GHI Homes Improvement Plan Explained at Member Meeting

by Diane Oberg

The Sunday, January 25 Town Hall Meeting of Greenbelt Homes, Inc. (GHI) filled the hall at the Greenbelt Volunteer Fire Department building. Some attendees felt it was okay to park in the fire lanes at and across from the firehouse. That resulted in interruptions at the meeting's beginning to announce the cars needing to be moved.

A capacity crowd of GHI members heard a recap of eventsto-date regarding the Homes Improvement Program (HIP) for brick, block and frame homes followed by a lengthy question and answer session. (The larger townhomes and the free standing homes, with a separate replacement schedule are not included in the HIP.)

GHI membership will meet in the spring to vote on what goes into the HIP and how it will be paid for. For many years GHI has been setting aside funds toward the cost of replacing major building components, such as heating systems, windows and doors at the end of their lifespans. However, any improvements over what is currently in the homes, as well as any shortfall between the reserve funds versus the actual replacement costs, will need to be funded by the membership, either individually or collectively.

The GHI Board of Directors had met in November and December to discuss what improvements, beyond those covered by the replacement reserves, to recommend be included in the HIP (see stories in November 6 and December 18, 2014 issues). Improvements approved by the members to be installed in all units (or all units of a given housing type) will be funded through increases in all members' (or all members' of that type) monthly fees. Member option improvements will be funded vidual member's fee, unless that member wishes to avoid interest costs and pay the full amount up front.

Heat

Board President Steve Skolnik announced that the board is now discussing whether to proceed with the heating improvements at the same time as improvements to the building envelopes (doors, windows, insulation, etc.) prior to the conclusion of the heating pilot program. The board originally had planned to complete the pilot program and decide on heating options as a separate action. However, some members told the board that they needed to know the full cost to them of the HIP in order to decide whether they can afford their desired options.

In addition, members in this and other forums have pressed for faster action on heating options so they can be warmer in their homes. Skolnik emphasized that the board has not yet decided whether to accelerate the heating upgrades or wait for completion of the pilot program.

If the board decides to move ahead with heating system improvements, it is likely to present members with two options: a ductless mini-split heat pump system and baseboard heaters with wall-mounted thermostats. The heat pump, which would also provide air conditioning, would not be fully covered by the replacement reserves. There was no discussion of how the difference in costs between the two options would be handled.

Board Member Bill Jones, who has a heat pump in his unit, said that members choosing a heat pump would also need baseboard heaters to be comfortable

Astronomy Group Explores Space from the Ground

by Brittany Britto

Members of the Astronomical Society of Greenbelt (ASG) reclined in their chairs on Thursday, January 29 to view a compilation of the best astronomy photos of 2014 displayed on the concave ceiling of Howard B. Owens Science Center's planetarium.

Jerry Bonnell, co-editor and co-founder of NASA's Astronomy Picture of the Day, better known as APOD, presented the 2014 best-of photos, including Yuichi Takasaka's shot of an eclipse taken in Canada's Waterton Lakes National Park and Stephen Mudge's shot of a moon and sun setting simultaneously last spring in Brisbane, Australia.

For members of ASG, exploring the universe is a monthly ordeal and mission, said ASG Secretary Martha Gay.

Founded in 1992 as the Greenbelt Astronomy Club, Gay said ASG has been active in promoting the science of astronomy with the goal of spreading knowledge to Greenbelt through monthly lectures, presentations, sidewalk displays and star parties at the Northway Field observatory.

Greenbelt to Join Energy Reduction Collaboration

by Thomas X. White

The Greenbelt City Council agreed to participate in an energy efficiency program for low income homeowners at its January 26 meeting. Council also reviewed a liquor license application for a new restaurant at Greenway Center.

These were two of a number of items of business before the council that were not reported in last week's issue. Actions that were reported then were the council's selection of Friends of the Greenbelt Theater to operate the city-owned movie house at Roosevelt Center and approval of grants of assistance to six local schools totaling $9,634.76. ergy efficient hot water heater or refrigerator, HVAC adjustments, etc. are identified and submitted to MEA for approval. Once approved by MEA, Edge Energy makes the improvements.

There is no cost to the municipality or the homeowner. If the City of Greenbelt participates, Flynn indicated that about 10 to 20 homes per year could qualify. Flynn also indicated to council that Bladensburg has coordinated the program since 2009, providing energy upgrades to nearly 500 homes

Collaboration

Council heard a presentation from Bladensburg Police Lieutenant James Flynn, who leads a Prince George's County Municipal Collaboration funded through the Maryland Energy Administration (MEA) EmPOWER and the Maryland Department of Housing and Community Development (DHCD) Community Legacy grants.

The program, which promotes energy efficiency, is incomebased. Eligible homeowners complete an application/affidavit of income and sign a consent form. If qualified, the Bladensburg coordinator notifies Edge Energy in Beltsville to conduct an energy audit. Any needed improvements, such as added insulation, air sealing, new en-

He also noted that the program takes into consideration the retiree status of applicants, as well as retired veterans and the needy.

Councilmembers were supportive and wondered if the program might be of benefit for Greenbelt Homes Inc. (GHI) homeowners, who are in the process of undertaking a comprehensive Homes Improvement Program relating to energy conservation. From the audience, Lore Rosenthal advised council that the GHI program is long-range and that GHI usually selects the contractor for such work.

The council unanimously approved city participation in the Prince George's Municipal Collaboration.

Letters to the Editor

For Consideration

As the City Council of Greenbelt begins its budgetary process it is hoped that the following will be included in the discussions: Increasing the life guard pay so that it is competitive with surrounding towns. Pay a differential for opening and closing in order to attract more individuals; increase the pay of front desk staff who have worked at the Aquatic and Fitness Center from five to over 10 years. There are a few staff members nearing 14 years of service.

Acknowledgements: During the Christmas party no part-time staff member is ever recognized for working over 10 years. Their work is valuable and needs to be acknowledged for keeping various parts of the Greenbelt system functioning smoothly.

Lastly, an Employee Committee on Diversity and Inclusion needs to be established by the HR Department of Greenbelt, that is supervised by the city manager. This topic was discussed during council's August 20 work session. This committee would be composed of employees from Greenbelt's various departments, and also include part-timers. It would monitor promotions, oversee staff mentoring programs, etc. and help to expand opportunities for all staff who seek to advance. "According to the Department of Human Resources, of the 9 senior staff members, all are white; 4 are female and 5 are male," said Michael Hartman.

This reality does not reflect the current demographics of Greenbelt and can be addressed if there is sincere will and commitment to equity.

Why Time Bank? We Have GIVES

This is a response to an article head-lined Time Bank Orientation published in the Greenbelt News Review dated January 29, 2015.

Such an organization exists already, and has since 1998. It is GIVES, Greenbelt Intergenerational Volunteer Exchange Service.

At that time I was active in the Gray Panthers being a convener here. I, too, had read Edgar Kahn's book Time Dollars.

After reading it I realized what was proposed was in Greenbelt's tradition so I approached two activist friends with the idea of starting such a group here. We approached CCN, Cooperative Caring Network, in Washington, D.C., who agreed to assist us. Over many meetings here, bylaws were written. We were provided with samples of orientation pamphlets. One of we three, brain-storming with family, came up with the acronym GIVES. We decided that Time Dollars was not suitable for a no-money, just service group. The city gave us office space in the Senior Lounge in the Community Center. Small donations paid for telephone service, office supplies and registration forms.

As interest grew we were evolving into a functional organization: we had members willing to be officers.

I was chair for two terms then became the secretary. A member who was an accountant set up a bank account and served as our treasurer. Volunteers worked at the office on weekday mornings answering the telephone, matching requests for services with those who would provide the service. Records were kept.

Over the years we have provided transportation to doctors' appointments, filled requests for help purchasing groceries and have helped gardeners.

One year we received an award from the Maryland Municipal League in Ocean City. A photo of that is displayed in our office. The Gazette featured us.

Every year we cooperate with AARP to sign up participants in their Safe Driving Course.

GIVES is still strong. This wheel is not broken, why fix it. For information call 301-507-6580 or visit the GIVES office any weekday morning.

About the Theater

Congratulations to the Friends of the Greenbelt Theater (FOGT) for being chosen to operate the theater after the renovation is completed. I only hope they can do as good a job as the Paul Sanchez organization did in the past, when the theater was beloved by so many Greenbelters, especially seniors, as a place nearby, moderate in cost, where we could go to see a wonderful movie, sometimes on the "spur of the moment," enjoy a delicious meal at Beijing or the New Deal either before or after the show and have a thoroughly good time.

The movies selected by the Sanchez group were uniformly good. They often contributed to my continuing education. For instance, when I read recently of the death of John Bayley, the husband of British author Iris Murdoch who cared for her through her descent into Alzheimer's disease, I immediately remembered how seeing the film Iris at the Old Greenbelt Theatre had peeked my interest in Alzheimers, even inspiring me to read the book that the film was based on. Other movies I especially liked were Millions and the

Greenbelt Baptist Church Welcomes Associate Pastor

by Jim Link

A swift, fascinating trajectory has brought Greenbelt Baptist Church's newly installed Associate Pastor Stephen Unthank to this city. He and Pastor Michael Christ sat down with me to describe that journey and Unthank's excitement about his new duties.

Only 32, Unthank graduated from Frostburg State University in 2005 as a philosophy major. Besides wrestling with platonic forms and Nietzschean skepticism, Unthank became a breakdancing enthusiast. "I traveled to Pittsburgh and Baltimore soaking up that underground culture. But now my knees don't support that anymore," Unthank laughed.

Though he says he was impressed with his philosophy professors and felt they had "planted a seed," Unthank was not completely convinced by them. He began thinking seriously about his Christianity in 2001, he says, which until then had been rather tepid and automatic. "I was Christian in a typically American way - rather vague, pale and nominal. My father worked for the State Department and our family traveled extensively but we did not belong to any particular denomination.'

Unthank realized that he "delighted in theology and hearing the gospel more and more. I was around new friends and began reading the Bible more seriously. The old ways lost their zest; new routines replaced my old ones."

Eventually Unthank joyously realized, he said, that "now I believed in the person of Jesus Christ as the only redeemer of my life."

After graduating from Capital Bible Seminary, Unthank cut his teeth, as he puts it, at Trinity Community Church in Bowie, learning how to become a pastor.

Family peregrinations took him to Cuba, Zambia, Venezuela, Panama and South Africa. Living in such a rainbow of countries – so culturally and racially diverse – has equipped him well, he says. "God doesn't waste anything. I thank the Lord for that experience."

His Duties

Unthank and Pastor Christ are still sorting out exactly what the former's duties in the congregation will be. But he is now conducting evening Sunday services – catechism classes for children 4 to 10 years old. He showed me a movie clip on his iPhone of kids dancing and singing, directed by Israel Felix with Pastor Christ moving to the rhythm in the background. Unthank is meeting families one-on-one and intends to help Greenbelt Baptist Church "intersect with the city of Greenbelt in a Christian way," he says.

One encouraging aspect of his job is that, although the official church congregation numbers around 65, the morning Sunday service sometimes draws 100 prayerful attendees. Unthank and Pastor Christ find this excess of spiritual hunger heartening.

Starting in May, Unthank will alternate with Pastor Christ in presenting talks on various topics in the church's "Christianity and ..." series. For example, the former will illuminate the subject of Christianity and Albert Camus.

His commute from New Carrollton, where he lives with his wife Maricel and their children Ambrose and Lilou, is "a mere eight minutes" to Greenbelt.

He startled me with his direct, thoughtful answer to my rambling question about what challenged him most as a pastor. The erosion of faith? Our sex-saturated pop culture? The truancy of youth regarding morals and religion?

"What's the problem, Steve?"

"I am," he said. "The problem is in our own hearts." He was quoting G.K. Chesterton's answer to a similar question more than 50 years ago. Rather than crusading specifically against any of our social or moral scourges, Unthank is convinced that "my duty is to lay out the word of God. The word of God has the power."

one about the Marigold Hotel that became a hit with seniors nationwide. I often wondered how the theater managed to select such charming and likable movies. After seeing "The Descendants" there, I smugly boasted to my kids that I'd once again seen one of the movies nominated for an Oscar, and at the Greenbelt theater.

The word had begun to leak out to surrounding communities and younger people about the Greenbelt theater's high-quality movies and affordability. Adding the capability for using credit cards was a good move, especially for those who might want to make it a family night out.

I'm looking forward to seeing more information about the plans FOGT has for the theater. For instance, will there be concerts, performances by local groups, perhaps showings of operas, more children's movies, special children's days? I hope the community at large will be invited to contribute their ideas and assistance.

in very cold weather. Skolnik of work in their units. disagreed, saying the heat pump will work, though not as well, until the outside temperature gets down to around 15 degrees.

Envelope Improvements

GHI Vice President Susan Ready summarized decisions made in December regarding which building envelope improvements should be made to all units and which should be member options. She reported that the pilot findings were not as strong as the board had hoped, with most improvements not repaying their cost over their expected life cycle. But, she noted, the pilot participants reported feeling more comfortable in their homes after the upgrades.

Installing these improvements will be a five-year program, she said. Replacement reserves were designed to cover the costs of replacing windows, doors, frame home siding and heating systems. The board has previously noted that actual costs will not be known until the work goes out to bid.

Windows

One change in thinking was how member-replaced windows will be handled. During the Q & A Skolnik said that GHI would not replace member-installed windows that meet GHI specifications. However, since replacement reserves are based upon the full cost of the program, not a unit-by-unit accounting of expenses, Skolnik said, these members will not receive any credit reflecting the reduced scope

HIP Costs

Prior to the spring Special Membership Meeting, staff will consider what heating/cooling systems to recommend, what crawl space improvements to recommend, the sources of funds and loan repayment terms for nonreplacement reserve items and estimate the fee increases for nonreplacement reserve improvements. GHI is also considering a loan deferral program for members who cannot afford the necessary fee increases.

Once the board determines what work is to be included in the initial HIP, staff will consider how best to manage the project and what additional staff and systems are needed. During the Q & A session, Skolnik said that the project manager GHI hires will determine how to schedule the work.

Future Improvements

General Manager Eldon Ralph told the members that this will not be the last improvements program. In 2016–2024. GHI plans to replace roofs on frame, block and the larger townhomes, address drainage problems and perform underground utility repairs. Another big project, he said, is planned for 2021-2025, when GHI will replace plumbing pipes and electrical wiring in frame and masonry homes.

Q & A

Highlights of the questions and answers session follow. Except where noted, the responses are from Skolnik.

Q. Why replace everything now, my doors or windows are fine? Why do all the work at once?

A. By making repairs to all units, rather than as components wear out, GHI should get a better price. It is also more efficient. For example, window and door replacement require ripping out flashing, as will replacing the siding. Doing it once is more efficient.

Q. Why include baseboard heaters as an alternative, the "single most inefficient system" for heating homes?

A. Cost. Some members cannot afford the heat pump option.

O. How much will the insulation option reduce attic storage space?

A. A plywood floor will be installed covering the full area where the distance from floor to roof ceiling is two feet high. Beyond that point a plywood dam will be installed with insulation blown in behind it.

O. With new windows, can we use window air conditioners?

A. Frame homes, which have double-hung windows, can use window air conditioners.

Please take the following issues into consideration: The need to provide members with adequate advance notice of when contractors will be working on their unit. Can we have pet doors? Will there be people to help members move and store things before and after the attic improvements? Answers not yet available.

Q. Why are members limited to two heating options that are not the best? There's gas heat all around us, why are we not considering that?

A. Skolnik noted that GHI had looked into gas service years ago, even to the point of negotiating with Washington Gas prior to determining it was not viable. Ralph added that in preparation for the pilot program GHI raised the issue with their consultant Home Improvements Research Labs (HIRL), which also found it was not financially viable.

Q. Can individual owners decide to add exterior insulation to their homes or must the entire row make the same choice?

A. Not yet decided. Likely could do at least in pairs of adjacent units.

Q. What are the health impacts of spray foam insulation in sealing the brick and frame attics, especially for residents with chemical sensitivities?

A. Issue is balance between applicability and suitability of each material and between cost and toxicity.

Q. Why not consider interior insulation on block homes?

A. When GHI studied this approach, it found 1) tremendous disruption of residents, 2) very expensive, 3) does not install well, 4) makes a small room even smaller.

Q. Why no discussion of storm doors and through-the-wall air conditioning?

A. Building scientists (HIRL) advised that storm doors never pay for themselves but in response to member requests board is considering options for including a member option for storm doors.

"[ASG] has a rather broad view of astronomy. We've had conversations about climate and space weather. Occasionally, we'll have programs about specific NASA missions," said Gay. ASG will host NASA astrophysicist Dr. Peter Chen in a meeting later this month.

While there were few attendees at the Thursday night APOD program, Cleaton Henry of Waldorf stressed astronomy's importance.

"We are a small part of a big world. Astronomy is beginning to understand this world," said Henry, ASG's president for the past two years.

Henry, who works in healthcare, said he first realized his passion for astronomy while living in Barbados, where he was born.

"It's interesting because people would spend time under the stars," Henry said. "You see these points of light. You feel it's so far away and you wonder, what's there?"

Henry's curiosity as a child led him to read several books on astronomy and construct his own homemade telescopes. Now he is a proponent of outreach programs and star parties where, he said, Greenbelt's astronomy enthusiasts gather together in amazement to observe the sky.

One of the biggest hits at the ASG's star parties?

"People are always amazed to see the rings around Saturn," Henry said.

A Review GAC's Latest Play "Clybourne Park" Explores Racial Anxieties with Humor

by Jim Link

Clybourne Park is a nuanced, searing, yet hilarious probing of racial anxieties sparked by neighborhood demographic changes. A spinoff of Lorraine Hansberry's revelatory, explosive A Raisin In The Sun, the (perceived) threat now comes 50 years later in the form of a white family moving into the now black Clybourne Park area of Northwest Chicago. Black blockbusting roiled the genteel neighborhood in 1959; white gentrification looms ominously in 2009.

The production, now at the Greenbelt Arts Center, is another brilliant, polished effort by that oh-so-professional duo, director Bob Kleinberg and producer Malca Giblin, and respective family members.

Act I (which occurs in 1959) depicts Russ and Bev being badgered by Karl, head of the Clybourne Park Home Improvement Association, to retract their decision to sell their home to a black family. Unaware the buyers are black, Russ and Bev just want to leave after the traumatic death of their son.

Tension builds almost imperceptibly, so circuitous, evasive and euphemistic is the dialogue. Eventually the veneer of civility is ripped off in a wrenching catharsis.

Act II (2009) features the same seven cast members as different characters, real estate salespeople indulging in the same painful evasiveness about the elephant in the living room – race. As they try to sell Russ and Bev's former home again fragile gentility erupts into savage candor.

Not a Downer

Despite its bleak, discomforting themes, though, Clybourne Park is not a downer. Allusions to skiing blacks and tap dancing whites considerably lighten the gloom.

The actors' chemistry is spot on. They have a field day playing two different roles, talking over and past one another in an orgy of non-communication.

Attey Harper is wonderful as the obsequious black domestic Francine in Act I and the prim lady who morphs into a shrieking banshee in Act II. Similarly Ryan Willis, Francine's husband, is the ever-polite Albert - "Yes ma'am, no ma'am" - in Act I, who plays the violent-whengoaded Kevin in Act II. Ted Culler is the grieving, traumatized Russ (Act I), then is the annoying sewer worker Dan who discovers family secrets. David Colton is the anemic, useless preacher Jim (Act I), then the assertive salesman Tom. Holly Trout is the deaf, pregnant and inarticulate Betsy, then the pregnant, hearing and voluble Lindsey. Susan Harper is the mousy, chirpy Bev who later plays the extrovert Kathy. Last is Jim Adams who plays two blustering jerks – Karl and then Steve, a pompous real estate agent. It takes a real actor to give each jerk his particular idiosyncrasies.

Do the sins of the sons always repeat those of the fathers? The somber moral of this coruscating play is that "plus ca change, plus c'est la meme chose," as Kleinberg says. Or "It's deja vu all over again," to quote Yogi Berra. Good news - A Raisin In the

Star Party to Probe Edge on Galaxies

Weather permitting, the Astronomical Society of Greenbelt (ASG) will hold a star party on Saturday evening, February 7, at the City of Greenbelt Observatory, located at Northway field. Observation possibilities include five planets (Venus, Mars, Jupiter, Uranus and Neptune), comet C/2014 Q2 (Lovejoy), the Orion Nebula, the Pleiades star cluster, and the Cigar Galaxy, a nearly edge-on starburst galaxy.

ASG plans to begin an investigation of twelve edge-on galaxies listed in a recent Sky and Telescope magazine article, to determine which can be seen from our area with our 14 inch observatory telescope and its astronomical video camera.

Observing will begin at around 6:30 p.m. and continue for about two hours. Visitors are also welcome to set up their own telescopes on the hill.

There is no fee for the event. Attendees are asked to park in the ballfield lot, not up on the hill, unless bringing a telescope.
