Greenbelt Youth Celebrate Justice, Social Responsibility

by Deborah Bustin

On September 23 and 24, youth from the local Soka Gakkai International (SGI) Buddhist group joined 119,000 other young members and guests at the Lions of Justice Festival in the Prudential Center in Newark, N.J. The festival's purpose, according to its website, was to gather 50,000 youth from all backgrounds in nine cities across the U.S. to stand up for the dignity of life. Participants, who came from the New England and mid-Atlantic regions, enjoyed a variety of entertainment including films, speakers, music and the shared experiences of youth taking action in their daily lives to transform society.

Each participant was asked to affirm personal determination to make the 21st century one of lasting peace and to awaken profound courage and hope in their friends, families and communities throughout the country.

Council Meeting Discusses Greenbelt Station and Wi-Fi

by Diane Oberg

At its October 8 regular meeting the Greenbelt City Council scheduled a public hearing for Monday, October 22, to discuss authorizing the city to issue bonds to fulfill their obligation to provide financing for the construction of Greenbelt Station Parkway. Council also discussed several internet-related proposals and set the price for use of the electric car charging station, among other topics.

TIF

Council took the first step in implementing Tax Increment Financing (TIF) to reimburse the developers for construction of Greenbelt Station Parkway, also known as the Connector Road. Council had agreed to provide up to $8.4 million in the annexation agreement executed in 2006. In 2014, council adopted a resolution that created the Greenbelt Station Development District and Greenbelt Station Special Taxing District.

Ballot Features Candidates, A Baker's Dozen of Questions

by Kathleen Gallagher

It takes 2.6 times as long to read through the ballot questions on the ballot for the November 6 election as it does to read through all the candidates for all the races. Registered voters should have received their sample ballots by now and could try it.

Constitutional Amendments

The first two ballot questions address amendments to the State Constitution, which must be placed on the ballot for voters to approve or reject. Both are the result of bills passed during the 2018 session of the General Assembly.

Question 1

Education Funding: In 2008, Maryland voters approved an amendment to authorize video lottery operations for a "primary purpose" of raising money for public education. Introduced in the Senate, this year's amendment would require the governor to include in the annual state budget, as supplemental funding for pre-K through grade 12 in public schools, the revenues from video lottery operation licenses and any other commercial gaming dedicated to public education. The governor further must identify in the annual budget submission how the supplemental revenue is being used to supplement and not supplant other spending on public schools.

Currently, the primary allowed uses in the Constitution are capital projects at community colleges and public four-year institutions where revenue is raised from

YAC and League Help ERHS Students Register to Vote

Juanita Watts from the League of Women Voters Prince George's County (standing, left) and Youth Advisory Committee members Findley Holland and Arsalan Siddiqui help students to register to vote at Eleanor Roosevelt High School.

Este artículo está disponible en español en nuestra página web www.greenbeltnewsreview.com.

An enthusiastic effort on October 12 registered 34 Eleanor Roosevelt High School (ERHS) students age 16 and above to vote. ERHS senior Arsalan Siddiqui, chair of the Greenbelt Youth Advisory Committee (YAC), along with Deborah Mitchell and Juanita Watts, copresident and membership chair from the Prince George's County branch of the League of Women Voters, staffed a table outside the cafeteria. They were there to offer a plethora of voting information along with voter registration forms. Siddiqui said he wanted "to give young people a voice on issues that affect them." Mitchell added that she was there seeking to accomplish her organization's credo to empower citizens with information concerning the voting process.

The Youth Vote

Greenbelt residents that are 16 and 17, although not able to vote this November, can vote in next year's city council election. The YAC was an important factor in encouraging the council to consider allowing the 16-year-old vote. The issue, a question in last year's city elections, was approved by the voters and enacted by council. The YAC was looking for ways to encourage Greenbelt's youth to vote. Following the school shooting in Parkland, Fla., it has become a national trend to work on encouraging youth to vote.

"The Parkland shooting made us realize that we need to have

Thank Teachers During Their Special Week

November 12 to 16 is American Education Week. In its November 15 edition, the News Review will celebrate the week by highlighting every Greenbelt school with a brief article and pictures of each. We will also be offering the opportunity to say thank you to teachers (and administrators and school staff) by submitting classified ads, similarly to how we do the Love Notes published for Valentine's Day. The ads can be notes of appreciation to the educators who have made a difference in the lives of students and in our community. These notes will offer a chance to let teachers and other staff know how special they are. Though the focus of this education emphasis is Greenbelt schools and teachers, readers may submit notes of appreciation for well-remembered, well-loved teachers from years ago and places far away.

American Education Week provides an opportunity each year for all of us to celebrate education and honor individuals who are making a difference for children.

Maglev Rally

We appreciate the excellent article Greenbelters Rally with Other Opponents of the MAGLEV, which was written by William Pitts and published in last week's Greenbelt News Review. We want to point out that Bladensburg community activist Susan McCutchen was responsible for organizing and leading the rally.

Susan did an outstanding job of bringing people together for this event. Her friendly nature and community spirit was inspiring. Renee Green of Renee Green Productions also played a lead role by interviewing attendees about why they oppose the train.

Greenbelt Advocates for Environmental and Social Justice was very glad to participate in this event along with Beacon Heights Citizens Association, Linthicum-Shipley Improvement Association (LSIA), Citizens Against The SC-Maglev (CATS) and others who oppose the train.

We were able to collect more opposition letters at this event and hear the moving stories and concerns of people who could be badly impacted by the train. As Susan said to us, a lot of people came together to make this event a success.

Buddy and the Mouse

'Twas the night before last Wednesday and all through the house, everything was quiet until Buddy spotted that mouse. All havoc broke out between me, him and the mouse.

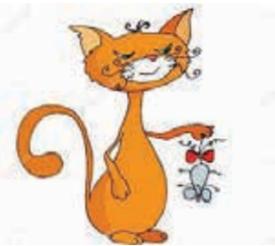

What I have since learned is that 90 percent of mice are blind. They follow the pheromones in their droppings as they search for food. Outside they eat acorns. As cold weather approaches, they look for warm places in which to live. Their skulls can compress to the point they can squeeze through a crack as small as one-fourth of an inch wide. They can enter a home by slipping under siding. Females can give birth to as many as 20 at one time.

No one can have a mouse in their house. They have mice.

Thank you, Buddy. Come visit more often and stay much longer.

Sue Krofchik

P.S. Buddy is a cat who was spending a few days with me while his home was undergoing some of the GHI improvement rehab.

The club has hosted interesting speakers in the past two months. In September, retired professor Harriette Phelps, a club member, talked about her projects, some still ongoing, uncovering chemical pollutants in the Anacostia River. The October speaker was Jemel Straughn from Doctors Community Hospital, who led a discussion on good nutrition and cancer prevention.

The final two October meetings are just for fun. October 24 is Bingo day. On October 31 the club will have an informal socializing event, serving tea and cookies. New members are always welcome. Stop by to visit any Wednesday. All meetings are held in Room 201 of the Community Center from 11 a.m. to noon.

Proclamations, Presentations, Requests Occupy Council

by Kathleen Gallagher

The early part of the agenda for the September 24 regular meeting of the Greenbelt City Council was replete with presentations, proclamations and various requests of residents to the city.

Presentations

For some time now, the city's director of planning and community development, Terri Hruby, has been a one-woman band in the department. It was thus with great pleasure that Hruby introduced Molly Porter, the city's new community planner, to council and the public. A graduate of the University of Cincinnati with her master's degree in community planning, Porter started work with the city in mid-August.

Mayor Emmett Jordan read and presented three proclamations on behalf of the city council. The first was presented in retroactive recognition of National Public Lands Day, the nation's largest one-day volunteer effort, which this year was celebrated on September 22. Assistant Director of Public Works Brian Townsend accepted the proclamation and described work to be undertaken at the request of Dora Kennedy French Immersion School the following weekend to improve land left in poor condition following the construction of the school.

Next, Jordan read a proclamation recognizing October as National Breast Cancer Awareness Month, which stresses awareness of the disease through education, as well as support for treatment and research. Councilmember Judith Davis spoke of the programs and facilities now available at Doctors Community Hospital, which has come to stress breast health and treatment as one of its particular areas of focus.

The third proclamation was presented by the mayor to Greenbelt Animal Control Officers Howard Stanback and Lauren Crossed, who brought a furry friend with them, in recognition of October as Adopt-a-Dog Month. Established in 1981 by the American Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals (ASPCA), the event encourages adopting dogs as well as volunteering and otherwise supporting shelters.

Petitions & Requests

Greg Fisanich, named Greenbelt's Outstanding Citizen for 2018 at the Labor Day Festival, has a special interest in promoting public safety. He gave a PowerPoint presentation called Trim a Tree for Safety, in which he demonstrates many areas in town where a little trimming back of trees and shrubbery at crosswalks and intersections can go a long way to improve the line of sight for both drivers and pedestrians.

Fisanich said he has provided the PowerPoint to the Public Works Department and requested that they note situations of this type as they travel around town. He added that he had made the improvements shown in the PowerPoint with just a hand-held pruner in short order. After determining that Fisanich was not putting himself in danger and that he was being careful not to trespass on private property, council warmly endorsed the project and thanked him for his presentation.

Robert Goldberg Strassler, representing Random Unselfish Acts of Kindness (RUAK), presented Blessing Bags and red bandanas to council members.

David Whiteman, president of the Greenbelt Soccer Alliance, addressed council about the need to improve soccer facilities in Greenbelt. According to Whiteman, Greenbelt's facilities are not comparable to those in surrounding areas, which affects an ability to recruit and keep players. He said a new field was installed at Eleanor Roosevelt High School (ERHS) last year that they were able to use for practice three days per week for their older players. The scheduling for this field is now done through the city Recreation Department, however, and they have been reduced to one day.

Whiteman requested that the city make the ERHS field more available in the short term for middle- and high-school players, especially for soccer because it is so dependent on the quality of the field surface. In the longer term, he asked that the city improve its facilities that can be used for soccer. He noted that financial help might be available to assist that effort through grants from the U.S. Soccer Foundation and that toward that end the Maryland State Youth Soccer Association would like to discuss partnering with the city.

After some discussion, council recommended to Whiteman that he speak with Joseph McNeal, assistant director of facilities for the recreation department, to discuss these possibilities further.

William Orleans questioned the appropriateness of placing on the consent agenda an item to approve the engagement of Davenport & Company, LLC as the firm to serve as the financial advisor to the city regarding Greenbelt Station's tax increment financing (TIF). He suggested that typically there would be discussion of the process of selection. He also commented on the continued intermittent problems with the audio in the Council Room and on cable. City Manager Nicole Ard explained that the audio was still a work in progress with the suppliers. In the case of Davenport, this company took over business from the former company the city had worked with when the firm's principal retired.

GCA Attends Coop Festival

by Jill Connor

GCA representatives Joe Gareri, Michael Hartman, Maya Gareri, and Leta Mach staff their booth on the National Mall.

The Greenbelt Cooperative Alliance (GCA) joined dozens of other cooperatives on the National Mall on October 6 and 7 to educate people about cooperatives and their structure and business models. The cooperatives at the 2018 Coop Festival were organized by categories including financial, grocery, housing and utility but each booth was allowed only two official category flags. Representatives from Greenbelt Homes Inc., Maker-Space, Greenbelt Federal Credit Union, New Deal Café, Greenbelt Nursery School, Greenbelt Cooperative Supermarket and the Greenbelt News Review staffed GCA's booth in the festival. Greenbelt and its cooperatives were known by many representatives of other cooperatives from around the country and some, even, from other countries. There were also representatives of organizations that help establish and support cooperatives including the USDA. The festival was a part of National Cooperative month.

A Review

Utopia Film Festival Review

by Cathy Jones

Cathy Jones reviews a set of the films she saw at the Utopia Film Festival this past weekend.

The block of films in the Utopia Film Festival I found most memorable was the environmental set on Saturday afternoon. The Healthiest Forest – an animated short – offered a visually compelling argument against overmanagement, showing how nature knows better than our own narrowly focused planners. “Our environmental memory tends to be shortterm,” and the power of film helps preserve and extend our ability to remember. Shad Run combined original music by Emmett Cooke with a recurring theme of how people, especially children, are having an impact – from the school children who help restock the Potomac with shad from classroom hatcheries to the waterman who works with conservationists because for him shad represent his connection to his father.

The feature-length film Evolve centered around a group of electric vehicle (EV) owners in Kentucky, but avoids the trap of dividing the world into heroes and villains. As one of the people in the film said, “not polluting shouldn’t be political.” The experience depicted in this film reflected my own this summer when I visited cousins in Louisville; even though you may disagree with someone else’s political stance, you can still find a lot in common, including a commitment to making the world we share a little cleaner and a little safer for everyone. In addition to the EV owners, we got to meet someone whose personal health has been severely affected by pollution, and see the impact that has on his daily life. The film also opened a window into “silicon holler,” where a renewable energy company is building a plant on a flattened mountain top. Seeing how an abandoned coal mine can be reclaimed and rehabilitated gives hope for a cleaner energy future.

Other highlights included:

Sisak, a short film from India, which drew a great reaction from the audience. The beautiful score for this silent film along with the powerful train imagery communicated the restraint and repression of LGBTQ citizens in a country where homosexuality was illegal until September 2018.

The Chocolate Shop is a sweet, short film, inspired in part by the filmmaker’s aunt who has Alzheimer’s. The film explores how tastes and smells can trigger memories, even those you might be happy to forget.

A Teachable Moment continued the theme of how important loving relationships can be by following four people who survived a stroke. The movie examined how to recognize when a stroke is happening, how important rapid treatment can be for long-term recovery, and how everyone can make lifestyle changes to decrease their risk of stroke. Neal Barnard and Dean Ornish were both on hand to advocate for a shift to a plant-based diet to decrease several stroke risk factors. Despite the essentially positive message, it was notable that the only one of the four stroke survivors who has died since the movie was made was the one person without health insurance.

See page 16 for another review of the Utopia Film Festival.

Live Wolf to Visit Patuxent Refuge

Council introduced an ordinance authorizing and empowering the city to issue up to $8 million in Special Obligation Bonds for public improvements in connection with the proposed district. According to the agenda comments the city expects that the amount borrowed will likely be less than the amount in the ordinance.

See sidebar further explaining the TIF at end of story.

Wi-Fi

Councilmember Colin Byrd proposed that council direct the city manager to provide a cost/options memo on providing Wi-Fi on the first floor of the Community Center. The Community Center already has Wi-Fi in the Multipurpose Room on the second floor and the Greenbelt Intergenerational Volunteer Exchange Service (GIVES) has one computer connected to the internet. While the building has some internet hot spots, the staff reports that they seldom get requests for it.

Councilmember Judith Davis noted that having Wi-Fi might make the Community Center livelier with people visiting just to use that service. Councilmember Rodney Roberts questioned council's priorities, stating that the first floor is not where he would start with implementing public Wi-Fi in city facilities. Mayor Emmett Jordan disagreed, saying that the meeting spaces on that floor need internet capabilities to do things like hosting or attending webinars. Jordan noted that some residents may oppose this action based upon their concerns about radiation.

Resident Michael Hartman pushed for Wi-Fi in all the rooms. With meeting spaces so fully booked, some gatherings that should be taking place in classrooms are being held in special purpose rooms such as the rehearsal room.

Council unanimously approved Byrd's motion to authorize Wi-Fi throughout the first floor of the Community Center and directed staff to add it to the agenda of the upcoming budget discussions.

Fiber Network

Byrd's next motion was not as well received by his colleagues. He proposed the creation of a task force to study the issue of a citywide fiber network and becoming a broadband community.

After some discussion, council voted down both the above motion and his second attempt authorizing a feasibility study by 1-6 votes. Most councilmembers in one way or another expressed that the motion is premature. Council wanted a worksession to better understand becoming a broadband community and to decide if a task force is the right approach.

Fossil Fuels

Byrd next moved that the city write a letter asking the Maryland State Retirement Agency to shift its investment portfolio away from large fossil fuel companies. In the letter's draft, Byrd writes, "there is a moral need for governments to work towards divestment from companies that significantly contribute to climate change."

Councilmember Leta Mach expressed concern that the letter did not go far enough and address the whole social investing space. Davis noted that the proposal may reduce the returns on the state pension fund, possibly leading to pension reductions. Both she and Jordan said that they may need to abstain from voting as they could be directly affected. Roberts argued that the scope of the review should be broader than the pension fund.

City Manager Nicole Ard reminded council that the city has several hundred employees who are invested in the state pension fund, some of whom have spent years as city employees building up their anticipated pensions. She noted that these employees have not been consulted on this proposal.

At this point, Byrd acknowledged that he did not have the votes to win approval of his letter and withdrew his petition.

In a related item, council approved without discussion sending a letter to the city's state delegation urging them to sign the "No New Fossil Fuels in Maryland" pledge. This action was originally requested by the Greenbelt Climate Action Network.

Charging Station

Council approved without discussion a "pay to charge" fee of $7.10 for 30 minutes of charging at the Municipal Building charging station. Staff found that pricing the service to provide a reserve for future replacement would drive the cost to $12.10, which was considered "prohibitively expensive." The vendor said it could not provide a discount for Greenbelt residents.

Development Proposals

Council approved a motion by Byrd directing the city manager to ensure that all city advisory boards receive notification of any development proposals under review by the Advisory Planning Board (APB). While some boards and committees are currently notified, this action will expand the list to include all city boards and committees through their staff liaisons. Recognizing that the time frame for municipal review will be shortened if the rewritten zoning ordinance is approved by the county council, the motion allows for one extra meeting beyond the APB's discussion. Attending the APB and possibly additional meetings may require the bodies to adjust their meeting schedules and comply with the deadline provided by the city for submitting comments.

Ard noted that all APB packets will go to the staff liaisons, even for projects that may not be traditionally thought of as development. Ard also reminded residents that they could sign up for alerts through the city's website.

Forest Preserve

Council accepted, without discussion, the Forest Preserve Advisory Board Report 2018-04, detailing proposed changes to the city code article regarding the Forest Preserve. This report is expected to be discussed at a future meeting.

Additionally, council unanimously approved the advisory board's drafted letter to the News Review editor in response to a March letter regarding illegal hunting in the Forest Preserve.

Proclamations, Policy

Jordan presented proclamations designating October as Co-operative Month in Greenbelt, recognizing October 6 to 12 as Nonprofit Awareness Week and observing October as Domestic Violence Awareness Month.

Council unanimously approved the Arts Advisory Board's Public Arts Policy with one change. See article in the News Review October 4, 2018, issue, page 9 for more details on the policy.

What is a TIF?

The following explanation of Tax Incremental Financing was excerpted from an article by the late Thomas X. White published in the March 3, 2014 News Review. It has been edited to be an explanation of TIFs rather than a current action by the city council.

With the early stages of residential development underway at Greenbelt Station South Core, Woodlawn Development (developers of the South Core) requested the City of Greenbelt to begin consideration of the establishment of a Tax Incremental Financing (TIF) district. This move would legally define the metes and bounds of South Core property from which TIF revenue could be utilized to finance the Greenbelt Station Parkway.

The development agreement between the city and the developers came about after the city's successful court challenge of the original Greenbelt Station plan approved in September 2001. The 2005 agreement set limits on total development (North and South Cores), defined a list of developer contributions to the city, gave the city approval authority over site and landscape plans and mandated that the developer request annexation of the South Core into Greenbelt, which subsequently occurred.

The TIF details were set forth in the annexation agreement. A TIF is a mechanism for governments to help finance new capital projects by taking advantage of expected real property assessment increases resulting from the new construction, thereby yielding increased tax revenues. The city can borrow against these expected increased tax revenues to build sewers, roads, transportation facilities or other infrastructure. In Greenbelt's case, the city agreed to participate in the TIF in exchange for the annexation of the South Core.

As set forth in the Annexation Agreement, the city is to provide up to $8.4 million to pay for construction of Greenbelt Station Parkway, plus issuance costs, subject to: (1) funds allocated for debt service payment can be generated from no more than 50 percent of the incremental tax increases over a 20-year period; (2) in the event revenues from the incremental tax increase of the subject property are reduced so that debt service cannot be funded, the total amount borrowed by the city may be reduced, delayed or otherwise restructured to insure that the debt service will not negatively impact the financial integrity of the city.

stand between themselves and their dreams;

- Fearlessly challenges the ways of thinking that justify hate, violence and discrimination; and
- Can joyfully unite with people of all walks of life toward developing a society based on the happiness of all people.

To develop into this kind of person and never give up in the face of opposition can be a challenge. Therefore, one needs to be unbending in the face of obstacles, just like a roaring lion.

Alicia Deligianis of Greenbelt, who attended the festival, said, "I realized that there are a lot of young people who want to right the injustices in the world and unite to make the world a better place. I think I gained idealism because it's apparent that we are this great force and if one of us makes a difference, it might not be such a huge effect, but if we all work to make a difference, that wave of positive energy will create a wave of positive change.

Aaron Williams, another festival participant from Greenbelt, said, "I feel the festival globalized my sense of equality and respect. The speakers' words of truth and encouragement took a physiological effect on my being to be better than who I was the day before."

Laila Rose Galvin, a Greenbelt resident who runs the biweekly Buddhist Philosophy for Peace Club at the University of Maryland campus in College Park, shared her festival experience. "So much of the encouragement and fighting spirit within the organization has been around this festival, so it was beyond powerful to see it with my own eyes. I was ecstatic when watching Michelle Obama's video message and seeing Herbie Hancock on screen too (playing with several youthful jazz musicians.) When watching all of the groups perform, it was the moment I realized that this festival wasn't about that one day. That one day wasn't going to transform your life dramatically. I reflected on all of the work people had put in to make the day possible and realized that so much of Lions of Justice is the journey."

As SGI Buddhist President Daisaku Ikeda has emphasized in his writings on peace and justice, "Efforts to reach out and engage others in dialogue with the aim of fostering mutual understanding and bringing people closer together may seem ordinary and unexciting, but they in fact constitute a bold and daring challenge to create a new era of human civilization."

video lottery terminal facilities. The proposed amendment would repeat that provision. Senator Paul Pinsky was a cosigner on the bill.

Proponents of the question focus on requiring the state to use the monies as originally intended as supplementary to other revenues for education, without replacing other funds. Opponents of the measure want to include language eliminating consideration of community colleges as a primary purpose and reducing the state's flexibility to use gambling revenues for other programs.

Question 2

Election Day Voter Registration: Introduced in the House of Delegates, this amendment would authorize the General Assembly to extend same-day registration and voting at precinct polling places on Election Day. Delegate Alonzo Washington was a cosigner of the bill. The law currently allows for same-day registration and voting at locations designated for early voting but otherwise requires that voter registration close 21 days before an election.

County Questions

The rest of the questions (A-K) are specific to Prince George's County. Legislation for the first five (A-E) originated with the county executive as part of five bond-enabling bills adopted by the county council for placement on the ballot. If adopted, as bond bills routinely are in Prince George's County, the government will be able to borrow money and issue future bond sales for capital projects referenced in the county's FY 2019-2024 and earlier Capital Improvement Program budgets.

Questions A-E

The following questions would enable the county to borrow money and issue bonds in amounts up to those indicated to finance the design, construction, reconstruction, extension, acquisition, improvement, enlargement, alteration, renovation, relocation, rehabilitation or repair of: Public Works and Transportation Facilities Bonds, $148,287,000 (Question A); Library Facilities Bonds, $16,796,000 (Question B); Public Safety Facilities Bonds, $56,053,000 (Question C); County Buildings Bonds, $97,564,000 (Question D); Community College Facilities Bonds, $81,187,000 (Question E).

Question F

Council Member Residency Requirements: This measure would amend the county charter to specify that councilmembers and at-large councilmembers must have been qualified voters of the county for at least one year immediately preceding the primary election. Furthermore, councilmembers representing a district must have been qualified voters of their respective districts for at least one year preceding the primary election. The charter currently provides only that a councilmember must be a qualified voter of the county at the time of election.

Charter Review

Since 2005, a Charter Review Commission has been appointed every four years to review the Charter and recommend any changes or edits. The remaining questions, G through K, were recommended by the 2017-2018 Commission.

Question G

Nondiscrimination – County

Personnel and Contracting: This measure would provide an individual right to nondiscrimination, mandate nondiscrimination in the employment of a contractor doing business with the county, and provide for nondiscrimination in the county personnel system, all based on marital status, familial status, disability, age and sexual orientation.

According to the commission's report, what this question would achieve would be to add marital status, familial status and sexual orientation to a list of protected categories that would then be made consistent across the work categories. The word "disability" replaces "physical or mental handicap" where the latter appears in the document.

Question H

County Council Member – Full-Time Position: If supported, this question would simply clarify that membership on the council is considered a full-time position for the purpose of determining compensation. This reference follows a statement in the charter that all county employees are classified as full-time or part-time.

Question I

County Auditor – Appointment, Responsibilities and Authority: Adopting this question would add additional information to an already detailed description of the county auditor's position, including the term of the position and certain authorities.

Question J

County Personnel – Temporary Appointment: This question provides for additional information to be added to an existing description of the process by which the county executive may appoint agency heads or similar positions on a temporary basis. Such an appointment could last no longer than one year without an intervening permanent appointment.

Question K

Charter Review Commission – Length of Term: Approval of this question would lengthen the time the Charter Review Commission would have to complete its work every four years by convening it earlier in the cycle.

a voice on issues that affect us. If young people don't speak up, no one else will," stated Siddiqui.

According to Mitchell, this first-time effort was the brainchild of Siddiqui and the YAC. Also spurred on by pressing issues like school safety and tax money usage, he initially contacted Pamela Gregory, chair of the Greenbelt Board of Elections, to get permission for a voter registration drive at ERHS. Gregory then contacted Watts, who leveraged the infrastructure of her organization to help make the event a reality. Siddiqui also credited the ERHS administration for their assistance, especially Assistant Principal Clinton Shands.

League Support

The League of Women Voters liked the idea of holding a voter registration event at the high school. "This is the first time we have done an event at a high school," said Watts. "Introducing civics to students at a much younger age helps them recognize the election process and the importance of voting." Alija Johnson, ERHS senior, agreed. "It gives you experience in voting so that you will know what to do when you get older." As he registered to vote, he expressed that he was excited to be able to vote in the upcoming election.

The League provided an extensive packet of local voting information. This included candidates for the offices of governor and lieutenant governor, comptroller, attorney general, U.S. Representatives for District 4 and 5, state senators and delegates for Districts 21-27 and 47, Prince George's County Council at large, judicial offices, county offices and Board of Education in Districts 2, 3, 6 and 9. There was a listing of pertinent Ballot Questions A through K for Prince George's County. Included were procedures on how, where and when to vote. The packet also contained an explanation of the powers and duties of the various positions.

Electorate

Siddiqui related that the event was about two months in the making. The biggest challenge was around the advertising, which included a school-wide email, a school announcement and mention on the school's social media page.

Siddiqui declared the drive a success. An added success was the chance to talk with several students, many of whom were not yet eligible to register, on why it's crucial for them to vote. He hoped that future efforts would "increase not only the number of voters but also educated voters," adding that they are hoping to providing civics classes for middle school students after school. He feels that is important to let them know about the issues that are affecting youth so that they will be excited to vote in the future. When asked why he was registering to vote, 17-year-old Malik Mason stated, "I feel like I can help make a change." It is an attitude that was shared by many of the students at the event.

Greenbelt Goes Pink: Breast Cancer Awareness in October

by Elena Macias

Greenbelt has gone pink in the month of October for Breast Cancer Awareness. On September 24, the City of Greenbelt issued a proclamation about breast cancer awareness month. As a result, the Greenbelt community has come together to raise awareness and honor those who have lost their lives, those who courageously continue to battle the disease and those who have prevailed and survived. From the Greenbelt Police Department to the staff at the Aquatic & Fitness Center, the community is making efforts to spread awareness.

The police officers transformed their normally gold badges to an eye-catching pink that stands out against their uniforms. They have been doing this for several years now according to George Mathews, the department's public liaison officer. The tradition started, Mathews said, because "breast cancer impacts families and loved ones: the law enforcement community is no exception."

"By wearing these unique badges, we not only show support for breast cancer survivors," he continued, "but we hope this can be yet another reminder for women about the importance of early detection, breast self-exam and mammograms."

The Aquatic & Fitness Center has also been honoring breast cancer awareness by offering patrons who wear pink or a pink ribbon $1 off daily admission to the pool every Friday during October. Stephen Parks, manager at the Aquatic & Fitness Center, said that the Center has been doing this for the past seven years to bring breast cancer awareness to visitors.

"One in eight women in the United States will be diagnosed with breast cancer in her lifetime so it is important to spread the message," said Parks. "We hope that providing patrons with pink ribbons would help spread awareness about breast cancer and perhaps start people talking about the disease."

As part of this emphasis, growing out of the city's proclamation, all residents of Greenbelt are encouraged to educate

ERHS Volleyball Team Has Magical Week with Big Wins

by Scott Fifield

The Eleanor Roosevelt High School volleyball team has waited to play a competitive opponent this season and last week, that finally happened – and the Raiders rose to the challenge. On Thursday, October 11 in a sweltering gym in Bowie, the Raiders won the battle of undefeated teams 25-18, 25-10, 25-22. It was a tense match throughout but Roosevelt's superior serving and their attacking from behind the 10-foot line made the difference. Junior outside hitter Jourdan Page led the Raiders with nine kills and senior outside hitter Mya Mitchell had five kills and eight aces. Mitchell is the Washington Post leader in aces with 81.

Then on Saturday, the team won the Tiger Paws Invitational at Woodrow Wilson High School in D.C. Roosevelt went 7-1 in bracket play, followed by a 25-10, 27-25 win over Bowie in the semifinals and a 25-16, 25-20 championship victory over Wilson. Page and Mitchell were named to the all-tournament team and senior setter Olivia Joachim (50 assists) was the tournament MVP.

After Monday's 25-13, 25-17, 25-18 win over Flowers, the Raiders are 13-0 and 9-0 in the Prince George's 4A league with two league contests remaining. The team will likely play in the county championship on October 30 at Fairmont Heights against the 3A/2A/1A winner and then host the 4A South playoffs on November 5, 7 and 9.

Provocative and Moving Films At Utopia Film Festival 2018

by Ginny Jones

Ginny Jones reviews a set of the films she saw at the Utopia Film Festival this past weekend.

The 14th Annual Utopia Film Festival continued its tradition of presenting a wide-ranging mixture of short and feature films from around the world. The films, 35 in all, were presented on Saturday, October 13 and Sunday, October 14 at the Old Greenbelt Theatre and Greenbelt Arts Center. The festival ended with an extra free showing of Defending Utopia: The Greenbelt News Review at 80 at the Arts Center on Sunday evening.

The festival shows at the Old Greenbelt Theatre started off with a selection of 16 creative short films from the Mr. Geo animation classes sponsored by GATe, followed by four short works of animation. At the Arts Center, the shows began with Father K, a documentary short in which Pastor Khader el-Yateem of the Salam Arabic Lutheran Church in Brooklyn ran for the New York City Council in 2017. He came in second in the primary but strengthened his community of wide-ranging immigrants and motivated them to take part in the political process. The film ended on a bittersweet note as his denomination assigned him to a church in Florida.

The second film at the Arts Center was From Mass to the Mountain, which takes place in the eastern section of Panama. The director of the film, Kurt Sensenbrenner from Racine, Wisc., was on hand to answer questions afterward. The film portrayed the efforts to provide potable drinking water to the 7,000 people living in a region neglected by the government of Panama. Father Wally Kasuboski, a priest from the region, created a foundation supported by Wisconsin residents which also sent volunteers (among them was Kurt Sensenbrenner) and equipment to help build a dam. Father Wally's Delta Foundation also enabled the area residents to purchase and title the land that surrounded the watershed.

Among the other films at the Arts Center on Saturday were Laymun, a short animated film whose main character was a woman in a city under siege who distributed plants throughout the city that she had raised from seeds. The Replacement was a short film that followed a janitor who consented to be cloned. When his clone won the Presidential election, the janitor wanted to serve instead – a decision that proved deadly. Following in the political genre, The Mayors Race documented the run of Marvin Rees, a black man from the slums of Bristol, England, to become its mayor. While he loses in his first attempt, by the next election he has matured and built a coalition of Muslim and new voters who help him win the post. The Long Ride follows the trip made by buses of immigrants from across America in 2003 to Washington, D.C., to protest the working conditions of immigrants in the United States. This film also included a brief history of the U.S. government attempts to write and enact immigration legislation from the 1960s to today.

An interesting narrative short film was Achentannos, a film about a man turning 100 in Sardinia who is going to be filmed on his birthday for a television series. He is less than thrilled with the arrangement. His granddaughter, whom he has not seen since she was a young child, unexpectedly arrives to see him. She has been para-gliding; in a wonderful ending the two of them sail away as the TV presenter arrives to film him. Another narrative short film, Tin Can, is a delightful film about a clown who worked in rodeos until the rodeo closed. He is reduced to being a clown for birthday parties and goes to perform at a home in Texas near the Mexico border. The children at the party are not impressed by his act and after he leaves he encounters a group of Mexican children on the other side of a border fence. He ends up being arrested by a U.S. border patrol agent and jailed. The happy ending occurs when the agent leaves his cell open. As the clown leaves the jail, the agent points to a brown paper bag marked "Bozo's things" on a desk in the office. When he opens the bag in his car the clown finds a note saying: Kindness knows no borders.

The film with the greatest impact on Sunday was The Guardians, a powerful documentary that followed an investigation into predators who become court-appointed guardians of elderly people in Las Vegas. These seniors are removed from their homes, trapped in nursing facilities, from which their relatives are unable to free them, and their assets are stolen by the guardians. The documentary followed cases in Las Vegas, where the family court system in Clark County included judges, lawyers, doctors, physician assistants and court-appointed guardians who colluded to steal from their victims. After the film, a group of persons described how their relatives had been victimized through their guardians' actions and showed that this practice occurs in many states. It is estimated that over 10,000 seniors are defrauded each year throughout the United States by such court-appointed guardians.

In The Name of My People was narrated by Malatai Joya, a young female Afghan activist, who described the 38 Afghan war years starting with the Russian invasion, up to the present day. The descriptions of what the Afghans have suffered was brutal and moving. The final film shown at the Old Greenbelt Theatre was In the Executioner's Shadow, which followed George Givens, the Virginia State Executioner for 18 years, interspersed with stories about Karen Brassard, a victim of the Boston Marathon bomber, and Vicki and Syl Scribeber, whose daughter was murdered by a serial rapist. These three sets of people gave faces to the range of positions on the death penalty – pro (Karen), con (Vicki and Syl Scribeber) and conflicted (George Givens, who almost executed an inmate innocent of the murder for which he was convicted).

This 14th year of the Utopia Film Festival gave our community a wonderful weekend of fascinating, provocative, moving and thoughtful films. Greenbelt is indeed fortunate to have the organization of Greenbelt Access Television which makes the project possible.

Ginny and Cathy Jones are mother and daughter. Ginny is a News Review staff member.

Greenbelters Translate News For Local Spanish Speakers

by Eduardo Umana

Este artículo está disponible en español en nuestra página web www.greenbeltnewsreview.com.

Over the years the Greenbelt News Review has wanted to include Spanish-language content in the paper. According to recent census data, 15.6 percent of Greenbelt's population is Hispanic. In an effort to make at least some of its content available to Spanish-speaking Greenbelt residents, the News Review has been translating, for the last two months, two or three articles per week into Spanish. Last summer, a member of the News Review editorial staff approached Carolina Napp-Avelli, a Spanish-speaking Greenbelt resident with experience in translating, to ask if she would be interested in translating articles for the paper. Napp-Avelli, along with her daughter Ana Fernandez-Napp, a senior at Eleanor Roosevelt High School, discussed it with News Review staff and decided to begin translating articles into Spanish.

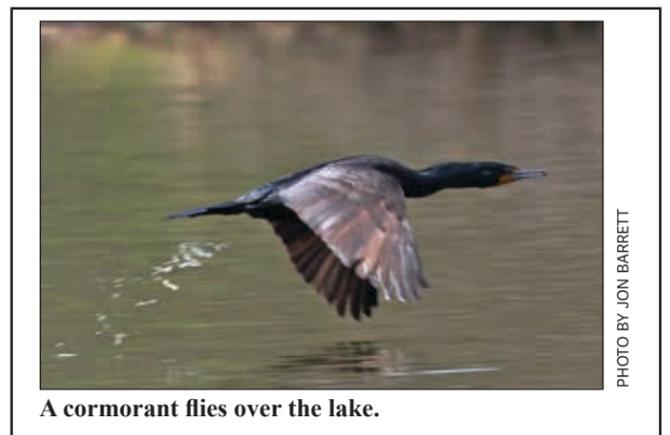

From childhood, Fernandez-Napp spoke Spanish at home but had little opportunity to practice writing it. When asked why she decided to become involved in this project, she said, "I wanted to practice my professional writing skills in Spanish." She thought that translating articles for the News Review could be one way for her to improve her Spanish writing skills while contributing something useful to the community.

So far, the experience has been a positive one for the translation team. This year's Labor Day Festival felt different to Fernandez-Napp because for the first time she not only attended the event, but also translated the festival schedule published in the News Review. "I have always attended the festival since I was little. It has been my favorite event. But this year I also had to report about the events on Labor Day," she said.

So far, the News Review and the Spanish translation team (which has now grown to four) are happy with how their translation process is evolving. In the first step, they run the English language version through Google Translate which gives them a rough draft. Then they work through the article, word by word, making the necessary edits so that it makes sense in Spanish. After that, they compare each version paragraph by paragraph to double-check their work. Once the articles have been fully translated, Fernandez-Napp and her mother, Napp-Avelli, read the piece and continue to tweak the Spanish to make sure the full story is cohesive and makes sense. "I was born in Argentina and grew up in Spain. All my higher education was done in Spanish," Napp-Avelli said, emphasizing that this background helps her to make sure the article is well-translated and accurately conveys the story as it was originally written. It is important for the translation team that the news they translate is clear to Spanish speakers. Greenbelt's Hispanic population originates from a variety of nations such as Mexico, El Salvador and Peru. "Spanish is a very diverse language, and some words cannot be translated," Napp-Avelli said, "so we leave those words in English. We all come from different countries but we have one thing in common: the experience of living in the U.S. as speakers of Spanish."

The team knows that its work is a success so far, according to Fernandez-Napp, because they are receiving positive feedback from readers. "A reader from Peru contacted the paper congratulating us for the articles in Spanish," she said. "Publicity about the project is reaching the local Spanish-speaking audience too," said Napp-Avelli. She stressed that she is doing this project to help inform and serve the Hispanic community. Napp-Avelli mentioned that one of the best feelings a person can have is to serve others. The News Review expects to continue publishing selected articles in Spanish and seeks to expand the project to include translating articles written in Spanish into English.
