Pumpkin Festival Brings Fun And Protects Forest Preserve

by Layne Litsinger

The 29th annual Pumpkin Festival on Friday and Saturday, October 27 and 28 was a special event for the community.

The festival, which featured pumpkin painting, pumpkin carving, a magic show act and balloon animals, live music from local bands and a lighted forest pumpkin walk, offered tons of fun and Halloween-themed activities.

"It's a very nice night for the event. The pumpkins all get hidden for the walk tomorrow and everyone walks in their costumes on Monday," said attendee Mary Ann Baker.

The pumpkin painting and carving occurred Friday from 4 to 6 p.m. at Roosevelt Center.

After attendees finished with their pumpkins, they left them for event organizers to transport to the forest for the pumpkin walk. The walk occurred Saturday evening, and attendees could see their pumpkins as well as hundreds of other jack-o'-lanterns lit up along the trails in the forest.

Amy Knesel, this year's organizer, talked about how popular the festival is and how it plays an important role in protecting the Forest Preserve, as the forest is highly valued in the community.

"[We] usually have 250 pumpkins for carving and everyone carves their pumpkins, then

New Deal Chef Carrie's Cool Culinary Creation: The Croak

by Cathie Meetre

The New Deal Café's recently hired executive chef, Carrie Megginson, was only installed a few weeks ago but she's already making an impact. She is keen to retool the Café's restaurant business so that it becomes the neighborhood go-to place for a delicious, informal meal. Megginson is aiming for conscientious cooking, quick friendly service, quality ingredients, reasonable prices and a mix of original presentations and old favorites. She is committed to a judiciously selected menu with breadth and tastiness at a price a canny Greenbelter sees as good value.

The News Review will bring speakers to the New Deal for dinner on November 16 before the 7:30 p.m. Old Greenbelt Theatre showing of Defending Utopia: The Greenbelt News Review at 80. The Café will offer a discount on dinner with tickets to the show. To celebrate, the chef will present some new specials for the paper's 80th birthday, including her own take on the French country classic, Chou-Rouge Landais, a tangy and warming red cabbage casserole studded with sausage medallions in a warming and satisfying but not-too-heavy meal.

Last Forum Asks Candidates Thought-provoking Questions

by Kathleen Gallagher

Once it got revved, the Candidate Forum for a Progressive Greenbelt at the Community Center on October 22 rolled on like a well-oiled machine. With one emcee (resident Lois Rosado), two moderators (June White Dillard, former president of the NAACP of Prince George's County, and Patrick McGann, director of strategy and planning for the D.C. based organization Men Can Stop Rape) and 12 sponsoring organizations, they were prepared for anything.

Upwards of 70 people attended. All of this year's candidates for the Greenbelt City Council participated except for incumbent Edward Putens, who was unable to attend. This was the last forum prior to the election on Tuesday, November 7, though a last candidate "meet and greet" was held on October 26 at Greenbelt Station.

The organizers sent 17 questions to the candidates in advance with the instruction that eight questions would be asked of all candidates at the forum, with one minute allowed to each for response. For the eighth question and last round, candidates were given two minutes to respond to a question that had not been asked at the forum.

Accessibility

If elected, what specific policy/program will you champion to create an equitable and accessible Greenbelt?

Answers on this question varied widely, though there was no disagreement as such. Pope started, emphasizing bringing the city together with better transportation, starting with a circulator bus and dealing later with public transportation. Byrd mentioned accessibility for older residents and a need for a good replacement for the Greenbelt Connection. He also stressed equity of resources for East and West Greenbelt, as well as for different racial and cultural groups. Boyce said what this question brought to mind for him was a petition to council some time ago from Michael Hartman that there should be a city council advisory group charged to look at issues of diversity and fairness to all residents.

Orleans said although he is a strong supporter of a new connector bus, he thinks "equity and access" involve much more than transportation and he would like to see greater access to city services and particularly to participation in council meetings.

Mach said she would continue to try to establish equity for the new residents of Greenbelt Station to send their children to Greenbelt schools. Without that access, they will not be getting the full benefit of what Greenbelt provides to the other children who are city residents. Roberts said this question made him think back to a 1989 study on recreational facilities that determined recreation opportunities to be more abundant in center city than elsewhere, with no ballfields in Greenbelt West. When he had the opportunity to finish his response at the end of the forum, he said the inequities are still there and that he would like to see council use Program Open Space money for fields on land in that part of town.

Davis said she agreed with many of the suggestions that had been made and would like to see greater emphasis on seeing that meetings, events and classes are held in all parts of the city.

Marcavitch said he would first expand the definition to include access to a healthy and sustainable way of living that would include environmental justice. Celdran said her approach would always be to study and understand the issue in order to find a solution that was compatible with her values and principles.

Jordan said he thinks there may be 10 or 12 Greenbelts to unite, not just three, and that his primary concern would be the equitable distribution of recreational and public safety resources to all the neighborhoods of Greenbelt.

Gordon said he would, if elected, appoint representatives to focus on constituent services to assure equitable distribution of resources. He also strongly favors a circulator bus. Stewart provided the last answer and closed by saying "equitable" means different things to different people but to her it meant access by all residents to a good, fun, safe place to live and work. It concerns her that when people oppose raising taxes, they are expressing an unwillingness to treat others equitably.

ICE Detainers

U.S. Immigration and Customs Enforcement (ICE) - According to Acting Police Chief Thomas Kemp, the Police Department has had interactions with ICE at least 12 times since 2010 and has been involved in detention and handover to ICE of at least six individuals during that time. The city has no published policy governing interactions with ICE. Do you support publishing a city policy?

Candidates disagreed with each other on this question, which was not whether the city should have a policy but whether it should be published and

Refugees and Chimps

Two documentaries come to Old Greenbelt Theatre this Friday, November 3: Human Flow and Jane.

Human Flow is the muckraking Chinese director Ai Weiwei's bleak, tender, fierce indictment of the global migrant crisis, its "terrifying world-swallowing immensity," as one critic puts it. War, famine and climate change have displaced over 65 million refugees, more than at any time in history and Weiwei's camera visits Pakistan, Gaza, Kenya, Malaysia and our own Mexico-USA border.

Greenbelt Community Free Art Drop-In

The Greenbelt Recreation Department Arts Program invites guests of all ages to attend a free Community Art Drop-In workshop with Kathy Karlson on Sunday, November 5 from 1 to 3 p.m. Attendees will combine objects and paint in a mixed media collage, inspired by artists Robert Rauschenberg and Arthur Dove. This program will be held in Room 113 of the Community Center. All materials will be provided. No reservations are needed.

While visiting, enjoy the Greenbelt Museum's current Community Center exhibit, The Knowing Hands that Carve This Stone: The New Deal Art of Lenore Thomas Straus. Straus is best known locally as the creator of the iconic Mother and Child statue in Roosevelt Center and the impressive bas-reliefs on the Community Center façade. The Museum's historic house located across the street at 10-B Crescent Road will be open for tours from 1 to 5 p.m. (there is a small fee). For more information about City of Greenbelt art programs, visit greenbeltmd.gov/arts and follow Greenbelt Recreation ARTS on Facebook. Arts programs are sponsored in part by the Maryland State Arts Council.

GCF Annual Meeting At Legion on Nov. 12

Greenbelt Community Foundation (GCF) invites the public to celebrate its work and contribution to the City of Greenbelt on Sunday, November 12 from 3 to 5 p.m. at the Greenbelt American Legion, Post 136. The theme is All in with GCF.

Goals for this event are to continue fostering the mantra of One Greenbelt, to conduct a pledge drive, to interest participants in becoming GCF volunteers for three committees and to hear what the first grantees and current grantees have experienced as a result of their involvement with the foundation.

This annual meeting is open to the public with the hope of attracting new residents of Greenbelt who may not be aware of the work that the GCF has done to enhance the quality of life in the city during the past 11 years.

Light refreshments will be served.

Exploring Yoga Nidra

Explorations Unlimited welcomes Greenbelt resident Laura Bonkosky on Friday, November 3. Bonkosky will lead participants in some Yoga Nidra, a guided meditation that is accessible to everyone. No prior meditation or yoga experience is required. Participants will be systematically guided through setting intentions; exploring the body, breath, mind and senses; and cultivating a sense of joy and well-being. Yoga Nidra is usually practiced lying down, so bring a mat, a blanket and a pillow or bolster and dress in comfortable, loose clothing. For those who would prefer not to practice lying down, chairs will be available.

Bonkosky has taught yoga and meditation in and around Greenbelt for over 10 years. She currently offers classes through the Greenbelt Recreation Department and will offer a class through SAGE that combines gentle yoga and yoga nidra beginning on November 30.

Explorations Unlimited is held on Fridays beginning at 1 p.m. at the Community Center. This presentation will be held in Room 114. Everyone is welcome to attend and questions are always encouraged. Call 301-397-2208 for more information.

Computer Club Meets

The Greenbelt Computer Club will hold its monthly meeting on Thursday, November 9 from 7 to 8:30 p.m. in Room 112 of the Community Center. Everyone is welcome to discussions about the latest in computers, tablets and consumer electronics. Basic troubleshooting advice for Windows computers and some for Apple iPad and iPhone is available.

Community Church Has Spaghetti Dinner

On Saturday, November 4 from 6 to 9 p.m. Greenbelt Community Church will host its fall fundraiser. This year's event will change things up a bit from the traditional fall bazaar. A spaghetti dinner, featuring the Fominaya family recipe for spaghetti sauce, will accompany the traditional auction that the church hosts every year. After dinner festivities include an evening of entertainment and an auction.

"We thought we would try something new this year but we wanted to keep the auction since that is a local favorite," said Keith Johnson, chair of the committee responsible for hosting the event. Local musicians will play during the dinner and offer their services for bidding at the auction. Rick Ransom and Keith Johnson, Tom Davey, Susan Breon and Betty Ladas are all scheduled to perform during the dinner. The entertainment for the evening will also include karaoke and guest speakers.

Traditional auction items such as local merchant certificates and services will still be available for bidding. Feedback is appreciated on the new format.

Special STEM Star Party November 4

The Astronomical Society of Greenbelt and the Goddard Astronomy Club will co-host a special star party, a Maryland STEM Festival event, for schoolchildren in kindergarten through 12th grade and accompanying adults, on Saturday, November 4 from 7 to 9 p.m. at the Observatory located at Northway Fields. Attendees will view the Moon, Saturn and other celestial objects through a number of telescopes. An astronomical camera will be mounted on the Observatory telescope for more sensitive viewing of deep sky objects, such as galaxies, nebulae and star clusters. Attendees are asked to park in the ballfield lot, not up on the hill. The star party will be canceled without notice if it is hopelessly cloudy.

MAGLEV Train Community Meeting

Maryland state delegate Alonzo T. Washington will host a community meeting to discuss the MAGLEV high-speed train proposal on Thursday, November 9 from 7 to 9 p.m. at Parkdale High School (6001 Good Luck Road in Riverdale). Two of the possible proposed routes run through Greenbelt. Washington invites community members to express their concerns, including those about the proposed routes, the potential environmental impacts and the cost of construction. Information about the MAGLEV proposal, including potential routes, can be found at bwmaglev.info/.

GES Open House

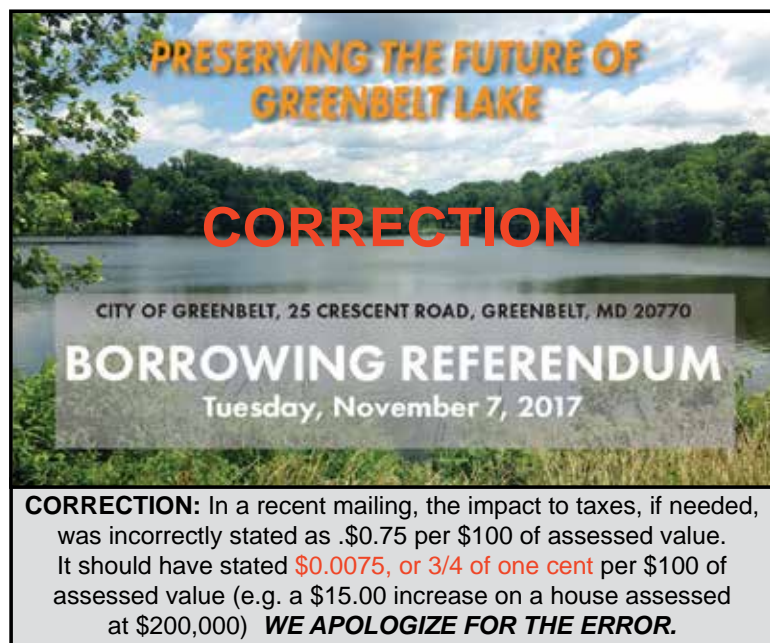

Greenbelt Elementary School will hold an Open House on Wednesday, November 15 at 9:30 a.m. for parents interested in touring the school, hearing from administration members and current parents.

BARK Bake Sale

The BARK Bake Sale will be held Friday, November 17 from 3 to 5 p.m. at the Greenbelt Co-op Grocery Store ramp. Home-baked goods will be available for humans and pets. Donations are welcome and will benefit WAGS Greenbelt Animal Shelter. Event hosted by Greenbelt Homeschoolers.

Arts Advisory Board Meets November 7

The Greenbelt Arts Advisory Board will meet on Tuesday, November 7 at 7 p.m. in Room 112 at the Community Center. Issues on the agenda include a second reading of proposed changes to the bylaws and response to a petition to establish a Greenbelt Arts Council based on the City of Laurel's Ordinance 1908. For additional information, contact Nicole DeWald, staff liaison, at ndewald@greenbeltmd.gov or 301-397-2208.

Maglev, Beltway Expansion Positions Mulled by 4 Cities

by Maria Herd

The Four Cities Coalition, (New Carrollton, College Park, Berwyn Heights and Greenbelt) discussed signing joint letters on various controversial transportation issues Wednesday at the Greenbelt Municipal Center.

One letter would express opposition to the Superconducting Maglev (SCMaglev) train proposal, a plan to build a high speed magnetic levitation train connecting Baltimore and Washington, D.C. The project is undergoing an environmental review to choose one of three proposed routes or the no-build option. Two of the three proposed routes go directly through Greenbelt.

The Greenbelt City Council signed a letter addressed to the Maryland Transit Administration, opposing the train on Tuesday, October 24. "This project will not in any way benefit Greenbelt residents or any of the communities and neighborhoods along the proposed routes," states the letter.

Representatives from Berwyn Heights and College Park both said that they need to discuss signing on to a letter opposing the SCMaglev train at their upcoming city council meetings.

The city leaders also discussed signing a coalition letter against the proposed widening of the Maryland portion of the Capital Beltway that would add two lanes in each direction from the American Legion Memorial Bridge to the Woodrow Wilson Memorial Bridge. The Greenbelt City Council signed a letter opposing the expansion, dated October 23 and addressed to the governor's office.

"The impact that the proposed highway widening projects will have on the natural, socioeconomic, cultural and built environments is unacceptable," states the council's letter.

Councilmember Leta Mach expressed frustration at the meeting that the 2012 federal study on widening the Baltimore-Washington Parkway is being ignored, which concluded that traffic congestion would be consistent with what it is today if the Beltway were to be expanded.

"The study said it is going to be extremely expensive, tear down all these bridges to widen it and impact the neighborhoods. And at the end, it would be no better. What a waste of money. I can't think of anything that irritates me more," she said.

The city's letter also notes that the Parkway shouldn't be altered since it is listed on the National Register of Historic Places. To transfer the segment owned by the National Park Service to the State of Maryland "will threaten its historic designation" and most likely result in "destroying its scenic and parkway setting."

Instead, the council suggests using resources to expand and improve the MARC train routes.

"I personally agree with both of the letters," said New Carrollton Councilmember Katrina Dodro, opposing both the SC-MAGLEV and Beltway expansion.

One letter that the mayors of the four cities have currently signed onto as a draft, requests funding from Maryland Department of Transportation for safety improvements on U.S. Route 1 at the I-495 interchange.

"We all probably know that intersection is kind of a mess," said College Park Mayor Patrick Wojahn at the meeting. "There are a lot of roads coming together, it gets backed up and it really needs some attention."

"As designed, the intersection is confusing when there is light traffic and exasperating during peak periods when large numbers of cars exit from I-495 onto the already heavily congested U.S. 1," states the letter. "This failed intersection is a serious safety concern for the area and an impediment to the growth of the U.S. 1 corridor."

The letter notes that the area

St. Hugh's Annual Christmas Bazaar

The St. Hugh's Annual Christmas Bazaar will take place in Grenoble Hall on Saturday and Sunday, November 4 and 5 from 9 a.m. until 2 p.m. There will be plenty of great buys, delicious food, baked goods, as well as crafts and vendors with special purchases for holiday gifts and so much more. Joining the bazaar this year will be local author Peggy Rooney of the Greenbelt Writers Group, Knights of Columbus, St. Hugh's Youth Group with fair trade items, vendors with hats, scarves, jewelry, Avon products, NFL team gear, flavored oils and vinegars, greeting cards, special decorative candles, baby items and more. There will be a silent auction as well as door prizes and photos with Santa.

Mowatt Church Holds Spaghetti Dinner

Mowatt United Methodist Church at 40 Ridge Road will hold its semi-annual spaghetti dinner on Saturday, November 11 from 5 to 7 p.m. The Mowatt Spaghetti Dinner has been a tradition in Greenbelt for more than 10 years. With the recent loss of our beloved Kitchen Queen Maxine Smith, we are working on a new sauce recipe by our own Lee Kisse. All you care to eat spaghetti, bread, salad and a dessert for one price. Come join this gathering of food and fun. Home baked goods will be available to take home to enjoy later. Call the church at 301-474-9410 for more details.

Pumpkin Walk Fun

Flashlights, glowsticks, and even people with mini-laser lights could be seen walking down the path of the Forest Preserve on the evening of Saturday, October 28. Community members had a pleasantly cool evening to walk the half-mile path alongside pumpkins carved by community members the previous evening. The carvings were as diverse as one would hope. There were animals, names, painted ones, decorations and even promotional jack-o'-lanterns. The event started at 5 p.m. but the real fun started at 6 p.m. when the sky darkened and the ghouls came out of the woods to frighten the passersby.

Costume Parade In Center

An Oscar the Grouch baby, a vending machine, and the cast of Peanuts, what do they have in common? Well, they were the winners of a very competitive contest in Roosevelt Center on Monday, October 30. The annual costume contest had over 200 contestants winding through the underpass of Crescent Road and up the hill on the sidewalk. There were a small group of winners for a variety of categories including best pet but the real winners were all the kids who got to go trick-or-treating to their favorite stores in Roosevelt Center as well as trunk-or-treating to a line of Greenbelt Police cruisers. Each police car had its trunk facing the center and open for display as the officers handed out candy. They were all decorated with different themes.

Nearly all the stores had employees out with bowls of candy and toys, many in costume to the delight of many of the children. There was also cheery music in the air courtesy of the University of Maryland's Marching Band.

The long line of costumed parents and kids spoke to the success of the event. Full bags of candy were the triumph of many. Those bags were also the "burden" of those who had to take their kids out to do it all again the next night. There was also the issue of what to do with all that sugar. Holidays can come with challenges.

win that supports three creative Greenbelt institutions: the Theatre, the Café and the paper. A dessert buffet will be served in the theatre prior to the show.

Inclusive Cooking

Chef Carrie notes, “Everybody eats differently. Some are sensitive to gluten, some are vegan, some organic and some paleo. For others, a big slab of red meat is the only answer. Our menu has to allow gluten-free grandma to sit down with her paleo grand daughter and carnivorous grandson and have all three find something they love.”

Her first imaginative venture is the Croak. The Greenbelt Croak is a riff on the French brasserie standby and favorite food, the Croque – pronounced croak (at least by the perennial American in Paris – it’s actually more like ‘crock’ but hey, who’s a purist here?). The original Croque Monsieur and Croque Madame are both open-faced grilled cheese sandwiches, variegated golden on top and oozy-cheesy beneath. Monsieur has a slice of ham, and is the French moral equivalent of a grilled ham and cheese. The Café’s variants are based on French toast rather than just bread and include Croak Lorraine (bacon, swiss cheese and caramelized onions), Mr. Croak (ham and swiss) and Croak Capri (goat cheese and sun-dried tomato tapenade).

In a new pairing, the Café now offers a cup of soup and half a sandwich or Croak. This combo is easy on the budget and provides a tasty but not overwhelming choice that is just the right amount. Chef Carrie believes that deep in everybody’s heart is the desire to return to familiar home-style meals – an instinct borne out when the first day she introduced cream of tomato soup, the Café sold more servings of it than anything else on the menu.

Smart Changes

These are clever choices by the chef that bode well for things to come. These simple but tasty and attractive preparations are perfect for a kitchen still earning its spurs. The ingredients don’t cost a mint and either keep well or are on-hand staples. The Croak can be prepared quickly and economically – a boon for patron and kitchen both. These small incremental changes are also a chance to train and integrate the efforts of the kitchen and front-of-the-house staff so that orders taken are fulfilled quickly and land on the table still sizzling. Kitchen and serving staff continue to grow in skill and confidence under Chef Carrie’s exacting training and experienced guidance. Staffer Lori Martin was very positive about the changes she has observed. She felt that although the transformation is still ongoing, she can already see how the Café has changed for the better in terms of service and cooking. She said she felt optimistic, happier and that business had definitely picked up. Buoyant employee morale is critical to a successful restaurant.

Branching Out

Chef Carrie has a vision of the New Deal that clearly reflects the new generation of pubs in England and the classic brasseries of France – the closest analogs to the neighborhood vibe of the New Deal. Her first commercial cooking job was in a London pub when England was well into emerging from its post-World War II culinary funk. Cheaply available foreign travel had expanded the population’s palate well beyond fish and chips and the clientele was ready to be adventurous.

Earlier British pubs had offered only dismal, warmed-over, industrial-grade meat pies in little foil trays. Today’s adventurous British gastro-pub food juxtaposes delicious and comforting homely standards like shepherd’s pie and fruit crumbles, with cuisine from all corners of the world; India’s chicken tikka and korma, French quiche and Italian pasta are all regulars on a typical pub menu.

Chef Carrie’s philosophy for the New Deal is similar. She notes that she’s not trying to compete with the fancy upscale restaurants of Georgetown or Bethesda. She sees the New Deal’s niche as the meal before the movie, the convenient alternative when the fridge at home yields no inspiration and an informal common ground for neighbors to meet and eat without struggling with traffic and parking. She wants to offer an affordable lunch for someone on a budget and a quickly-served working lunch for local business people taking a break. So, in many respects, she envisions it being like the British pub – home away from home – the New Deal Café not only as Greenbelt’s living room, but as its dining room, too.

Seven Days a Week

When asked which days she would be available for an interview, Chef Carrie replied, “Any – but later in the week is crazier.” She remarked, “When a restaurant has had a tough time and needs to recover, the chef has to be there seven days a week for the first several months to help the staff stay on target until doing it right has become second nature.” Dedication correlates with a good outcome, so the New Deal is on the right road.

This rethought New Deal Café is well worth another visit. It retains the local energy and funkiness that distinguishes it from the cookie cutter chains and it’s still one of the region’s favorite local music venues. Now the food and service are rising to match the occasion. Stop by and be part of its culinary renaissance.

The writer spent her final year of college (1969) as a barmaid in a busy inner-city pub in Nottingham, England, and was gruesomely familiar with the wizened pies. She does point out, however, that it’s still really hard to beat a sizzling portion of cod and chips wrapped in newspaper and that the French (who know a good thing when they see it) have adopted ‘Le Crumble’ in its myriad fruited forms and now seem to believe they invented it.

Stewart said the city should have a published policy not only because city employees should not be doing ICE's work but also because it is important that people know what their rights are. She suggested the city could publish a policy similar to the county's. Gordon agreed, saying the policy should be published for purposes of transparency and that immigrants should have the same rights as others.

Jordan stated emphatically that his answer was "no." He said for the city to convey a policy to police is one thing, but publishing the policy could result in unintended consequences, including loss of federal funding that benefits all residents. He believes the policy is fairly clear, adding that the city is bound by the county's policy. Marcavitch said that although he is open-minded on the question he leans toward Jordan's point of view.

Davis said the city's directive to police is not to inquire about immigration status if they stop someone for something else. Nor do other city departments request any information about status. If an outstanding warrant is encountered, she said, then we do follow up. If ICE says it wants someone detained, we follow the policy of the county. Davis said as far as she is aware, this policy has served the city well so far.

Mach said publication is not the issue. "What we do is important. Our practice is important."

Roberts said funding should not be part of the equation since human rights are more important than money. Orleans, too, believes the city should have a published policy.

Boyce went further and said he would support the city's declaring itself to be a sanctuary city, adding that the city should not use any of its funds for enforcing immigration laws. Pope said she had no problem with making the current policy public.

Byrd said federal funding is just a smoke screen since no one has lost funding yet and that the city should not detain residents on behalf of ICE. He accused other candidates he did not name with holding positions on this matter that are identical to those of Donald Trump and Jeff Sessions.

Police

Do you support a review of city policing policies and practices to ensure they align with a community-oriented approach that includes implicit-bias training, de-escalation training, community oversight and an end to broken-windows policing? Do you consider it a critical requirement that the new police chief have successful experience in working with a community policing model?

The candidates were united in thinking this question had way too many sub-parts to be adequately addressed in one minute. As it turned out, they also were at one for the most part in their answers to the question. Most followed the lead set by Byrd in saying, "Yes, yes, yes and yes" to all the questions, including experience with and commitment to the concepts of community policing on the part of the chief to be hired.

A number of the candidates pointed out that community policing had been around for quite a while and had long been part of Greenbelt's police training. No one, however, had any objections to further evaluation of policies and practices in the department. Roberts suggested that he would like to see a demilitarization of police departments.

A couple of the challengers suggested in their comments that the city council should be playing a different or stronger oversight role in the hiring or supervision of the police. Jordan explained that in Greenbelt's city manager form of government, it is the city manager, not the council, who has authority over employees, including those of the police department and any processes for hiring the new chief.

Voting Structure

Some residents feel the city's at-large election of all city council representatives is discriminatory. Do you support a change to voting for a mixture of at-large and ward-based representatives?

Candidates differed widely on this issue, which received much discussion in the city and was rejected about 10 years ago. Gordon, who had advocated for converting to a precinct or ward system even before the election period, argued that while the current council may think everyone in Greenbelt is well-represented, that is not the case. "Your experience is not mine," he said.

Four other candidates also supported various versions of ward systems for various reasons. Orleans supported having city districts with the mayor being elected at large. Saying he thought Greenbelt West was not currently well represented, Boyce suggested electing three councilmembers within a ward structure and the other four at large. He also suggested moving elections to even years, which would increase voter turnout in Greenbelt West.

Stewart said the at-large system supports incumbents since it is difficult to get sufficient name recognition citywide to be elected as a challenger. Marcavitch agreed with her, saying there was a "money issue" involved. He said he would support a blended system of some type, as well as shifting to longer terms with term limits.

Jordan, Davis, Roberts, Mach and Pope opposed a ward system because of concerns that it would further divide the city rather than providing a benefit. Jordan said we transport them to the North Woods,” said Knesel.

A past organizer of the festival, Melissa Ehrenreich, talked specifically about why the community values the history of the Forest Preserve and enjoys the Pumpkin Festival. She also mentioned that the festival shows their attachment to the forest and that the community will push to protect the preserve.

“We made postcards for kids to color and then send to Governor Hogan to let him know we are very attached to our forest,” said Ehrenreich. “It’s very important to the community to not lose what we have.”

RE-ELECT RODNEY ROBERTS!

Rodney Roberts is the sole voice of transparency and common sense in our city government. We need him. – Bill Rich

I support Rodney Roberts because of his lifetime experience as a Greenbelter. He appreciates and knows like no other candidate where we came from, where we are, and where we thoughtfully need to go. He understands that you can 'smart growth' yourself right out of existence. He approaches needed change with a cautious clarity that keeps the Greenbelt New Deal Spirit alive! – Paul Downs, Greenbelt Outstanding Citizen 2017

Rodney was a tireless activist for many years to save the Green Belt from development that later became our Greenbelt Forest Preserve. I believe in Rodney Roberts. You always know where he stands, he doesn't play games. Rodney is dedicated to protecting the unique character of our City and its green spaces. – Gail Richards

Rodney has been an active member of the Greenbelt community for many years. He has generously given of his time and expertise in order to improve the livability of our city. He has lobbied for community policing and bike patrols in order to keep our city safe for walking and enjoying the many unique walkways Greenbelt is known for. During his time as a member of Greenbelt City Council, he has been involved in the preservation of our green belt that we may enjoy and pass on to our children and future generations the benefit of nature. – Ruth Haynes

Rodney has repeatedly demonstrated his dedication to the protection of open space and forests in all areas of Greenbelt. He was an early supporter of the citizens' grass-root movement to stop the Lakeside North Development. As a member of Council, he has shown respect for the rights of all citizens to observe Council business in open meetings. – Brian and Donna Almqvist.

Rodney Roberts has been working for Greenbelt for the last 26 years on Council and before that he spent 4 years as a citizen activist. He has integrity and our best interests at heart. Rodney was the only council member who stood firmly against the 25-story monstrosity of a high rise at Lakeside North. He has my vote and always will. – Susan Smithers

Rodney truly cares about the future of Greenbelt! He has always been doing what is best for it and its citizens! – Patti Stange

Rodney Roberts grew up in Greenbelt in the 60's and 70's and has lived all of his life here. The likelihood of ever again having someone else with this specific background - and invaluable perspective - on Greenbelt City Council is very slim. He wants to preserve the best of the past while going forward. That means keeping Greenbelt the sort of place kids can grow up with lots of varied activities and places for recreation, just as he had. It means keeping crime down. It means top-notch city services for everyone. And it absolutely means hanging onto the cherished woodlands that define our town. Roberts has a clear, unwavering vision that doesn't change depending on his audience. He's not a politician and that's to his credit. Talk of "smart growth" and "expanding the tax base" sounds good but Rodney Roberts is emphatic that they shouldn't be at the cost of what made Greenbelt special in the first place. As he says, some things are more important than money. You might find someone who loves Greenbelt as much as Rodney Roberts does, but you won't find someone who loves Greenbelt more. Please join me in voting for Rodney Roberts. – Colette Zanin

he was "open to talking about it but did not think it would work well." He added that he didn't think understanding the whole of Greenbelt was as difficult as suggested. Roberts, too, said he was willing to be convinced but thought representation was better under the current system than if someone were elected with a small number of votes. Pope responded in kind, saying she thought being elected at large required one to work harder and be more responsive than if one represented a limited area.

Byrd, too, said he was open minded on the question but thought the incentives are wrong. He said he wanted to be elected to represent all of Greenbelt, not just part of it. He was also concerned that candidates from one ward could run for office with no interest in the concerns of other wards or could be elected with a small number of votes. At the same time, he said he was concerned that the council does not reflect the diversity of the city.

Transportation

Transportation Improvements – What can the city do to improve transit in Greenbelt and promote more affordable and environmentally sustainable options?

Candidates overall were in agreement on this question. Everyone agreed it was essential to replace the Greenbelt Connection and eventually expand its service. Everyone would like to have a Greenbelt circulator bus, which would probably mean at least two buses, but councilmembers who recalled a prior feasibility study in which the costs were found to be prohibitive were less excited than others about the likelihood that it could be done.

In the meantime, Mach said, council should continue to work closely with the county and TRUG, continue to enlarge biking and pedestrian access and safety, and continue to make electric vehicle charging stations more plentiful.

Davis agreed, adding to the list the need to continue to improve crosswalks and bus stops. Marcavitch noted there have been a number of pathway changes in the area that Greenbelt can now hook into, stressing the importance of good networks and connections for successful pedestrian and bike experiences. Jordan said he would like to see Greenbelt partner with College Park on bike-share.

In supporting the various suggestions for biking, walking and public transportation, Byrd said the most important aspect of all these ideas is follow-through. He also noted that Maglev and widening the Baltimore-Washington Parkway would not improve transportation in Greenbelt.

Alternative Energy

Beyond purchasing 100 percent wind power and several hybrid vehicles, what specific ideas could the city pursue to reduce its use of fossil fuels?

Pointing out that battery capacity for electric vehicles has expanded, Jordan said it is now beginning to look feasible for the city to begin buying electric vehicles for public safety use. He also said he supports a petition that was submitted to start moving away from gasoline mowers and blowers for city landscaping. Celdran stressed solar power and using LED lighting both indoor and out.

Marcavitch said that at this point big changes are needed, not small ones, with leadership being required to fight against climate change. Noting that Greenbelt had been recertified as a sustainable city, Davis said the city should use solar wherever possible and expand the use of electric vehicles. She said LED lighting has already been installed in most public city locations. Roberts put priority on protecting the forest and fighting any proposals to widen highways. Mach supports moving more quickly toward solar and seeking out a solar farm when the city's current electric contract expires.

Boyce upped the ante a little by suggesting that rather than just putting solar panels on a few city buildings, the city should not stop with its own property but rather take a leadership role throughout Greenbelt in assessing possibilities for encouraging change. Stewart agreed that the whole city should be inventoried and agreed with others in saying the necessary leaders are not coming forward.

Byrd said Greenbelt should definitely not be leading from behind in the area of climate control. He pointed out that he had encouraged council to take a position supporting the Paris Climate Accord when President Donald Trump withdrew the U.S. from participation, and he favored increasing use of solar and wind power, as well as increasing charging stations.

Watershed

What is your commitment to cleaning up our streams, especially as they pass through city property, and to create infiltration systems to control runoff and redirect rainwater back into the ground instead of into the storm water sewer system?

It was later in the discussion on this question that Marcavitch said, "Not too many people will disagree on this, except maybe our current administrator of the Environmental Protection Agency." And Stewart answered, "How committed? 200 percent."

With that in mind, all candidates wanted to see more pervious surfaces, rain gardens and complete green streets, with less litter, dog waste, asphalt, concrete and improperly used fertilizer.

The replaced parking lot at the Springhill Lake Recreation Center and the pervious one planned for Buddy Attick Park are generally praised, although Roberts opposes it because a row of pine trees will be cut down.

Jordan said the city is doing a lot in partnership with the county on the forebay project. He commented that partnering helps to save money. He thinks with more staff the city could take advantage of more funding opportunities.

Boyce suggested a need for a council science and engineering advisory group. He has concern that there is not enough knowledge on some issues, such as waste water management, at the council and staff levels.

Closing

In closing, candidates were given two minutes to pose a question to themselves that had not been asked. Some interpreted that to mean one of the unasked 10 questions on the list; others took it as free time.

Celdran took a question from the list on how city government could move toward a zero-waste approach to waste management and resource recovery practices. She suggested asking the advisory groups for input, extending online payments across the board for city fees, and eliminating all those little envelopes enclosed with bills.

Marcavitch noted a number of topics that motivated him to run for office, including elder justice, community wi-fi, and particularly building an effective transportation network. He thanked the sitting council for its opposition on issues like Maglev and Hyperloop.

Davis said a question she would pose to challengers is "How much time are you willing to put in?" She said being on the city council is a big time commitment, since they engage in many activities and meetings over and above their own meetings. She said councilmembers are always participating and always learning.

Byrd said he would take a cue from Davis's question about the time commitment and point out that he is the only challenger who has been attending regular city council meetings for the last year. He has also submitted several petitions that have been accepted for council action. One he submitted that he would still like to see adopted for Greenbelt is a non-discrimination ordinance covering race, gender and national origin.

Mach said a concern of hers is finding ways to establish respectful relationships among councilmembers and residents. She does not want the tone that has taken over the current federal administration to come to Greenbelt.

Boyce said he found it sad to think economic development would have turned out to be a progressive issue, but he did not understand the rejection of the plan developed by Beltway Plaza. He does not see how the city can move forward with the attitude of the current council toward economic development. He also believes term limits are long overdue for councilmembers in Greenbelt and that "you can't reelect the same people and expect to get different results."

Pope said one other goal is bringing on an economic development advisor for the city.

Stewart said her own experience with dealing with playground surfacing and artificial turf in Greenbelt—and not feeling that her concerns were adequately heard—has led her to believe the voters need a watchdog on council. Gordon spoke of it being a time for change, saying change can be difficult but it is time to move forward.

As did other candidates, Jordan complimented the organizers on the thought-provoking questions they devised. The optional question he chose to answer from the list was whether he would favor letting otherwise qualified, non-U.S. citizens who are

by John Campanile

The newly formed Greenbelt Homes, Inc. (GHI) Bicycle Task Force met for the first time on Wednesday, September 20. The task force was created on July 20, the culmination of a process initiated by members of the GHI board of directors.

The task force members are all bicycling enthusiasts and members of GHI: Alex Barnes (co-chair), John Campanile (secretary), Aileen Kroll (co-chair), Diana McFadden (GHI board liaison) and Mary Salemme. GHI's Bruce Mangum assists as staff liaison.

The task force will review bicycle infrastructure within the GHI community and make recommendations for improvements to the GHI board. Among its first tasks is to identify locations and arrange to have bicycle parking racks installed throughout the GHI community. Other topics to be considered include:

In collaboration with the Greenbelt City Council, identify streets for the placement of road sharrows (on-street shared lane markings) and Share The Road signage.

Address educational opportunities for road sharing among bicyclists, pedestrians and drivers, and bicyclists' rights and obligations.

Promote bicycle awareness to the GHI community while strengthening bonds with local governments and advocacy organizations.

Survey GHI residents and use the feedback to help improve overall conditions providing a culture for bicycling based on members' comments.

Other ideas discussed include bicycle repair clinics, community bike rides and placement of bicycle repair stations and storage sheds within GHI.

The realized vision of 1937 Greenbelt, one of the country's first planned communities, was one in which bikers and pedestrians had well-maintained areas, separate and apart from the driving areas. This was very forward-thinking. Fast forward 80 years and many cities and communities have taken this concept and created biking infrastructures that, if implemented by GHI, would greatly benefit GHI members in particular and Greenbelters in general. It is the intention of the GHI Bicycle Task Force to bring these matters to the fore and address them in ways that enhance the health and well-being of GHI members.

The next meeting of the task force is scheduled for Wednesday, November 15 at 7 p.m. in the GHI Office. All GHI community members are welcome and encouraged to attend.

For additional information, contact John Campanile at jbelltower2@gmail.com.

was identified through a Safety and Spot Improvements program in October 2014. It was a candidate for a project aimed at improving areas with a high concentration of rear-end and sideswipe crashes. However, College Park "surprisingly" received a letter in September that the project had been cancelled.

Wojahn explained a proposal from the Maryland State Highway administration to redirect the traffic in that area and add a turn lane. The City of College Park, however, thought the proposal would not help with congestion and would just add confusion, according to Wojahn. Therefore, the proposal was eliminated, but "we asked them to take another look at what would be the best and safest way to fix it," he said.

Berwyn Heights and New Carrollton representatives said they also would need to put the Beltway letter in front of their city councils before officially signing on.

High School Choirs Perform at UMD

A high school choir invitational will take place on Wednesday, November 8 at 7:30 p.m. in Dekelboun Concert Hall of The Clarice. For a 16th consecutive year, the High School Choir Invitational puts the future of choral music in the spotlight as talented area high school choirs gather for a vibrant performance alongside UMD choral students. This concert is free.

Botanic Garden Holds Free Nature Walk

On Thursday, November 9 the U.S. Botanic Garden (USBG) will offer a tour from noon to 12:45 p.m.

Taking time to enjoy nature has been shown to reduce stress, increase productivity and improve overall wellness. Join the guided nature walk of the USBG outdoor gardens that explores the relationship with plants and the natural world. This tour will intermittently stop to connect with one's body through guided stretching and calming exercises.

The tour is held outdoors. Bring sunscreen, protective clothing and water. The tour meets by the entrance to the Conservatory on the Terrace. It is free but pre-registration is required. Visit USBG.gov/Programs to register. The tour will be cancelled if it rains.

LETA'S GOALS and ISSUES

√ Work Together

- We achieve more when we listen, research and work together. We must see that the unfortunate, reprehensible tone of discourse that exists in many areas of the country does not infect Greenbelt.
- We must work together and with coalitions to oppose the MAGLEV and Baltimore-Washington Parkway and Beltway widening proposals.
- Using my co-op knowledge and experience, I will continue to be a resource to cooperative businesses that can contribute to our economic development efforts.

√ Respect the Past

- I urge citizens to vote yes on the referendum to permit the city to borrow funds to repair the Greenbelt Lake dam as the repair is mandated by the state.
- I will work to see the recommendations of the Pedestrian and Bicycle Master Plan and Sustainability Plans implemented and I will work to see the pedestrian/bike trail from the Greenbelt Station development to Metro built.
- I will insist that the county zoning rewrite respects Greenbelt's rich heritage.

√ Build the Future

- I urge citizens to vote yes on the referendum to give 16- and 17-year-old youth the right to vote in city elections.
- I will work to see that all Greenbelt children can attend Greenbelt schools.

NASA's MAD Presents Follies, The Ghosts of Yesteryear

by Jim Link

With the turning of nature's colors comes Goddard Space Flight Center's very welcome MAD fall 2017 show Follies, with music and lyrics by Stephen Sondheim, book by James Goldman. The Music and Drama Club's lavish outsize production boasts a cast of over 30, if you include the orchestra.

The action is set in 1971 when Dmitri Weismann, a Ziegfeld type of impresario played by the excellent Jeff Pattison, throws a farewell party and reunion for his Follies cast before their grand old theater is razed to make way for a parking lot. A tender, bitter nostalgia dating from 1941 saturates the four principals who recall their glory days onstage as well as their very personal follies.

Sally Durant Plummer, the perennially wonderful Cathy Barth, is married to Buddy Plummer played by the excellent singer/dancer Mike Marshall. Phyllis Rogers Stone, the solid, droll, withering, vulnerable, excellent Jill Goodrich, is married to Ben Stone, the cynical, philandering, charming Shawn Perry.

But 30 years earlier in their teens Sally loved Ben and Jill loved Buddy when the world was their oyster and the future beckoned gloriously, before circumstance intervened (WWII) and time eroded their ideals. So Follies is a tale of middle-aged disenchantment wild with regret, but laced with gutsy optimism and bitter wisdom.

Veteran actress Kim Weaver debuts as director and offers up a sumptuous feast for the eye, an explosion of color as the costume designer. Choreographer Katrina Jackson's vision is even more creative and intricate than in Oklahoma! and Urinetown.

Frequent flashbacks show the quartet ruefully remembering their younger selves, giving us eight principals basically – present and past. We ache with Ben when he sings What I'd Give to be 25 Again and want to cheer Carlotta, played by Nina Harris, when she belts out her fierce, gritty I'm Still Here.

Lingering long in memory are Sally, played by Cathy Barth, singing Losing My Mind; Penny Martin in an off the shoulder shirred purple sheath singing with the ensemble, and Katrina Jackson doing a quasi-tango in Bolero d'Amour. This sexy dance of love was choreographed by dance captain Trisha Randazzo.

This Las Vegas style extravaganza features undulating beauties in feathered headdresses, shimmering lamé dresses, tuxedos, sashes, boas, bow ties, tap dancing and more clothing changes than Christine Wells has directed the MAD orchestra – 21 consecutive fall musicals!

See the MAD players resuscitate the not quite dead ghosts of yesteryear at the Barney and Bea Recreation Center at Goddard Space Flight Center on November 2, 3, 4, 9, 10, 11 at 8 p.m. and on November 5 at 2:30 p.m.

RE-ELECT Emmett V. Jordan Greenbelt City Council

Over the past 8 years, I've provided thoughtful leadership to City Council decision-making. My consistent record of service and hard work are a reflection of my commitment to this City.

I am respectful of the opinions of others. I seek out the views of residents and stakeholders by being active in our community and outside of Greenbelt. I've tried to live up to the promises I made since I first ran for election in 2009.

Our City is changing. I will work to welcome new Greenbelt Station residents into our community and to focus on strengthening connections between our many neighborhoods. I'm committed to the balanced distribution of resources for public safety, recreation, and other services throughout Greenbelt. I remain committed to protecting the City's unique legacy while working to insure a vibrant future for Greenbelt through planning and action.

I will continue to look for ways to improve services, cut costs, and invest in our staff and infrastructure. Council must direct and support the new City Manager in order to insure her continuing success. A permanent Police Chief, Director of Planning & Community Development, and several other key positions will be filled during the next Council term.

Through my leadership as Mayor and as a Council member, we have reduced the City's long-term obligations by favorably refinancing debt and we have increased reserve fund levels. We have begun to take practical, inexpensive steps towards implementing economic development strategies that will one day reduce Greenbelt's reliance on residential taxes.

I respectfully ask for one of your votes, so that I can continue to work on your behalf.

Greenbelt Community Pledge
The strength of Greenbelt is diverse people living together in a spirit of cooperation. We celebrate people of many cultures, faiths, and races living together. We pledge to foster a community which is respectful, safe, and fair for all people.

He has lived in all parts of the City, first in Springhill Lake (now Franklin Park), then with his family in Charlestown North, GHI, Windsor Green, and most recently Greenbrook Estates. He was born in Hazelton, Pennsylvania, grew up in Baltimore with adoptive parents, and earned a Microbiology degree from the University of Maryland.

Putens recently retired from a senior management position at the Food and Drug Administration after 40 years of federal service. He is now a consultant for FDA's Center for Food Safety and Nutrition.

While on the Windsor Green Board of Directors, Putens became the first Greenbelt East resident elected to the City Council. He was a co-founder of the Greenbelt East Advisory Committee (GEAC). On the Council, Putens took a leading role on law enforcement issues, consistently advocating for adequate police staffing. He initiated several public safety measures and the City's Public Safety Advisory Committee. He took a leading role on senior citizen concerns and proposed the Advisory Committee on Education. Most recently he has focused on bringing the FBI to Greenbelt, which he believes is still a realistic possibility.

Bill Orleans

Bill Orleans is still a jerk; let incumbent council be as honest, if not as accurate, in assessing themselves; let residents of Greenbelt be as honest, if not as accurate, in assessing themselves.

Insufficiently humiliated from this exercise two years ago, Orleans is again, indeed a candidate for Greenbelt council. He is serious. He would very much like to be elected to council, where he would hope to help reclaim the practice of democracy in Greenbelt and also where he would hope to help to reclaim the practice of democracy on the transportation planning board (TPB). (If elected he would still challenge to a duel, in Roosevelt Center, any other elected member of council interested in being Greenbelt's designated member of the TPB; method of engagement of their choice.) There is some question as to the number of words in his 2011 bio, 1,300 plus or 1,400 plus, but there is no question that number exceeds the News Review's apparently adopted policy that bios this year not exceed 450. Those were good little stories and that bio was totally revelatory of the development of Orleans' character which simultaneously is serious and playful in pursuing his contribution to the commonweal.

He hasn't the inclination or the time to whack 600 or 700 words from it. Orleans has not been, is not now nor would he be a leader in pursuing the commonweal; his role is more that of laggard, yet directing our attention to both the nakedness of our emperors and to our own hypocrisies in our respective contributions in that pursuit. (Or maybe we just say that we care about this or that or maybe we just don't care at all.)

His 2011 biography, mostly, if metaphorically accurate can be found in some version or another at BillOrleans.com or new and improved at greenbeltmd.gov.

Greenbelt History in Photos

by Jim Giese

This is the 21st in a series of articles with photos depicting the early history of Greenbelt.

The undated and unnamed Library of Congress photograph (top) was found by resident Mark Hanyok. It is probably one of Carl Mydans' photographs. We think the young, smartly-uniformed security guard standing erect holding a stop-and-go sign in front of a guard house is Albert S. Attick, well known to every old-time Greenbelter as Buddy.

As previously mentioned, Buddy Attick grew up in a house located just south of the intersection of the Capital Beltway with Kenilworth Avenue. He told me that he got a job as a security guard with the Greenbelt project as it was being constructed. Later, when the city government was established, City Manager Roy Braden hired Buddy as a police officer, one of the city's first employees. Buddy and his young bride, Gladys, also became one of the first Greenbelt families.

As a farm boy, Buddy knew how to handle horses and he spent much time patrolling the city and surrounding woodland on horseback. Most important was patrolling the woodland path between A Block, the westernmost part of the new town, and Greenbelt High School located on Edmonston Road across the street from the Town of Berwyn Heights (now the French Immersion School). As a police officer, Buddy got to know everyone in town and his cheerfulness and friendliness made him popular with all, even the young miscreants he corralled and released to parents after admonishments.

After World War II, Buddy transferred to the Public Works Department where he eventually became superintendent and then director. The second photo of Buddy with his Jeep was taken in 1966. Buddy still roamed the town, but now on wheels and more concerned with potholes than offenders. He retired upon completion of 40 years of service to the city and, following his death, the city council named the lake park in his honor.

In the photo below, the metal building behind Buddy is one of the sheds first erected during Greenbelt's construction to store building material. Later, a shed became a furniture store for the specially made furniture that new residents could either purchase or rent. Buddy was a salesman there for a while.

Then two buildings were moved over near the new sewage treatment plant where they became the city's public works facility. Used primarily to house equipment and store supplies, one small room served as Buddy's office, the only part of the building with heat, provided by a wood-burning stove. When the Maryland State Highway Administration condemned the land for its District Engineer Office, the city built its present facility beside the lake park.

Also visible in the photo are the two old city buses, no longer in service once other bus service was provided to the city in 1964. With most residents working in Washington and public transportation lacking, the city tried various transportation alternatives over the years, the last being to U.S. 1 in College Park, where D.C. Transit ran regular bus service into the city.

Greenbelt Memories

by Sharon Taylor Allemann

Sharon Taylor Allemann is a Greenbelt pioneer currently living in Huntington Beach, California. Her family moved into Greenbelt in 1937 when she was a few months old. Allemann reminisces, "I have always thought that Greenbelt is a very special place. One day I was sitting and thought about how Greenbelt was when I was a youth. I wrote down some things about my life in Greenbelt. Greenbelt and I are now 80 years old."

Remember When:

Halloween came around and each youth made up a costume? A bought outfit was not the best. A cowboy hat and a neckerchief made a good robber or an old sheet served for a ghost. An old, too big coat with dad's old hat was great for a bum. Little children and babies stayed home while the older children went trick-or-treating. Some were out for mischief and carried soap to mark windows. Masks were black and covered only the eyes, but if the string holding it on broke, one could buy a new one. We had a parade at our school and prizes were given for the best outfits. The teachers found good scary stories to read to us. I remember when the North End School students walked in costume to the Center School. We then would parade in the center of town.

Remember When:

The doctor came to your house if you were ill? Of course you had to have something serious for him to come. He had an office in one of the houses on Ridge Road. If you thought the problem was contagious, he certainly came to you and often he left a sign to be displayed on your front door that warned others that the house was quarantined. My sister, brother and I all had scarlet fever at the same time. That sign was up for a long time and mother couldn't even go out to the grocery, but a neighbor bought some food and left it on our back porch. When I sustained a bad cut on my hand, Officer Buddy Attick drove me to the doctor (my family, like many, had no car) where I bravely received several stitches with black thread while squeezing the officer's thumb.

Remember When:

Mom brought home the butter but it was white? Or was it oleo? A little red pill was in the plastic bag with the butter so we could have fun mixing the pill into the white butter and that made it yellow! It was great fun for the kids to mix up all that nice greasy spread. Now we could tell everyone that butter is actually white and still tasted like butter! Putting the white stuff on our toast made us eat a little slower but in time we adjusted and looked forward to the day when it was our turn to do the mixing. I always wondered if soon our color pellet would cause the butter to be green or maybe blue or a nice purple.

Remember When:

The North End School had a very high, very long slide in the school playground? It was high and scary but it was metal and the weather affected it so sliding wasn't good. The students found a way to make it slide as it should. Our secret was in using waxed paper. One small square made that slide faster than any we had ever used. We could sit on the paper and slip right to the bottom or work together and use our pieces of paper to rub our slide surface so everyone could enjoy the fun. The teachers didn't share our joy. They thought we had made the slide dangerous, so we came after school and on Saturdays to shine up one of our favorite pieces of playground equipment.

Remember When:

During the summer the youngsters would get out their wagons and head for the Co-op store?

Many of the women who did their weekly shopping needed help getting the groceries to their homes. That's where the youths came in handy. When someone was ready to go home they could just ask one of the youths to carry her groceries to her home in a wagon. She'd then pay the kid whatever she thought was appropriate and that young person would return to the store hoping for another customer. The general pay depended on the distance and how many hills. The highest pay was about 50 cents, but many paid about 25 cents.

Remember When:

The Japanese beetles came to Greenbelt? They were everywhere - all over the hedges that surrounded our homes (no fences allowed but green hedges surrounded every row). Beetle traps were placed in some of the town's yards. The beetles could be put in Mason jars, and when they were full each jarful was turned into the police station where a monetary amount was awarded. There was one bird that loved these beetles - the starling. These birds simply love Japanese beetles! So now the birds were brought in and the problem was solved. But we developed a new problem - when you interfere with nature you create new problems. The beetle problem disappeared but the birds would gather on top of many Washington buildings and when we had any parade the birds would make a mess of the buildings and sidewalks.

This fellowship provided Pope with a more thorough understanding of governmental policy and ethics and how local municipalities function.

Public Safety Awards Given For Outstanding Achievement

by Butch Hicks

Greenbelt American Legion Post 136 held its 30th Annual Public Safety Awards program in the Post's Samuel M. Hofberg Hall on October 27. The American Legion, local community and state government leaders recognized the outstanding achievements of police, firefighters, rescue squads and public works professionals from Greenbelt, Berwyn Heights and College Park.

Mike Moore, commander of Post 136, told the audience, "We are honored to extend greetings from the nearly 2,000 members of the American Legion family here at Post 136. We take great pride in the recognition of our safety and public works professionals by ensuring continuation of this honors ceremony begun in 1987. Our members live in the communities that are represented here tonight and they benefit from your deep commitment to public safety."

The Greenbelt Police Department's color guard opened the ceremony parading the colors before the family affair of more than 100 participants including partners, children, visiting relatives and friends. Greenbelt Mayor Emmett Jordan, who was joined by the Greenbelt City Council at the event, thanked the Legion for its continuous program recognizing first responders who put their lives on

Police Blotter

Based on information released by the Greenbelt Police Department, www.greenbeltmd.gov/police Dates and times are those when police were first contacted about incidents.

Robbery

October 19, 6:16 p.m., 6000 block Greenbelt Road. A man approached a woman in a parking lot, pushed her and grabbed her purse from her hands. He then fled on foot toward Greenbelt Road. The woman was not injured.

Counterfeit Arrest

October 19, 10:35 a.m., 6200 block Greenbelt Road. A 24-year-old nonresident was arrested and charged with counterfeit check, passing a counterfeit check and other related charges after officers responded to a report of a woman at Capital One Bank attempting to pass a fraudulent check. She was transported to the Department of Corrections for a hearing before a district court commissioner.

Theft

October 22, 3:30 p.m., 6200 block Greenbelt Road. A cell phone was taken from a purse at Jo-Ann Fabrics and Crafts.

Burglary

October 24, 3:34 p.m., 6900 block Hanover Parkway. The sliding glass door of a residence was broken in an apparent attempt to enter the home. Entry was not gained.

October 24, 7:20 p.m., 7800 block Mandan Road. A residence was entered after breaking out the rear sliding glass door. Three video game players, money and a safe containing a handgun were taken.

October 25, 10 a.m., 6100 block Breezewood Court. The front door of a residence was opened possibly by using a key. Entry was not gained because the inside door chain was still intact.

Vehicle Crime

A black 2002 Topline trailer

with Md. tag 141614X was taken from the 100 block Westway. Two push lawnmowers and a riding mower were on it at the time of the theft. A black 2009 Kawasaki ZX-1000 motorcycle with D.C. tag MR6783 was taken from the 7800 block Mandan Road.

Thirteen thefts from vehicles were reported. Six tags from Md. and one from Penn. were taken. Two from Md. were temporary rear T318717 (7800 block Hanover Parkway and T332769 (6700 block Village Park Drive). Three from Md. were rear 985M434 (7600 block Ora Glen Drive), 3MC8087 (5800 block Cherrywood Terrace) and Dealer rear 2A22497 (8000 block Greenbelt Station Parkway). Rear Penn. KHH6960 was taken from the 6100 block Breezewood Court.

Thefts occurred from three unlocked vehicles. In the 5700 block Cherrywood Lane money and a cell phone were taken. A man observed taking the property is described as white, wearing jeans, flip-flop-type shoes, a long-sleeved shirt and carrying a book bag. The other two thefts were in the 6400 block Capitol Drive (cell phone, laptop computer and DJ equipment) and the 100 block Westway (purse). In the 6300 block Golden Triangle Drive a video projector, money and sunglasses were taken from a possibly unlocked vehicle.

Two thefts occurred after windows had been broken out, in the 7800 block Mandan Road (embroidery machine, jewelry, credit cards and money) and in the 100 block Westway (construction tools). Construction tools were also taken in the 9100 block Springhill Lane after the driver's door was forced open.

Greenway Center Break-Ins

by Mary Loutsch

According to George Mathews, Greenbelt Police Department public information liaison, officers responded to an alarm at Pollo Cabana in Greenway Center on October 30 at 4:16 a.m. Upon arrival, officers found that the front door was smashed and a register was missing with an undisclosed amount of money inside. With further investigation, officers also found the front door of Hair Cuttery was smashed, but nothing was taken. No one was found inside either location. There are no leads at this time.

Mary Loutsch is the Dorothy Sucher intern writing for the News Review.

Moffitt and Andrew Whitehead as Civilians of the Year for providing specialized tactical emergency medical support and training to the police department.

Trooper First Class Samuel Jackson, a three-year veteran of the Maryland State Police, College Park Barrack, was recognized for his consistently high-quality police work including increased driving-under-the-influence arrests and controlled dangerous substances seizures.

U.S. Park Police Officer Benjamin Tomasiello was honored with a second consecutive award acknowledging his record of arrests for impaired and reckless driving, carjacking and excessive speed. His investigative skill in fatal vehicle crashes provided not only assistance to investigators but assisted families of those lost in the accidents.

Firefighters of the Year

Lieutenant Andrew Moffitt of the Greenbelt Volunteer Fire Department and Rescue Squad, Company 35 added special service to his daily department requirements. Moffitt volunteered his time to prepare memorial services for two beloved, deceased members. While coordinating his daily firefighter duties he managed the myriad details for the memorial services to ensure that the deceased were remembered with the dignity and honor they had earned as valued members of the Greenbelt Volunteer Fire Department.

Firefighter Joseph Brown of the Berwyn Heights Volunteer Fire Department and Rescue Squad was recognized for his consistent staffing availability over and beyond his normal schedule that helped the department provide fire support service for the Berwyn Heights and Greenbelt communities.

Employee of the Year

Tim Houchens, supervisor and manager in the department for more than 30 years, is regarded as one of the department's most dependable and hard-working employees. During the past year, in addition to handling city facility plumbing, electrical, heating and ventilation issues, he played a vital role in the completion of two large capital projects and one State of Maryland grant project.

"I believe the members of our communities admire and respect your service and sacrifices," Moore said, ending the evening's honors. "This evening's program is an opportunity to let you know how much we appreciate all that you do for us."
