gifts they wanted for their families and themselves.

After the snacks provided by Target the group headed back to the Springhill Lake Recreation Center where the adults helped the kids wrap their gifts. Seven tables were set up for wrapping and one was set up with the 10 pizzas provided by Three Brothers and assorted candies. Everyone pitched in to wrap the gifts. But even so, there were a few wrapping mishaps, with paper cut too short or with oddly shaped presents. When nearly everyone was finished, the pizzas were opened.

ficers and students following their shopping expeditions, said Mike Maloney, Target's executive team leader.

The economy, especially this year, is "really rough on the working poor," Wichtendahl said. "There are so many more families that have lost their jobs," she said. So the gift card, holiday meal and help with wrapping the gifts are a big relief.

The school tried to pick members of the same families to participate this year, so they'd get to shop together, Wichtendahl said. There were a number of siblings in the group of students who ranged from kindergarteners to fifth-graders.

The Greenbelt Police work with this school because it is near the transitional homes in the area, Wichtendahl said. Other communities in the area are "more stable." A large part of the event

"As long as we brought everybody back and their parents come to pick them up, I think it went pretty well," Kaiser said, joking.

Even so, there were discussions about what should be done differently next year to make the program run more smoothly. The Fraternal Order of Police and Springhill Lake Elementary School staff both want to continue with the program.
