City's Maglev DEIS Review Focuses on Inflated Benefits

by Pat Scully

The City of Greenbelt filed its comments on Monday, May 24, on the Baltimore-Washington SCMaglev Draft Environmental Impact Statement (DEIS). Greenbelt's comments, which were endorsed by the City of College Park and the Town of Landover Hills, uncovered 222 pages worth of errors and omissions in the DEIS. Chief among these is that the project's ridership estimates and related projections are grossly over-inflated, leading to further inflation of estimated congestion relief and projected revenues. These fundamental flaws are apparent despite the fact that the Federal Railroad Administration (FRA) failed to provide key information to the public, including the project's ridership modeling reports, which are the foundation for much of the information in the DEIS.

Norman Marshall, president and founder of Smart Mobility, Inc., who assisted Greenbelt with its review, states, "The supposed congestion relief for non-SCMaglev travelers will not materialize. Instead, construction of the SCMaglev will create a two-tier system with a fast ride for the

by Kathleen Gallagher

As previously reported, at its April 26 regular meeting the Greenbelt City Council took action on two proposed resolutions that were introduced for second reading. If it is not petitioned to referendum by the voters, one of these resolutions will convert the city's Absentee Voting program into a full-fledged Mail-in Voting program. It will continue to serve the needs of voters who have used Absentee Voting, but it is hoped that it will bring in new voters as well. In-person voting on election day and Early Voting in the weeks preceding will continue to be available.

The other resolution, to establish a 21-member commission to study and develop possibilities for local reparations for Black residents of Greenbelt, was not supported in its present form. Opinion was that it was not sufficiently defined as presented and should not move forward without public input. Councilmember Edward Putens moved to place it on a referendum, but Mayor Colin Byrd opposed putting a civil rights matter up for a vote.

Budget Public Hearings

The first of two required public hearings on the 2022 city budget was also held that night, but no residents asked to comment. The second public hearing is scheduled to be held during the May 24 regular meeting after the budget worksessions have been completed. The budget is

Challengers Sweep GHI Board Election in Record Turnout

by Tom Jones

With exceptionally high voter turnout at the 2021 annual Greenbelt Homes Inc. (GHI) election, members voted for generational change on a scale the cooperative hasn't seen in decades. None of the five members of the board of directors elected two years ago will remain in office after Thursday, May 20, when the new board is seated. This is in sharp contrast to recent board elections, which have been uncontested since 2017.

GHI has nine directors, elected to staggered two-year terms: five in odd years and four in even years. Earlier this year, concurrent with completion of GHI's $21 million Homes Improvement Program, three directors announced they were not running again. These included current Vice-President Steve Skolnik and board member Sue Ready, both former presidents. In March 2021, Director Anna Socrates also resigned, effective immediately. After advertising the vacant seat, the board received an application from only one member: Jason Luly, who was appointed to an abbreviated term starting March 18.

Luly was the only one of five incumbent directors re-elected in this year's May 13-14

Chris Haley's Film on Unmarked Slave Graves Has Local Origins

by Kyla Hanington

There didn't seem to be a better place to walk with Chris Haley and to talk about his powerful new film Unmarked than among Greenbelt's own unmarked stones at the historic Turner Cemetery. We met there late one Sunday afternoon to talk about the documentary, which explores the search for the burial places of enslaved people and the critical efforts being made to preserve and to honor those graves. The 40-minute film looks particularly at efforts being made in Virginia as well as at the site of the former Belvoir Plantation in Crownsville, Md.

"How can we forge ahead without remembering that this country enslaved its own people?" the film asks as it reminds us, in the words of Dr. Lynn Rainville, that those people held in slavery "are founders."

"They deserve honor," Reverend Michelle Thomas says in the film. "To honor their burial sites is to honor their lives, is to honor their work and is to honor their immense, foundational contributions," said Thomas.

"There's a perception that slavery was in the Deep South," Haley explained to me as we walked, describing how occasionally people will express surprise to learn there was slavery locally. "It's a misnomer to excuse Maryland from the reality of its history." Standing on the site of the former Turner plantation it was impossible not to feel the heavy weight of Maryland's history.

Letters to the Editor

Get It Straight

The first thing I want to say is I oppose the building of the maglev. When I drove into the city, I was appalled by the banner that appeared. NO BUILD MAGLEV sounds like a 3-year-old. STOP MAGLEV. DON'T build MAGLEV. Lots of ways to communicate this message. Who's going to think this message is serious?

Judith Ott

Editor's Note: "No Build" is one of the alternatives considered in the Draft Environmental Impact Statement for the SCMaglev Project.

Another Postal Story

On April 26 I took our state and federal taxes to the Greenbelt Post Office so I could give them directly to a clerk as there have been so many problems with theft of mail in Greenbelt. Instead of paying $1.50 to mail the tax forms to Annapolis, I paid $7.70 so I could track them. I was told they would arrive in Annapolis the next day. Then, instead of paying $1.90 to mail the federal taxes to Utah, I paid $9.90 so that I could also track that envelope. I was told it would take five days to get there.

Three days later I went online to check the status. The federal taxes arrived in Utah the next day. The Maryland taxes were in transit, "arriving late." On May 12, I went back to the post office to speak to a live person and she checked. They were still at the "plant," whatever that is. She emailed the "plant" and took my contact information and told me if she heard anything she would contact me.

I have not heard anything. As of today, Saturday, May 22, the envelope is still in transit, arriving late. The next week after I mailed my tax envelopes, the News Review wrote an article about postal problems and suggested that people in Greenbelt mail letters in boxes in other locations or go to a post office in another location. I wish I had waited. I am sure this is a problem that others are having with getting their taxes to the correct place too.

scheduled for adoption at the regular council meeting on Monday, June 7.

In addition, the mayor made two presentations at the beginning of the meeting. Charise Liggins, the city economic development coordinator, accepted a proclamation designating May as Small Business Appreciation Week. City Treasurer Bertha Gaymon accepted the Government Finance Officers Association Distinguished Budget Presentation Award for the city. This award is the highest recognition for governmental budgeting.

Goddard Plans

NASA has developed draft master and transportation plans for the Greenbelt campus of Goddard, which were referred to the city by the National Capital Planning Commission (NCPC). The plans cover a 20-year time period and potentially include the demolition, construction and renovation of many buildings, including options for excess buildings and land areas as well as divesting of land and buildings.

Community Planner Molly Porter had prepared a detailed memorandum of comment on the plans, which councilmembers generally supported. Planning Director Terri Hruby said they would develop a letter to the NCPC based on the memorandum and provide it to council in time to meet a May 7 deadline.

Monthly Crime Stats

At Byrd's request, a resolution was introduced for first reading that would require council to hold a public hearing at the first regular meeting of each month to review monthly crime statistics. His goals are to have more complete information available on a frequent basis and to provide an opportunity for public comment.

Councilmember Judith Davis requested that before second reading, councilmembers should receive an estimate on how much staff time the plan would require.

Mandan Basketball Court

The mayor had raised this subject and said he would like to see the rims at the basketball court put back up. Councilmember Emmett Jordan said that while he had concerns, he too would like to see the court open again, with the understanding that, if there were problems, the matter would be taken up promptly. He added that he regretted that this matter had to come to the city council for resolution at all. Other councilmembers who recalled the problems created at the site earlier and the strong opposition from nearby homeowners were less enthused.

Davis stated a list of conditions that should apply if the court were opened again, and she recommended starting gradually with a half court and one rim. She said that when they went through this before, there was to be a sign posted giving rules and the hours the court would be closed and there would be visibility into the area, including no parking along the street in front of the court and a trimming back of the shrubbery. The police would be instructed to cover that area as part of their regular route. If problems arise, quick action will be taken.

After discussion of about an hour, there was a five-to-two vote in favor of going ahead. Putens did not support it because he believes the underlying problem is that this location is simply not appropriate for a basketball court. Councilmember Silke Pope thought there should be more discussion with the nearby residents before making a decision.

Because it was 12:30 a.m., it was agreed that the remaining items on the agenda would be postponed until the next regular meeting. These items included the following: recognition group policy, waiving matching fund requirements for fiscal year 2021 due to the pandemic, minimum wage for city employees and paid family leave for city employees. [See article on May 20 for the write up of these agenda items.]

Have You Seen Birds Munching on Cicadas?

The Maryland Ornithological Society is studying which bird species are foraging on Brood X periodical cicadas for a publication in Maryland Birdlife. Those observing a bird eating a cicada are encouraged to tell the society about it. It is important to be able to identify the species of bird doing the eating. "Little brown bird" isn't enough; the society needs to know chickadee, bald eagle, turkey vulture, etc.

So, Greenbelters who know a robin from a cardinal, a blue jay from a woodpecker, a hawk from a raven are encouraged to participate. A website form is available to record observations at bit.ly/BirdsEatingCicadas. For each individual observation of a bird eating a cicada, there are five short questions to answer; each cicada snack is to be separately recorded. People and dogs eating cicadas don't count. Just birds.

Questions or photos can be emailed to Gabriel Foley at mddebba3@mdbirds.org. If sending photos, indicate whether or not the photos can be used, with credit, in an article summarizing the data for Maryland Birdlife.

Museum Hosts Talk On the North End

On Thursday, June 17 at 7:30 p.m., the Greenbelt Museum will host a talk on The North End: Greenbelt's World War II Community.

When defense housing was built within Greenbelt, the town became divided into two neighborhoods, with two different populations living in two kinds of housing, defense and nondefense. The two neighborhoods bonded through the homefront experiences of World War II and the cooperative nature of Greenbelt's municipal, social and economic institutions. But one section of defense housing, physically and sociologically separate from the planned community, created its own identity and spaces. This area became known as the North End. Volunteer docent Stephen Oetken will lead a virtual stroll through the North End and discuss what made, and continues to make, this area a unique part of Greenbelt's history.

This live virtual lecture is free but advance registration is required to receive the Zoom link. To register, visit eventbrite.com/e/the-north-end-greenbelts-wwii-defense-community-tickets-141478262291.

Free Decluttering Online Workshop

To register and get the Zoom link, visit bit.ly/2R2fzvr.

Donate Sneakers For People in Need

The Board of Congregational Life at Greenbelt Community Church, United Church of Christ (GCC) is collecting athletic shoes by partnering with GotSneakers. GotSneakers has developed a unique program that asks communities to reach into their closets, not their pockets. This sneaker recycling program helps to keep sneakers out of landfills, which has harmful effects on the environment, and will send the sneakers to countries where the poor often go barefoot out of necessity. For more information about GotSneakers, go to their website at GotSneakers.com.

A donation box for sneakers will be placed outside of Fellowship Center, the small building behind the church, for people to drop off sneakers at any time. GotSneakers will pay GCC a varying amount for name-brand and off-brand laced-up sneakers with no tears inside or outside. The company even pays for cleaning and shipping – all GCC does is collect sneakers. "We know that most people have extra sneakers in their closets they would like to donate rather than throw away. An additional incentive is now raising funds to feed the hungry and help the environment. It's a win-win situation for everybody."

Golden Age Club's Schedule for June

The Greenbelt Golden Age group is eagerly awaiting the day when they can meet in person again. History of Emancipation Juneteenth Celebrations

by Lois Rosado

In 1862, the Anglo-African, a Black newspaper published in New York, stated: "It was a fitting celebration of the anniversary of Fort Sumter, that the Congress should pass a bill to emancipate the capital from the thrall of slavery forever. Henceforth, whatever betide the nation, its physical heart is freed from the presence of slavery." Thus began the Emancipation Day celebrations in Washington, D.C., on April 16, 1862, which continue to this day.

The first state to abolish slavery outright was Massachusetts in 1783; Pennsylvania proposed a gradual emancipation process in 1780. Connecticut and Rhode Island also proposed a form of gradual emancipation in 1784, New York in 1799 and New Jersey in 1808. Zephaniah Swift wrote in 1791 that it was the responsibility of the slave owners to prepare slave populations for independence by educating them with academic and religious instruction leading to gradual emancipation (Peter P. Hinks, historian).

Many enslaved people in northern states negotiated for their freedom, escaped or found other means to gain freedom. Many people held in bondage were determined to have liberty. For example, with the help of the Connecticut Society for the Promotion of Freedom, slave owners were sued for manumission through the courts. Such lawsuits were filed in Maryland as well as in other, mostly northern, states. The first emancipation celebrations in northern states occurred in 1808 with the official end of the International Slave Trade. Chattel slavery was finally abolished in northern states in 1848.

After the election of President Abraham Lincoln in November 1860, seven southern states (Alabama, Florida, Georgia, Louisiana, Mississippi, South Carolina and Texas) seceded from the Union and formed the Confederacy. Four more states (Arkansas, North Carolina, Tennessee and Virginia) joined them when the Civil War began with the firing on Fort Sumter on April 12, 1861. A year later, Congress enacted the District of Columbia Compensated Emancipation Act, ending slavery in Washington, D.C. Slave owners were paid for their financial losses. No compensation was ever paid to enslaved people for their labor.

On January 1, 1863, the Emancipation Proclamation was enacted into law. Only those in bondage living in the 11 Southern states that had seceded were declared free. Four border states (Delaware, Kentucky, Maryland and Missouri) remained in the Union, and enslaved people there were not freed. Maryland freed all slaves residing within its borders on November 1, 1864, a year before the 13th Amendment was passed in Congress.

The first Emancipation Day celebration, once the proclamation was decreed, took place in Port Royal, S.C. But 250,000 enslaved people living in Texas did not learn of their liberation until June 19, 1865, two years after the Emancipation Proclamation was issued and two months after the end of the Civil War. The announcement resulted in the celebration of Juneteenth, a term that combines the month of June and the 19th, the date when all African Americans were freed from chattel slavery.

Former Texas slave Felix Haywood exclaimed, "We was all walkin' on golden clouds.... Everybody went wild.... We was free. Just like that, we was free" (from Lone Star Past: Memory and History in Texas). June 19 is considered by many African Americans their Independence Day and, as people migrated from Texas, Juneteenth celebrations migrated with them.

In 1997, Ben Haith, a founder of the National Juneteenth Celebration Foundation, designed a Juneteenth commemoration flag. The star is for Galveston, Texas, where the last enslaved populations were liberated, and represents the Freedom of African Americans in all 50 states. The burst symbolizes new beginnings and the arc in the middle of the flag symbolizes new horizons for African Americans. Colors of the American flag frame these symbols, the color red for the blood spilled by Black people in every war fought by America from its Independence to the present day. This flag is a reminder that enslaved people and their descendants are American citizens. The colors represent the continuous commitment of people in the United States to live up to the ideal of Liberty and Justice for All.

We celebrate Juneteenth as a reminder that the freedom of all U.S. citizens is essential for the survival of American democracy.

REEL AND MEAL - FEATURING THE THIRD HARMONY

June 21 at 7 p.m. via zoom.

The Third Harmony is a 2020 documentary by Michael Nagler, co-founder of the Peace and Conflict Studies Department at U.C. Berkeley. Drawing on interviews with veteran activists like Civil Rights leader Bernard Lafayette, scientists like behaviorist Frans de Waal and neuroscientist Marco Iacoboni, Congresswoman Pramila Jayapal, political scientist Erica Chenoweth, futurist Elisabet Sahtouris, and others, this 44-minute documentary will help the general public, often at a loss to understand the protests occurring in many cities, to better grasp just what nonviolence is and how it works.

in Greenbelt, the city is part of the film's origin story, as the Utopia Film Festival is what brought the two co-directors, Haley and Brad J. Bennett, together.

Haley was approached by Bennett, who had already begun a project in Central Virginia where he is from. Bennett had read about "ill-preserved burial sites and the people bringing back respect to what one would think would be in place, or what should be in place for any place that is a final resting place," Haley explained. Bennett entered a film in the 2017 Utopia Film Festival. Forgive - Don't Forget won that year's Utopian Vision Award. Bennett ultimately invited Haley to join him for his next project, Unmarked. "Really, he gets all the credit for coming up with the idea of it," Haley said of Bennett. "And I've been so happy to be part of it."

How gravesites are cared for and preserved matters. The film clearly shows the inequities between how the graves of those held in slavery have been treated by the cities, towns or institutions where they are located as compared to those that hold the remains of slave-holders and their descendants. To disregard the cemetery is to continue to disrespect the lives of the people who were enslaved and to continue the injustice they experienced. The men and women engaged in efforts to find, reclaim and respect those sites not only honor the dead but find connection to relatives, family stories and meaningful history.

This is a journey that could go on indefinitely. There are hundreds of thousands of such sites and Haley has already heard from people who would like the crew to go deeper with the stories they've highlighted. The film was recently written up in The Guardian, expanding the project's reach, with the filmmakers being asked to tell the stories of other locations in states all over the nation. Funding is necessary for such further work.

Haley and I talked about how, once one starts paying attention, the search for these gravesites and their stories leads everywhere. "I am of the mindset now that because of this movie and because of what it reminded me of ... I go to any place where there is a large plantation, where the person who owned the plantation was a slave-holder ... there's a part of me where my eye starts scanning the ground and I think, 'I wonder where the people who were enslaved here are, I wonder where they are buried.' It's a part of me now."

In addition to the importance of the Utopia Film Festival in bringing the co-directors together, Haley noted that some Greenbelters supported the film and "helped us get to where we are today." These contributions are not small; not long before we walked together, Haley had learned the film had been nominated for an Emmy Award. For more information about this year's Capital Emmys, follow @capitalemmys on Twitter or visit capitalemmys.tv/emmys and tune in on June 26 when winners are announced.

Haley is a man of many accomplishments. He is the director of the Study of the Legacy of Slavery in Maryland at the Maryland State Archives. He

by Amy Hansen

Este artículo está disponible en español en nuestra página web www.greenbeltnewsreview.com.

Sam Brin, brother of Sergey Brin, one of the founders of Google, donated $150,000 to the Eleanor Roosevelt High School (ERHS) Parent Teacher Student Association for the construction of two new outdoor basketball courts. Both Brin brothers attended ERHS after growing up in Greenbelt.

"These outdoor courts are going to help our sports teams at Roosevelt and will also be used for P.E. classes," said Brendan O'Connell, an ERHS social studies teacher and a boys basketball coach. "But one thing that Sam insisted on with this project is that it also be available for community use. There will be two full-court basketball courts available for the community to use after hours as well as some outdoor workout equipment."

O'Connell added that the school did not reach out to Brin - it was Brin who sought out the school. "From what I know, almost all of the projects supported by the Brin family have been initiated by Sam himself. He really has a passion for the school and a desire to help out wherever he can," said O'Connell. The courts are particularly important now, he said. "I think having an outdoor space for kids to play is even more important considering the current pandemic."

Work is underway on new outdoor basketball courts at Eleanor Roosevelt High School, funded by a donation from alumnus Sam Brin. The paving should be completed in May.

Council Ponders Bond Sale To Fund Capital Projects

by Diane Oberg

On Monday, May 17, in addition to holding the first final budget worksession, the Greenbelt City Council met with the city's financial advisor regarding the financial policies that Greenbelt might want to adopt to improve its chances of getting a good bond rating if council decides to sell bonds to finance any major project. The advisors were upbeat about the city's chances for a good rating and a successful bond sale.

In an earlier meeting, First Vice President Jennifer Diercksen and Senior Vice President Joe Mason of Davenport & Company, LLC, advised council that the city's financial situation was healthy. They said that the city has the opportunity of using bond financing instead of bank financing for projects such as major maintenance of its aging infrastructure on a pay-as-you-go basis. They advised that this should result in a lower interest rate than the city could obtain by seeking bank financing. The company feels that the city could obtain a credit rating of at least Aa3 from Moody's, which would place it on the lowest step of the "very strong" tier of ratings from that agency.

At the budget worksession, Diercksen told council that rating agencies now pay more attention than in the past to municipalities' financial policies and urged council to formally adopt four policies. These include maintaining a fund balance of at least 17 to 20 percent of operating revenues, along with a policy for replenishing the reserves within three years, if reserves should drop below that level. The proposed budget showed reserves of 17.8 percent of expenditures but that is likely to change in the adopted budget due to an unexpected increase in the city worker's compensation insurance premium and possible council changes to the budget. The city once had a goal of maintaining reserves of 10 percent of expenditures but had been increasing its desired reserves and has maintained reserves of 15 to 22 percent in recent years.

Diercksen recommends that the city adopt policies in three additional areas: 1) the city's debt versus assessed value should not exceed 3 percent, 2) debt service should not account for more than 10 percent of expenditures, and 3) the city's fixed costs should remain under 20 percent of expenditures. She noted, however, that the city could adjust these targets slightly based upon its final plan of finance.

New Metrics

Debt versus assessed value addresses whether the city can borrow more than it does currently by comparing the indebtedness of the city to its tax base. The city currently has no policy addressing this metric.

Debt service as a percent of expenditures measures debt affordability and addresses whether the city can afford the payments. Again, the city has no current policy although its debt is currently well below the typical ceiling of 10 percent, Diercksen said.

Fixed cost burden is a new metric that measures financial flexibility, Diercksen noted. It compares the city's pension and other post-employment benefits to total expenditures. She said that the 20 percent threshold she is recommending is what the rating agencies typically measure municipalities against.

How Much?

The metrics give inconsistent guidance as to how much the city could borrow. Although the debt-to-assessed-value policy would allow the city to issue up to approximately $63 million in bonds as early as this fiscal year, the debt-service-versus-expenditures policy would limit borrowing to $25 million this fiscal year and $37 million more over the next decade, particularly when existing debt service drops in Fiscal Year 2027.

Next Steps

Diercksen laid out an aggressive schedule that would allow the city to hold a bond referendum in conjunction with the November election and to complete the bond sale before the end of the calendar year. The first steps are for the city to develop a comprehensive, prioritized list of capital projects that it wants to fund and to formally adopt the recommended policies. Davenport would then use that list to provide council and staff with funding options that comply with the recommended policies. The schedule includes three town hall meetings on the referendum to receive citizen comments and questions.

Council Discussion

There are clearly things council will need to work out. Councilmember Rodney Roberts was leery of borrowing and questioned why Davenport concluded that the city is in wonderful shape when its expenditures are just $1,000 less than revenues (in the proposed budget). He also opposed rushing to a bond sale. The city needs to take the time to get reliable information on how much projects would cost, noting that there had been large overruns in the past.

Councilmember Emmett Jordan expressed discomfort for the timing of the borrowing while Councilmember Leta Mach embraced the idea as a source of funding for renovating the former National Guard armory for city use. Councilmember Judith Davis questioned whether council could come up with a prioritized list by the end of June and doubted that the city would be ready for a bond referendum this year. Mason indicated the list could be delayed until the end of August. If the city did not go to the voters in November, it would either need to wait two more years for the next city election or foot the costs of a separate referendum.

At that point, council turned its attention to its first attempt at finalizing the FY22 budget.

Bike-to-Work Riders Pedal Through Center

Seventy-seven cyclists pedaled up to the table for Greenbelt's ninth annual Bike-to-Work Day on Friday, May 21, even though they weren't all going to an office. Many were biking for exercise and would go back home for work but were happy to join in the biker love.

Di Quynn Reno, who coordinated the event for the city, said participants rode through and collected snacks, dental kits, sanitizer, a free cup of coffee coupon, a free yoga class pass and bike bells. "The bikers expressed their appreciation and look forward to next year when they can stick around longer at the event. We adjusted this year to a grab 'n go only," she said.

This was the 20th anniversary of the regional event and ninth year for Greenbelt's participation. Sponsors were Anacostia Trails Heritage Area, Bee Yoga Fusion, Greenbelt Co-op Supermarket & Pharmacy, McCarl Dental Group and Greenbelt Homes Inc.

annual election. Four newcomers also swept to victory: Denna Lambert, Heather Mortimer, Erin Bilyeu and Christopher Carbone. Among these, Carbone is the only one with elected experience in GHI, completing a seven-month term on the Audit Committee. Long-standing board incumbents Chuck Hess and Bill Jones came in sixth and seventh place and were not re-elected.

The Audit Committee race was uncontested, with three candidates for three positions: elected were incumbent Sam Lee and newcomers Dale Wilding and David Benack.

The vote count was exceptionally high, 60 percent higher than 2020's election, and more than twice the average of the prior five years in-person paper-ballot elections.

The five members of the Nominations & Elections Committee (N&E) were also elected by acclamation during the May 13 annual meeting, which the bylaws permit in an uncontested race. Re-elected were Dan Gilotte, Theresa Henderson, Tom Jones and Luisa Robles, while newcomer Joe Ralbovsky filled the position of outgoing member Mary Salemme.

Similar to last year's pandemic-delayed October meeting, this year's event was a hybrid. Members were offered the choice of an online meeting hosted by GetQuorum or joining the same event in person at the Youth Center. According to GetQuorum, 323 Zoom participants joined online (although some households had more than one participant for one membership) while merely 11 members attended in person at the Youth Center, including two board members and two N&E members.

The first item of business facing the new board was election of officers among the new directors. Current President Stefan Brodd and Secretary Ed James were re-elected to those positions. New board member Denna Lambert is vice-president, and Jason Luly is the new treasurer.

To ensure newcomers are maximally successful at directing the 1,600-member corporation (with an annual budget of $13 million as it saves for future projects costing $43 million), GHI provides annual training for board members in roles, responsibilities and effective communication.

Tom Jones is chair of GHI's Nominations & Elections Committee.

Fraud

In four separate incidents, letters containing a check were posted in U.S. Postal Service mailboxes and unknown person(s) gained possession of the checks, changed the amount and payee information and attempted to or did deposit them. One incident occurred on April 25 at the mailbox at 101 Greenhill Road; the other three occurred at the mailbox near Ridge Road and Plateau Place, one on May 9 and the other two reported on May 14 and May 17.

Theft

May 14, 2:02 p.m., 9336 Edmonston Road. A package was taken from the front stoop of a residence.

May 14, 3:23 a.m., 8000 block Greenbury Drive. A man who met a food delivery person outside to pick up his order left his wallet on the hood of his car. Surveillance footage revealed that the woman who delivered the food took the wallet and left in an unknown vehicle.

May 17, 2:31 p.m., 6000 Greenbelt Road. An employee at Diamond Jewelers reported that a man walked up to the kiosk, pulled out a hammer and broke the glass display case. He then removed gold necklaces and fled on foot.

Burglary

May 14, 4:36 a.m., 5900 Greenbelt Road. An employee at Dunkin Donuts reported that a man used a rock to force entry into the store and attempted to steal money from the register. Upon discovering there was no money in it, he fled.

Vandalism

May 19, 1:28 p.m., 5811 Cherrywood Terrace. A rock was used to break out the bedroom window of a residence.

Vehicle Crime

Two vehicles were recovered.

One is a 2007 Acura MDX reported stolen March 13 from the 9100 block Springhill Lane, recovered May 13 by Metropolitan police at an undisclosed location. The tags on it at the time of theft, Maryland 12678CJ, were not recovered and are still out as stolen.

A 2017 Hyundai Elantra reported stolen May 6 from 6114 Breezewood Drive was recovered by Seat Pleasant police in the 6200 block Central Avenue.

Rear tag Maryland 8EG9950 was taken May 19 from 7200 Morrison Drive.

A large spool of copper wire was taken from the bed of a pickup truck at 5807 Cherrywood Lane on May 16.

A rock was used to break out a right rear window at 5807 Cherrywood Lane on May 19. The vehicle was rummaged through but it is unknown if anything was taken.

A witness at 9135 Edmonston Terrace saw a man enter a possibly unlocked vehicle and rummage through it but nothing appeared to have been taken. The man fled when the witness yelled at him.

Mailbox Thefts Continue

The Police Department continues to receive reports of mailed checks being stolen, altered in amount and cashed by unknown suspects. The Postmaster has been made aware of the situation. As detectives continue to investigate these incidents, the Police Department recommends that people refrain from using the outdoor blue mailboxes and instead either take mail to a postal facility or consider paying bills online, if possible.

The Department is offering a reward of up to $1,000 for information leading to the arrest and conviction of a suspect in any of the unsolved crimes reported in the blotter.

Marshall’s report concludes that, “the DEIS overestimates travel time savings and reliability benefits by a factor of five or more. Three quarters of the purported economic benefits of SCMaglev are travel time and reliability benefits and these are overestimated by a factor of 15 or more.... The other significant economic benefits calculations in the DEIS rest both on inflated ridership and on unreliable vehicle miles traveled (VMT) multipliers.”

Further, the DEIS does not address who will pay the billions of dollars needed to construct the project and does not demonstrate that operating and maintenance costs will be offset by revenues, leading to unanswered questions regarding the financial viability of the project and the possible need for public subsidies.

The theme of deficient or hidden information runs throughout the DEIS. The review also found that the DEIS relies on limited geological information to evaluate the proposed routes, even though tunnel location and design is dependent on that information, and fails to explain how and why the FRA eliminated other routes – which may have been safer or better suited to the project – from consideration early in the NEPA process.

These issues are in addition to the toll the project would have on the natural environment, which has been well-documented by local jurisdictions and advocacy groups, including the Maryland Coalition for Responsible Transit, the National Parks Conservation Association and the Chesapeake Bay Foundation.

As Mayor Colin Byrd summed up: “The project would harm human health and the environment, destroy parkland, adversely affect the true public transit options that serve the area, and generally reduce the quality of life of Greenbelt ... and other Prince George’s County residents. These negative impacts would disproportionately fall on environmental justice communities along the proposed routes, while the project would provide benefits to only a small minority of people who are wealthy enough to afford the high fares and fortunate enough to live near one of its stations, of which there are only three.”

The inaccurate information and inflated benefits portrayed in the DEIS – as well as the information entirely hidden from public view – has added fuel to years-long local opposition to the SCMaglev Project. In their letter to the FRA, Greenbelt, College Park and Landover Hills voice staunch opposition to the SCMaglev and request that the agency halt its consideration and stop wasting taxpayer dollars on this harmful and unnecessary project.

Greenbelt submitted the results of the review to the FRA and the Maryland Department of Transportation on the day the public comment period ended. The comments were also sent to U.S. Secretary of Transportation Pete Buttigieg, Governor Larry Hogan, U.S. Senators Ben Cardin and Chris Van Hollen, and U.S. Representative Steny Hoyer, as well as state and local officials. The full comments and associated materials, including the cover letter and attachments, can be found at greenbeltmd.gov/maglev.

Frank Gervasi and other Stop the Maglev supporters at the Farmers Market on May 23 display an approximately 1:12 scale model of one of the maglev towers that would dot the Greenbelt landscape if the maglev project becomes reality.

IT WAS A "NEW DEAL" EXPERIMENT IN COMMUNITY PLANNING OF HOUSING FOR URBAN PLANNERS THROUGHOUT THE WORLD. THE 885 ORIGINAL HOMES WERE BUILT IN A SERIES OF CLUSTERS, JOINED BY INTERIOR WALKS AND CIRCLING CENTRAL BUSINESS, CIVIC AND RECREATION FACILITIES. GREENBELT WAS INCORPORATED JUNE 1, 1937 AS THE FIRST MARYLAND CITY WITH COUNCIL - MANAGER GOVERNMENT. IN 1952 THE RESIDENTS OF THE COMMUNITY FORMED A COOPERATIVE AND PURCHASED MOST OF THE GOVERNMENT BUILT HOUSES. Greenbelt Babe Ruth Teams Back in Action

by Ian Gleason

Greenbelt Babe Ruth returned to action on Thursday, May 20 after a year-long hiatus due to Covid-19. Thursday evening was a quintessential May evening as the 15U team took the field against the Woodridge Warriors out of Washington, D.C. While the evening ended in an 11-6 loss for Greenbelt, it showed much promise for the future, both on the baseball field and as a hope for return to normalcy. The 15U team has a strong core of players and welcomes former players Eli Klopp, Eric Weaver and Josue Bonilla to the coaching staff. The 18U team begins their season this week as well.

Both teams will be participating in the Maryland Stars and Strikes Tournament in Howard County over the Memorial Day Weekend and then will return to league play with many games slated for Braden Field beginning the first week of June.

Greenbelt Recreation Arts Hosts Studio Tour, June 6

by Nicole DeWald and Anne Gardner

Greenbelt Recreation Arts will sponsor a Virtual Open Studio Tour on Sunday, June 6 from 1 to 4 p.m. Guests are invited to chat online with Greenbelt-affiliated visual artists during 10- to 15-minute studio visits live on Instagram. Participating artists include seven of the Community Center artists in residence: Karen Arrington (pottery, including wood-fired pieces), Chris Corson (ceramic sculpture), Rachel Cross (mixed media), Gina Denn (pottery and ceramic sculpture), Mary Gawlik (ceramic art tile), Kathy Karlson (painting) and Racquel Keller (painting and mixed media).

Additional community artists participating include Barbara JoAnn Combs (painting and printmaking), Celestine Ranney-Howes (art quilts), Daria Parsa (painting and drawing), Tom Baker (ceramic sculpture, painting and mixed media) and Amanda Demos Larsen (figurative painting). Several artists are offering online shopping opportunities and some also accept commissions. The complete schedule and access information will be posted on June 4 on the Greenbelt Virtual Recreation Center at greenbeltmd.gov/recreation. To participate, guests will need an Instagram account, available for free at instagram.com.

The host artists' presentations will highlight various aspects of the creative process, and guests can enjoy insights into the artists' inspiration and driving sense of purpose. For example, Corson uses the human figure to explore emotion. He will talk about a series of ceramic reliefs called Becoming in which heads and hands emerge from pit-fired panels. Combs creates abstract artwork to work out her feelings, responses and actions. She explains, "My four sons have me on a text thread and we discuss the pandemic and reoccurring social justice issues. It's exhausting! Creating this artwork gave me time to reflect." Her series Elements focuses on texture and vivid colors, using leftover paints on canvas as the base and a painting knife, large plastic comb and gift cards for the texture.

Guests can preview examples of the participating artists' work in an online exhibition. The exhibit will open on Friday, June 4. Viewers can enter through the Open Studio Tour page launching the same day at greenbeltmd.gov/recreation.

Virtual Open Studio Tours are among the ways that Greenbelt Recreation Arts has been striving to support a vibrant and mutually enriching creative community throughout the pandemic. As Combs suggests, "Let peace and curiosity lead." For more information about the spring 2021 tour, email ndewald@greenbeltmd.gov. For information about upcoming arts programs, see the Greenbelt Recreation Summer Activity Guide available at greenbeltmd.gov/recreation and sign up for the Artfans e-newsletter at greenbeltmd.gov.

Arts programs of the City of Greenbelt are supported in part by the Maryland State Arts Council.

Dancers Present First Live Recital Since Before Covid-19

by Lesley Kash

On May 22 and 23 in the Dance Garden outside the north-east side of the Community Center, the Spring Performance Club offered Greenbelt's first live dance recital since Covid-19 struck. Angella Foster, director of Studio Dance Programs, proudly presented her student dancers ages 6 through teen who performed ballet, tap and other innovative selections. Foster's choreography, inspired by American masters such as Alvin Ailey and Jerome Robbins, was accompanied by iconic American music. The theme America the Beautiful celebrated the resilience and generous service demonstrated by people across the nation throughout this difficult period.
