

French Immersion Program Now Being Considered for Old GMS

by James Giese

A memorandum from City Manager Michael McLaughlin, included in an information packet for a June 11 Greenbelt City Council public hearing on reuse of the old Greenbelt Middle School building, shed new light on what Prince George's County school officials might do with the property. They are considering using the building for the French Immersion program now located at the Robert Goddard School, according to McLaughlin. His memo also reported that the school system staff now is intent on relocating the school bus lot adjacent to the old school. Before any decisions are made, an architectural firm will assess the building's structural condition and any changes necessary to reutilize the space for another school.

French Immersion

The French Immersion program has shared space with a Montessori program at Goddard. The proposal would continue the Montessori program at Goddard and relocate the French Immersion program, expanding it from 350 to around 500 students from pre-kindergarten to eighth grade.

The French Immersion proposal will be explored before consideration of interest in the building by Turning Point Academy and the city. Although the Board of Education could receive a proposal to consider at its June 28 meeting, city officials believe it more likely that it will not take place until its August meeting, there being no meeting scheduled for July.

McLaughlin's report noted that Dr. Bonita Coleman-Potter, deputy superintendent of schools, acknowledged the city's interest in the old building and is willing to make space available to the city either under a facility-use arrangement (where space is available after school hours at little or no cost) or as leased space if not required for school use.

School staff have talked to representatives of Turning Point Academy about their interest in the school but will not consider that option until they resolve the building's reuse for school system needs.

Bus Lot

According to McLaughlin, Coleman-Potter also considers the present bus lot an eyesore. School system staff intends to move the lot but have not identified a new location. In the short term, the bus lot may be reconfigured and the 1969 school addition may be demolished to provide more space for buses.

City representatives also suggested exploring available space at the old Washington Post plant in College Park, which the University of Maryland has recently acquired.

History

Council formed the Greenbelt Middle School Task Force in December 2010, believing that the school system would want to quickly resolve what to do with the old building once the new school is completed. (Now in its final stages of construction, it is expected to open this August.)

At that time, it was believed that the school system would not be interested in reutilizing the building, which had been determined unsuitable for school use. This, in fact, was the reason for a new building.

Council Meets with State Highway Administration

by Thomas X. White

The Greenbelt City Council met with District 3 State Highway Administration (SHA) regional officials on Wednesday, May 30 to get an update on local highway issues and concerns. Such stakeholder meetings are part of council's regular once-a-year series of meetings with businesses, local organizations and government agencies to discuss items of mutual interest to the city.

Five councilmembers were on hand for the meeting along with City Manager Michael McLaughlin. Councilmember Leta Mach was unable to attend and Councilmember Edward Putens arrived near the end of the meeting. Representing SHA were Felicia Murphy, assistant district engineer for traffic and Kate Mazzara, assistant district engineer for program development.

The agenda was light. Ongoing reconstruction of the Md. Route 201 (Kenilworth Avenue) bridge over the Beltway got most attention followed by a catch-all category of "Other Items" covering a variety of topics. These included bicycle and pedestrian-friendly roadways, traffic signal timing issues, "Complete Streets," the Greenbelt and Md. 193 Corridor Sector Plan and an SHA update on upcoming road projects in the area.

Kenilworth Bridge

The ongoing SHA project to repair or rebuild the decking for the Rte. 201 bridge over I-95 is nearing completion but running a little behind schedule. Traffic on Kenilworth Avenue thus may have to persevere a little longer.

Because contractors are now into the phase of pouring the bridge deck, the back-ups from the project have recently been a bit more severe. SHA engineers indicate the project is scheduled to be completed in the fall of this year.

Council was concerned about whether the finished project would be friendly to bicyclists and pedestrians, a theme continuing throughout the meeting for other areas of the city. Responding to those concerns, SHA engineers said that for most resurfacing projects there is little opportunity (or funding) to expand the travel lanes.

Engineers would be left to squeeze extra space for a bike lane by taking away a little space from vehicle travel lanes. They will, however, increase signage in those areas to advise motorists to share the road with bicyclists. SHA officials also noted that projects with a longer planning range have a better chance to address such amenities as bike lanes and sidewalks.

SHA Project Update

More resurfacing projects are slated for Md. Route 201 from Goodluck Road north to I-95 and on Md. Route 193 from Rhode Island Avenue eastward to Southway. These will be grind and resurface projects but may also include updated American Disabilities Act (ADA) related improvements for ramps, pedestrian safety and "pinch" points along the roadway.

Mayor Judith Davis expressed the view that the SHA should take advantage of such projects to consider more "out-of-the-box" types of improvements for pedestrian and bicycle safety. In response, the SHA officials said such resurfacing projects would not allocate funds for sidewalks.

Sector Plan

Judging by the reaction of the SHA officials, there appeared to be no SHA knowledge of or coordination with the Prince George's County Planning Department regarding the soon-to-be proposed Sector Plan for Greenbelt and the Md. Route 193 corridor. Council thus summarized the several Sector Plan initiatives intended to improve Md. 193 from Branchville Road to Hanover Parkway. These include signal timing, improving the Hanover Parkway intersection with Greenbelt Road and improving the intersection of Lakecrest Drive, Legion Drive and Greenbelt Road. Also planned is a significant transformation of the Md. Route 201

City Council Holds Stakeholder Meeting with Greenbelt Homes

by Jessica Wilde

At its annual stakeholder meeting with the Greenbelt City Council on Wednesday, June 13 the board of Greenbelt Homes, Inc. (GHI) discussed issues facing the co-op in the city's 75th year, including an anniversary celebration, outstanding right-of-way legal boundaries, playground improvements, Pepco tree removal, plant waste, water piping and a proposed but unlikely cell phone tower.

Anniversary

GHI is planning an anniversary event on August 12 in Roosevelt Center with the theme, "Co-ops: Building a Better Greenbelt." There will be tables from each of the seven co-ops in the Greenbelt Cooperative Alliance. In addition to the anniversary, 2012 is the International Year of Cooperatives.

Mayor Judith Davis was happy to see organizations getting into the spirit, as GHI members giggled at the prospect of an anniversary Labor Day float including a play with Roosevelt himself, as planned by GHI board member Bill Jones.

Right-of-Way

GHI's recently surveyed and plotted legal boundaries reveal 185 homes and properties extend beyond GHI property lines onto city street rights-of-way. Of these, 100 yard boundaries are outside GHI property lines by a substantial amount and 81 are outside by only about a foot. Four buildings, however, cross over the property lines into street rights-of-way.

These encroachments are scattered throughout the community and members without plats do not necessarily know whether their yards or buildings are outside GHI lines.

In the past, GHI and the city have worked together to resolve right-of-way encroachment issues on Crescent Road between Gardenway and Eastway, a process that has taken about two years.

"It's not going to be as easy as Crescent Road," Davis said.

City Manager Michael McLaughlin said the process might be faster this time since figuring out the approach is what took so long before. He suggested waiting until the GHI board had discussed the issue further on Thursday.

"If the city has this part of the house, we can come in and vacuum," Davis joked.

Playground Improvements

The city's proposal to remove two smaller playgrounds within

GHI, at 12 Court Hillside and 2 Court Laurel Hill Road, and to build one larger multi-age playground requires approval from their potential neighbors and from GHI, which will be footing 20 percent of the cost, estimated at $22,000.

The proposed new playground, to be located on city land, would be spread out to accommodate safety standards. The two smaller playgrounds in question would demand refurbishing if they are not removed.

There are 20 playgrounds within the GHI area, eight of which are on co-op property; and the city usually upgrades about one a year. About four or five playgrounds have been upgraded by the city so far, McLaughlin said.

GHI resident Robert Snyder spoke in favor of the two smaller playgrounds, more in keeping with the original intent of the co-op, he said. He frequently sees people playing at one of the playgrounds proposed for removal. He said it is well maintained.

The city plans to pay for their portion of the new playground with grant money from the state.

Nominations for 2012 Outstanding Citizen

Dear Neighbor:
With Greenbelt's Labor Day Festival rapidly approaching, all Greenbelters are asked to be on heightened alert for this year's Outstanding Citizen. The process of identifying that special person in a city of citizen volunteers is difficult and requires input from citizens like you!

Some outstanding citizens are easily spotted because of their creative leadership and high visibility within organizations. Or they may touch others in a quiet way and are characterized by a strong sense of compassion and desire to serve.

While a committee will select 2012's Outstanding Citizen, that selection – the 40th since the award began in 1973 – is made from nominations submitted from the community. Help identify our city's outstanding citizen by completing the nomination form (on this page). Describe, in your own words, your nominee's contributions or acts of kindness.

Nominations are due by July 30, 2012. The opening ceremonies of Greenbelt's Labor Day Festival will include the announcement of Greenbelt's Outstanding Citizen. Besides the recognition and congratulatory proclamations, the honoree serves as the Grand Marshall for the Labor Day Parade.

All of us have had the opportunity to be associated with individuals from Greenbelt who have distinguished themselves for their outstanding volunteer service to our community. Rarely do they receive the recognition they deserve. History indicates that many of Greenbelt's Outstanding Citizens have been nominated several times before their selection. The committee encourages nominators to be persistent.

We know we can count on you to keep this one of Greenbelt's special events!

Attractive Hazards, Hungry Animals

A friend and her husband were walking in the woods in Lanham 4 or 5 days ago and came upon a cat, motionless, with its head stuck in a food can. Tabby was dirty, thin and scraggly and had some neck injury.

Then, they looked more closely and saw feeble breathing. Considerable effort removed the can, then "... eeeow" and off the cat went.

I hope you will discuss this with your cat and anybody you know who leaves almost-empty food cans in the woods.

Thanks for New Speed Limit Sign

Thank you to the City of Greenbelt for the new 25 mph speed limit sign at the corner of Southway and Ridge Road, where people come westbound. It has been frightening to hear wheels squeal and then the zoom of cars, motorcycles and trucks who seem to think that when there's no sign, the minimum speed should be 40. Some seem to travel as fast as 50. I think there has been a clear improvement since the sign went up.

It's a nice high sign, too, and ought to help prevent Metro bus wrecks. The bus drivers also seem to think there is no speed limit on that stretch of road. To get up to the speed they want to drive, they swing wide at that corner and travel either westbound in the eastbound lane or along the double yellow line instead of to its right. I complained about this to Metro for two years with no noticeable abatement. Station a police officer near that corner by 6:15 a.m. and Metro's 6:21 bus will get a ticket almost every day.

This may be the first time anybody ever said thank you to the city for putting up a speed limit sign, but there it is.

On Screen

Summer Campiness

"Moonrise Kingdom," set on an island in New England in 1965, opens Friday, June 22 at Old Greenbelt Theatre. On a summer's day, a pair of 12-year-olds – bespectacled Boy Scout camper and localite girl with books and cat in tow – run away into the woods. Led by Scout Master Ward (Edward Norton) and police officer Captain Sharp (Bruce Willis), a search takes off after the youngsters. Shifting inner and outer weather melds with concerns serious and arch as younger and older generations, shaped to a fare-thee-well by director Wes Anderson, try to find their separate and conjoined ways. Bill Murray and Frances McDormand weigh in as the girl's parents.

PG-13, for sexual content and smoking. 94 minutes.

ASG Shows "The Dish" At Community Center

On Thursday, June 28 at 7:30 p.m. the Astronomical Society of Greenbelt (ASG) will show the feature film "The Dish" in Room 114 at the Greenbelt Community Center.

The free movie is a fictionalized account of how the Parkes Observatory in Australia was used to relay live television coverage of man's first steps on the moon during the Apollo 11 mission in 1969. Acted by Sam Neill, Patrick Warburton and Tom Long, much of the film was shot on location – the cricket match and hayride scenes were shot on the real dish with researchers often postponing experiments to position the dish for photography. Set reconstruction was very accurate down to small details like ashtrays.

Entries Sought For Retro Town Fair

There will be a special Greenbelt 75th Anniversary event, a Retro Town Fair, held during the Labor Day Festival this year. It will recreate town fairs of early Greenbelt.

The first Town Fair was in 1939 after a request from the Garden Club to council that a flower competition be held. Council expanded the plan to include canned goods, needlework and baked good. It also included concerts, puppet shows, athletic contests and more. Many of the elements were incorporated into modern Labor Day Festivals. The "County Fair" style judging will be revived this year to pay homage to those early celebrations by Labor Day Festival predecessors.

For this special anniversary event residents are asked to enter flowers, vegetables, fruits, baked goods, canned goods and needle arts to be displayed, then judged by a panel of experts. Start making entry plans now.

Ribbons will be awarded for first place, second place, third place and participation. In the event of a truly superior entry, a Grand Champion ribbon will be awarded.

At the meeting close Davis thanked SHA officials for recent beautification efforts on Kenilworth Avenue near the intersection with Crescent Road. They appreciated the thought but advised council that these plantings were the work of Prince George's County.

Pepco

Pepco will be replacing poles, transformers and over 37,000 feet of wire throughout Greenbelt in their six-month rehabilitation project to reduce the frequency and quantity of electrical outages.

This will be the biggest thing in Greenbelt in recent years, said Eldon Ralph, GHI general manager.

Matt Berres of GHI will work with city staff Lesley Riddle and Thomas Matthews to oversee Pepco's work, analyzing the environmental impact and ensuring effective communication with residents.

But it is the tree trimming and removal that is causing a stir.

"We are proud of our tree cover in the city and this project would put a major dent in it," said Rodney Roberts, Greenbelt city councilmember.

Pepco will be replacing some of the trees it removes with shorter ones and will be putting in taller poles.

GHI members expressed concern about Pepco's asking individual residents for permission to remove trees from their yards, since permission should actually be granted by GHI itself.

"This is going to be a major project. There may be a few oopsies. It happens," said Davis.

The GHI board will be able to review and comment at their meeting on July 19 before any permits are granted to Pepco.

Plant Waste

Council has adopted an ordinance to prevent indiscriminate dumping onto the Forest Preserve, disrupting GHI's long-time dumping procedures. Hazardous waste and invasive plants have become a problem, as trucks from miles around are rumored to be adding their own contributions.

GHI contractors and staff are allowed to continue disposing of plant waste near Northway Fields in the interim while the city develops guidelines.

McLaughlin has granted a small number of permits for GHI residents to dump yard waste but that might not be a sustainable alternative. Twenty permits would be his breaking point, he said.

GHI resident Christopher Shuman suggested the city has not received many permit requests – only five – because they have not been advertising the availability of such permits.

From leaf bags and collapsible waste containers to mulch mowers and "yard waste" bumper stickers, the city and GHI have come up with several suggestions but have not yet resolved what to do with the waste.

Nature Tots Program Is About Busy Bees

In celebration of National Pollinator month, tots are invited to buzz over to Patuxent Research Refuge to discover how bees help provide flowers and food. Become a bee in this hands-on, interactive program for ages 3 and 4 on Monday, June 25 from 10:30 to 11:30 a.m. and 1 to 2 p.m.

This free program is held at the National Wildlife Visitor Center located on Powder Mill Road between the Baltimore-Washington Parkway and Rt. 197.

Water Piping

GHI is seeking help from the city in dealing with the Washington Suburban Sanitary Commission (WSSC), after WSSC terminated a proposed infrastructure upgrade to water piping in GHI's masonry units. If WSSC pulled out, GHI would be responsible for 21,000 feet of extra pipes at great cost.

The Commission has been unresponsive to GHI's request to reconsider.

"It's the classic case of a big guy treating a small guy with disrespect if not contempt," said David Morse, GHI board member.

The water pipes have already long exceeded their estimated use of life, said Chuck Hess, GHI treasurer and resident Christopher Shuman's masonry home has already required emergency pipe repair. Plants were killed and masonry broken in the process, he said, urging an expedited response.

Davis suggested adding GHI's water piping concerns to council's previously scheduled meeting with WSSC.

Cell Tower

In hopes of generating income and boosting cell coverage in the area, GHI is exploring the possibility of installing a cell phone tower behind the administration building.

McLaughlin said there might be a zoning issue and Davis highlighted reasons communities often feel hesitant about cell phone towers due to aesthetics and environmental concerns.

Foreclosures

Davis asked a personal question of GHI regarding foreclosures, which have been fewer in the co-op than in the rest of the city, she said.

There are three pending foreclosures in GHI and the co-op is arranging an agreement with banks to repurchase them, Ralph said. In that sense, GHI has an advantage over condos and homeowners.

The Lady Angels Know What It Takes to Win

by Sean Henderson

The Greenbelt Lady Angels are preparing to defend their title once again in this year's M3 Basketball Tournament, held July 4 through 9 in Montreal.

The local women's basketball team, led by Head Coach Herb Allen and Co-director Reverend Gregory Carter, has won the M3 title every year since 2009 when the team first competed in the tournament.

"We've seen this program progress over the years," said Carter. "We started out with the local girls who were hanging out in the gym, and then word got around about Thursday night, Ladies Night."

Ladies Night is an open-session held every Thursday night at the Springhill Lake Recreation Center in Greenbelt. Young women from around the area come by to have some fun and play basketball under the direction of Coach Allen.

Allen has been coaching basketball for almost 40 years. He co-founded the Lady Angels with Reverend Carter in 2009.

"He's willing to help wherever he can . . . he's a big advocate for women's basketball," said Juliett Turner, 21, who plays small forward for the team.

"I wish more people would put more of an emphasis on women's basketball . . . they need more programs like this for women to come and play," Turner said. Many of the team's members are current or former college players.

Coach Allen hopes this group of talented young women can continue with the success they've had in the past three years.

"We had our championship banners put up today and I hope we can come back with another, after winning our fourth title for Greenbelt," Allen said.

The M3 championship banners hang overhead in the Springhill Lake gymnasium. They are symbolic of the team's hard work and dedication but Reverend Carter says it's about more than just the titles.

"It's a ministry approach, we look to give back to the community and we take it very seriously. For us we're getting a lot back, so I'm very grateful to the young ladies for supporting this program . . . and at the same time owning it for themselves," he said.

The championship team is once again a favorite to win this year's tournament.

June 23-24 is Ham Radio Field Day

This weekend on Saturday and Sunday, annual field days for the county Amateur Radio Emergency Services (ARES) will be held at Disney-Bell American Legion Post #66, 9605 Old Laurel Bowie Road in Bowie.

Amateur Radio operators, or hams, provide critical communications during unexpected emergencies nationwide including the recent earthquake, hurricanes and tropical storms. When trouble is brewing, these volunteer ham radio operators are often the ones to provide first responders with critical information and communications. Their slogan is "When All Else Fails, Ham Radio Works" – using emergency back-up power such as gasoline generators, solar and battery power, ham operators can set up emergency stations in parks, shopping malls, schools and backyards and send messages in forms that do not rely on phone systems, the internet or other infrastructure that can be compromised in a crisis.

Field Day is the culmination of Amateur Radio Week. The public is invited to talk with ham radio operators, see the capabilities of the equipment and learn how to get their own FCC radio license.

A multi-vehicle accident on Greenbelt Road very late Saturday-early Sunday, June 17 resulted in several people being transported for emergency treatment including those being removed from the pick-up in the photo. Police indicate a heavy patient load at Prince George's Hospital, the nearest shock trauma center, meant injured were transported to Baltimore's Shock Trauma Center by helicopter from the parking lot of Eleanor Roosevelt High School. There were no fatalities, according to MPO Kelly Lawson, Community Relations Officer, Greenbelt Police.

Group Hosts Solar Gadget Meet-up at 3 Sisters Garden

by Yagana Shah

A group of solar energy experts, novices and enthusiasts congregated at the Springhill Lake Recreation Center at noon on Saturday, June 16 to learn about the many practical uses of solar energy.

Twenty-three attendees braved soaring temperatures to view product demonstrations and discuss the versatility of solar energy in household and other frequently-used products.

The event, held at one of the 3 Sisters Demonstration Gardens, was put together by members of the Chesapeake Education, Arts and Research Society (CHEARS), Greenbelt Common Security Club, Greenbelt Climate Action Network (GCAN) and Clozynergy, Inc.

GCAN has discussion circles of eight to 12 people who meet to discuss different aspects of sustainability, global warming, health and food, said Lore Rosenthal, a member of the GCAN and the Greenbelt Common Security Club.

The discussion circle's recent topic was resilience and the economic downturn, which led to the idea for creation of workshops for teaching each other skills, said Rosenthal.

Prince Georgians need to be exposed to energy and understand energy concepts so they can be prepared for new energy jobs and take action, said Terry Goolsby, executive director of Clozynergy, Inc.

Saturday's event was the first workshop, which Rosenthal dubbed a "solar gadget meet-up."

A number of gadgets were on hand for attendees to view and explore, including a wind-up flashlight, solar walk lights, a mini solar-powered wind turbine, solar ovens and solar rechargeable batteries.

"A typical solar panel can convert about 15 percent of the energy falling on it. In scientific laboratories, we have made panels which have four times higher efficiency. Hopefully in another 10 years or so, we will be able to purchase more efficient solar panels. So our heating and cooling will become cheaper with solar energy and of course it will get more expensive with oil and natural gas because there's less and less of that and it is harder to get out of the Earth. We're all going to have to go solar, we might as well figure out how to do it sooner rather than later," said Bob Cahalan, chief of the Climate and Radiation Laboratory at Goddard.

Discussion Circle

The event included a discussion circle in which attendees contributed their own knowledge of solar-powered products, posed questions about usage and usability and also talked about the benefits of using solar powered products.

A potluck style picnic was shared by everyone and included foods prepared in a solar cooker – a vegetable medley, corn on the cob and veggie burgers.

"Things have turned out really well in the solar cooker. The cooker goes for about $200 but is well worth it," said Maggie Cahalan, a member of CHEARS.

The garden location was well suited for the outdoor cooking and product demonstrations.

Some of the attendees explained why they had come to learn more about solar energy and the importance of understanding it.

"I've been in the area 12 years and there were two extended periods of no electricity or generators. I came to learn about the practical uses of solar energy for periods when there is no electricity," said Liz Roslewicz, a member of the Greenbelt Common Security Club.

Maggie Cahalan echoed that outlook: "I think it's an emergency preparedness issue," she said. "We're so dependent on technology that we need to know how to use solar-powered gadgets. I feel the technology is there; it's just our habits are what we need to work on."

GMS Public Hearing Testimony Reflects Differing Views on Use

by James Giese

At a June 11 public hearing on the reutilization of the old Greenbelt Middle School building now about to be vacated as move-in takes place for the newly built-school, Greenbelt Middle School Task Force Chair David Lange outlined the current five suggested options for the city council to choose from for reutilizing the school building. Also heard were the expressed divergent viewpoints of thirteen persons.

Options

Lange recapitulated the material in a handout packet. Since its last report, the task force has now presented council with five options relating to reuse of the building.

1: Lease the entire building for providing community services, the most expensive option, but ensuring its preservation as well as providing the opportunity to expand needed programs and facilities as the city continues to grow.

2: Lease only the original historic portions of the building plus an administrative wing and the gym and locker rooms, exercise and band rooms (30,423 s.f.); in this way accomplishing historic preservation and providing space for a variety of community services, though adding significant, but yet undetermined, costs to the city's operating and capital budgets.

3: Lease as above all but the band/exercise/locker rooms (23,127 s.f.) and share use of other space with another building tenant (such as during evenings and weekends), in this way reducing city costs and still preserving historic areas. Such a plan might not be acceptable to another tenant, however, who might wish to use the gym and might present conflicts as well in use of shared space and lack of secured storage space.

4: Seek shared use of space only during evenings, weekends and summers, thus limiting operating costs only to the programs offered but significantly limiting opportunities for use of the building for full-time services and leaving the historic portions in an uncertain status.

5: Use no part of the building – no costs but no services.

As a modification of the last option is a proposal to expand transportation services within the city to enable residents of one section to attend available services offered in another part. Public Works Director Ken Hall estimated the cost of offering a minimum fixed-route, daily service at $98,100 a year. The city in this case would need to buy two buses like the current ones at a cost of $90,000 or $100,000 for each 16-to 21-passenger bus acquired.

Planning Festival Survey

At the May Planning Festival held at the school, each attendee was given eight stickers to place on various proposals for use of the school, Lange said. Each person could place all stickers on one idea or scatter them among those proposed.

Residents of Franklin Park, those from other parts of Greenbelt and nonresidents were given different colored stickers so their votes made could be categorized by section of the city. About 44 Franklin Park residents, 57 other Greenbelt residents and 83 nonresidents (many involved with Turning Point Academy) participated.

The top five activity/service choices for Franklin Park residents were sports leagues and activities, pre-school programs, summer and holiday camps, child and infant care and technology/computer lab programs. For other residents, the top five were: Turning Point academy, technology/STEM programs, sports programs, inter-generational wellness center and social services for immigrants.

For nonresidents choices included: Turning Point Academy, Technology/Stem, performing arts spaces, creative arts enrichment programs and (tied) computer lab and after school tutoring and homework.

Overall, Turning Point got the most responses (321), technology/STEM second (117), sports programs third (90), performing arts spaces fourth (72) and after school tutoring and homework fifth (45).

Public Input

When the meeting was opened for public comment, Leslie Luckhardt, general manager of Franklin Park at Greenbelt Station, was first to speak. She updated council on developments at the massive apartment complex. It is now 91.5 percent occupied with 750 apartments refurbished and tenants have an average household income of over $60,000. Activities have been scheduled for residents who are becoming more engaged with the community.

Luckhardt provided a list of possible activities that could occur in a portion of the old school building which would be useful to Franklin residents: child care/preschool, summer camp, tutoring, Boys and Girls Club/Big Brother/Big Sister type programs, evening classes for a community college and a formal police substation. She believed the area currently is underserved.

Chris Shuman of Gardenway noted that the school was distant from the new development planned at Greenbelt Station. He urged the city to focus on the Springhill Lake Recreation Center and undertake the approved expansion there for which funding was lost due to the cost overrun for the addition to the Public Works Department.

William Orleans, a Greenbelt resident, expressed the concern that the site, particularly the bus lot, might go into private hands, which he opposed. He did feel that it would be feasible to build private residences above the existing building to pay the costs of preserving the facility.

David Whaples of Forestway felt that the city should continue to look for facilities at other locations to serve the entire community, particularly in Greenbelt East; retain as much of the old school building as possible and relocate the bus lot; provide areas for academic and recreational use and explore all possibilities in and around the city. He would be pleased if another school were to use the site.

Daniel Hamlin, Plateau Place, said that improving transportation was not a suitable solution; that highways like mountain ridges and railroads divide communities and create psychological barriers.

Robert Zugby, Ridge Road, told council of the need of Greenbelt Access Television (GATE) for larger quarters. GATE now operates in a room less than half the size of the council meeting room which is a combined recording studio, broadcast studio, classroom and storage room. The old school would be an attractive place for extra space and would enable GATE to better serve the entire community.

Barbara Simon of Lastner Lane supported Zugby, stating that she believes there is tremendous interest within Franklin Park for a GAVA-GATE program. She is delighted at the intention to relocate the bus lot and opposes tearing down the addition needed for bus lot expansion, which has the only stage in Greenbelt West.

Cheryl Coleman of Springhill Court, a 14-year resident and substitute teacher, supported the activity list provided by Luckhardt. "We have so much talent at the school," she said, adding that her passion was to establish a choir.

Beth Novick of Forestway, also speaking for husband Bill, thanked the task force and Lange for their work. However, she felt the city needed to focus on increasing property values within the city and believes that Franklin Park can offer the services which it seeks.

Molly Lester of Hillside said that the task force came up with good ideas but how will the city pay for them? She noted the city has already spent $275,000 on the Greenbelt Arts Center and plans to spend a million dollars on renovating the movie theater. She supports a stronger focus on education and is a strong supporter of special services. However, she too feels the Springhill Lake Recreation Center is better located to serve the needs of Greenbelt Station, when developed. "Our current budget doesn't allow for the expansion of services," she advised the council.

Lore Rosenthal of Gardenway said she hopes that the old school will become a new community center. Part of it should be used for the purpose of incubating start-up green businesses by enabling new entrepreneurs to rent space for a nominal fee.

George Boyce, Greenway Place, advocated establishing a technology activity center or "hacker space" where people can get together and collaborate on technology projects. He also supports establishing child care but doing something different, such as the STEM (Science, Technology, Engineering and Mathematics) after-school program; vocational education; summer camp activities; technology incubator space; and commercial space for small businesses to be able to share use of expensive equipment.

Lois Browne of Springhill Court, another 14-year resident of the apartment complex, has observed children lacking things to do and creating mischief. As a result she offered to provide them with tutoring help. Because many residents are from other countries, parents often are unable to help their children with schoolwork, which she believes contributes to low test scores.

Mayor Judith Davis noted that others wishing to make comment could email them or otherwise transmit them to the city.

Dr. Fuhrman: Americans Commit Suicide with Food

by Altoria Bell Ross

Americans are committing suicide with food, said nationally acclaimed nutrition specialist Dr. Joel Fuhrman, who spoke at the Greenbelt Library on June 2. Greenbelt was the second and only Maryland stop in the multi-city health seminar series hosted by the NAACP's The Crisis Magazine, the Prince George's County NAACP and the Prince George's County Memorial Library System. The 2012 tour is intended to combat the especially high illness and mortality rates of African Americans.

The average American diet is SAD (Standard Average Diet), which promotes chronic disease and suppresses the immune system, Fuhrman said. SAD consists of 62 percent processed foods such as oils, sweets, refined grains (white rice and bread); 25.5 percent meats, eggs, dairy and fish; 10 percent unrefined plant food (fruit, vegetables, beans, nuts, seeds); and 2.5 percent whole grains.

"Americans are on a contest to see who can kill themselves first with food," Fuhrman said and added, "The whiter the bread, the sooner you're dead," while suggesting replacing white rice (processed food) with brown rice or other whole grains to decrease diabetes risk.

He gave an example of what consuming fast food can do in a population by using his sister's neighborhood in West Oakland, Calif. In her community, he said one supermarket exists, 36 liquor stores and 683 fast food restaurants. As a result, Fuhrman said there is a 200 percent increased death from prostate cancer and 40 percent increased death from heart disease. In comparison to these statistics, he said there is one reported cocaine related death per 100,000.

"The whole population is addicted to fast food," he said. To stave off diseases such as cancer and diabetes, Fuhrman recommended a vegetable-based diet of nuts, beans, stating that eating vegetables (1/2 raw, 1/2 cooked) protects DNA. He also suggested eating nuts instead of the oil derived from them as a healthy alternative.

Fuhrman asserted that people cannot be overweight on natural foods due to its bulk and fiber compared to consuming 4,000 calories on a fast food diet per meal.

Fuhrman said food is not the only culprit. He asked the soda drinkers in audience of about 200 to identify themselves. After a few people raised their hands, Fuhrman commented, "Do you drink Lysol or Raid?" stating that sodas are full of harmful chemicals.

People can improve their physical well-being by good eating, Fuhrman said. "More medical care does not mean better health. We are brainwashed to think our saviors are doctors." Fuhrman said that assumption is not true. One hundred years ago, the average American spent only 3-6 months ill at the end of life. Today he said adults spend more than 10 years of their lives sick, thus they are not living in better health but are worse off today.

Fuhrman, a graduate of University of Pennsylvania School of Medicine, is based in Flemington, N.J. He is the author of seven books including New York Times bestseller "Eat to Live: The Amazing Nutrient-Rich Program for Fast and Sustained Weight Loss" and has just published "Super Immunity: The Essential Nutrition Guide for Boosting your Body's Defenses to Live Longer, Stronger and Disease Free." He hosts the national PBS television program 3 Steps to Incredible Health and has made numerous appearances on Dr. Oz, the Today Show and Good Morning America. GMS continued from page 1

With the original portions of the building constructed by the federal government as a part of the Greenbelt project listed as historic, it was believed that the school system would probably choose to have the building declared surplus allowing the city to seek the transfer of ownership from Prince George's County. Other suitable parties might also express interest to its acquisition or use.

Proceeding on that basis, the task force held three public hearings to receive citizen input and then submitted a report to the council concerning possible uses for the building and costs for its operation. It concluded that the cost of renovating and maintaining the building might be more than the city wished to assume. It suggested that partial demolition and partial reutilization might be an alternative solution.

At these hearings, representatives of Turning Point Academy, a charter school located in the south end of Greenbelt but drawing students primarily from outside the city, made known their wish to use the building for an expanded academy.

Interim Report

In June 2011 the task force submitted an interim report, believing that the city must decide on what it wished to do with the building before it was vacated by the school system, even though the city was then in the dark about possible terms under which the school might be acquired. In March 2012 the task force updated its information.

At this time the city learned that the Board of Education now planned to retain the old school and that the city could only obtain use of the building through some form of lease, making it more difficult to consider undertaking capital improvements to the structure.

In April the task force submitted another report urging council to enter into leasing discussions. In May it held a Community Planning Festival attended by over 200 people at the school building. Meanwhile, new information began to be circulated that the school system was considering moving the French Immersion program to this building, as now confirmed by the city.
