School Boundary Changes Will Affect Greenbelt Students

by Amy Hansen

Este artículo está disponible en español en nuestra página web www.greenbeltnewsreview.com.

On May 27, Prince George's County Public Schools (PGCPS) released the interim report for the system's Comprehensive School Boundary Initiative. The report presents the findings from the first phase of data analysis and community engagement, including three draft plans and maps depicting potential future boundaries that are expected to be phased in for the 2022–2023 school year.

While many Greenbelt students will remain in the schools they are currently in, there are some significant changes being proposed. Depending on exactly where they live, students living in Franklin Park might move from Springhill Lake Elementary to Greenbelt Elementary and from Eleanor Roosevelt High School (ERHS) to Parkdale High School.

Students in Greenbelt Station might move from ERHS to High Point High School. Those on Hanover Parkway near Schrom Hills Park might move from

by Diane Oberg

It was not always pretty but the Greenbelt City Council appeared to be nearing a consensus on how to balance the Fiscal Year 2022 budget at the second final budget worksession on May 26. It appears that a proposal by Councilmember Judith Davis will be the basis for approval, although her colleagues may make additional additions or reductions to her proposal at the meeting. Mayor Colin Byrd stated that he would “almost certainly” vote against the budget unless it included the director of race and gender equity that he had proposed late in the first final budget worksession on May 17. This position is not included in Davis' proposal.

Davis proposed using reserve funds equivalent to 0.76 percent of total expenditures, along with the $42,000 reduction in the pension estimate for Information Technology to pay for the $200,000 increase in the city workers' compensation premium, $60,000 for a space study, $3,600 for an intern for economic development (for 12 weeks), $4,500 to expand the tile floor project at the Aquatic & Fitness Center,

George Mathews, Community Liaison, Will Retire in June

by Julie Rapp

George Mathews, the Greenbelt Police Department community relations liaison, is retiring June 18 after eight years in this position and a total of 42 years in law enforcement. Mathews started his career for the City of Hyattsville as a dispatcher and then as a police officer. Mathews related that he wanted to become an officer after befriending many of the Hyattsville officers while working as a dispatcher.

“I would ride with many of these officers in their cruisers after my shift was over and I witnessed many officers going that extra mile to help people,” stated Mathews. “I liked the idea it doesn't take much to make someone's day.”

After his training, Mathews worked as a police officer for

Letters to the Editor

Intercepted Mail

On Monday, May 17, I realized I had a problem when my credit card was not accepted at Staples. Upon checking my bank statement, I determined that there were six checks that should have reached their destinations but didn't, including the most recent payment for my credit card. None of those checks have been deposited; they simply disappeared. Further investigation revealed that there were six other letters I mailed that never reached their intended recipients. All 12 items were mailed via a neighborhood postal box. I called the Greenbelt Police and also filed a problem report with the USPS Inspection Service.

Following the advice in the Greenbelt News Review, I no longer deposit any of my mail in a neighborhood postal box; I drive to the post office and mail my letters inside. Also, my credit card payments are now made electronically.

Masks Up?

The CDC has relaxed masking recommendations for the vaccinated since April. While our city council has had plenty of high-priority business to address, it is high time to reconsider the need for a mask-wearing mandate, at least in non-crowded outdoor settings.

It appears that the majority of Greenbelters no longer wear masks outdoors, except where the behavior is explicitly monitored, such as at the Farmers Market. Before the epidemiologists' guidance changed, most of us did mask.

A safety imperative can make it worthwhile to stand by rules that much of the public does not support. Is this policy still important to the health of Greenbelt or is it time for tweaks? Some vulnerable citizens' bodies are unable to develop Covid-19 antibodies, but how much does a "Masks Up" sign protect those neighbors? For that matter, is "Masks Up" intended to convey something different than the former signs?

Maintaining a frequently ignored policy without at least a public dialogue by our representatives seems unwise.

Greenbelt ES Student Scores In "If I Were Mayor" Contest

by Kathleen Gallagher

Every year the Maryland Municipal League sponsors an essay contest for fourth-graders throughout the state. It attracts thousands of entries, and among the winners this year is Eleanor Cooper, a student at Greenbelt Elementary School, who was named as a Runner-Up for District 9, which includes Prince George's County.

SCREENSHOT BY BEVERLY PALAU

Eleanor Cooper, a 4th grader at Greenbelt Elementary School, would stop the maglev if she were mayor.

In a normal year, a Greenbelt student with a successful essay would be able to come to a city council meeting, gavel the meeting to order and otherwise assist Greenbelt's elected mayor, but because of the pandemic, Eleanor attended via Zoom.

Contest entries are required to open with the words, "If I were mayor, I would ..." and continue to display knowledge about municipal government and the role of a mayor. Eleanor did just that when invited by Mayor Colin Byrd to read her essay. Her topic involved what a mayor could do to educate residents about matters that are critical to the city.

Eleanor focused on the maglev train, to which she is opposed. She enumerated city departments that could play a role and said she would meet with other city organizations, as well as attend Zoom meetings at Greenbelt schools to discuss it. Her overall goal would be for residents to work together to try to change maglev's course.

As mayor, however, Eleanor said she would listen to all opinions and try to understand all points of view. She thinks that because of its speed, maglev might be useful if it took another route in a different place. She would do whatever she could, working with her community to alter the proposed route. As planned, she believes the maglev would destroy animal habitats and do significant damage to the Greenbelt Forest Preserve.

Byrd congratulated Eleanor on her work. He added that he is enthusiastic about her ideas, and he promised to follow up on some of them.

Essay by Eleanor Cooper, Greenbelt Elementary School

If I were the mayor, I would help raise awareness about the maglev train going through our neighborhood. I would make sure people know about its route by putting up virtual posters that show the current route on local websites and by putting up real posters in community locations where people are most likely to see them. This would help to alert the people of my community that the maglev's current route is going to run through Greenbelt's Forest Preserve.

I can host Zoom meetings with people like the police department, public works department, and other Greenbelt organizations to inform them of the maglev. I would ask them to help spread awareness so more people would know about the issue. I could also visit the Zoom meetings of some classes of Greenbelt schools to discuss it. Then we could all work together to try to change the maglev's course.

I think the maglev shouldn't run through our Forest Preserve because it would destroy a lot of animals' habitats. It would also go through a lot of the paths that run through the Forest Preserve so people could not enjoy those paths. I would listen to both sides of this problem so I can see how people would like the maglev. It can travel at amazing speeds and take you places in a very short amount of time.

I think the maglev could be useful if it went on another course. If it followed the current course, I would do everything I could do, with the help of my community, to alter it. The Forest Preserve is too important to Greenbelt for it to be destroyed.

Donate Sneakers For People in Need

The Board of Congregational Life at Greenbelt Community Church, United Church of Christ (GCC) is collecting athletic shoes by partnering with GotSneakers. This sneaker recycling program helps to keep sneakers out of landfills, which has harmful effects on the environment, and will send the sneakers to countries where the poor often go barefoot out of necessity. For more information about GotSneakers, go to their website at GotSneakers.com.

A donation box for sneakers will be placed outside of Fellowship Center, the small building behind the church, for people to drop off sneakers at any time. GotSneakers will pay GCC a varying amount for name-brand and off-brand laced-up sneakers with no tears inside or outside. The company even pays for cleaning and shipping – all GCC does is collect sneakers.

Museum Hosts Talk On the North End

On Thursday, June 17 at 7:30 p.m., the Greenbelt Museum will host a talk on The North End: Greenbelt's World War II Community.

When defense housing was built within Greenbelt, the town became divided into two neighborhoods, with two different populations living in two kinds of housing, defense and nondefense. The two neighborhoods bonded through the homefront experiences of World War II and the cooperative nature of Greenbelt's municipal, social and economic institutions. But one section of defense housing, physically and sociologically separate from the planned community, created its own identity and spaces. This area became known as the North End. Volunteer docent Stephen Oetken will lead a virtual stroll through the North End and discuss what made, and continues to make, this area a unique part of Greenbelt's history.

This live virtual lecture is free but advance registration is required to receive the Zoom link. To register, visit eventbrite.com/e/the-north-end-greenbelts-wwii-defense-community-tickets-141478262291.

GCAN Zoom: Jobs Plan, Energy

The Greenbelt Climate Action Network will meet via Zoom on Wednesday, June 9 from 7 to 9 p.m. (Zoom link at chears.org/gcan).

Jorge Aguilar from Food & Water Watch and Jamie DeMarco from Chesapeake Climate Action Network will be discussing the American Jobs Plan and the Clean Energy Standard and the likelihood that either of these proposals can become law, given our current Congress.

Some of the questions for discussion are:

1. Are either 50 percent by 2030 or 100 percent by 2035 reasonable greenhouse gas reduction goals for the Clean Energy Standard?

2. How does the Clean Energy Standard compare to the Renewable Electricity Standard, a more stringent proposal that removes natural gas, nuclear, biofuels, offsets, etc.?

3. What is the possibility that Congress will remove all mention of green infrastructure (green jobs and renewable energy) from the American Jobs Plan to satisfy the more conservative base?

There will be plenty of time for participants to discuss these and other issues with Jorge and Jamie after their presentations.

St. Hugh Food Pantry Feeds 50 Families a Week

by Mary Ann Tretler

The St. Hugh Food Pantry continues to provide food bags to 50 families a week. In addition to the food bags there has been a continued need for “kid bags.” These bags were started several summers ago to help families with children at home who needed extra food to make up for the children not getting meals at school. Families, particularly during the pandemic, have needed this supplemental kid-friendly food (mac and cheese, canned pasta, canned fruit, snacks). Families coming to the pantry report how helpful it is to get the extra food for their children.

In coordination with RUAK/ Porch Project (Robert Goldberg-Strassler), Franklin Park management staff (Donna Wilson, Denise Knight) and the St. Hugh Ladies of Charity, the food pantry has been able to expand to an onsite monthly food distribution. Franklin Park staff identified 30 families who need to receive food bags at the management office. RUAK also provided onsite children’s books to be given out with the food. This project started in March of this year.

Even though all of the food pantry families have returned to work, they are still struggling to get full-time hours. Many of them work in retail and their hours vary from week to week. They are all also trying to get caught up with back payments owed for rent and utilities. Many are waiting on responses to applications they have made for county rent assistance related to earlier pandemic job losses.

The St. Hugh Food Pantry continues to provide, as donations allow, grocery store gift cards to help families purchase perishable food items such as milk, eggs, fresh produce and meat. The pantry feels fortunate to have in Greenbelt a generous neighbor, Bob Rand, who continues to bring fresh fruit from the Greenbelt Co-op Supermarket on Tuesdays and Thursdays for pantry families. The St. Hugh Food Pantry works with Carol Drees of GIVES to provide 13 bags of food along with fresh produce on a monthly basis to Greenbelters who are homebound. St. Hugh Church also sponsors a Catholic Charities SHARE Food program. Parishioners purchase SHARE food packages (fresh produce, meat/fish) that are distributed to food pantry families in the St. Hugh School parking lot once a month.

The need to assist families with food supplementation continues as we gradually get back to normal times. As always the church is grateful to their partner of many years, the Greenbelt Co-op Supermarket and its staff, for sponsoring the $5 Co-op donation food bags. The St. Hugh Food Pantry would not be able to manage without the support and the generosity of the store patrons who purchase the bags. St. Hugh’s volunteers pick up between 120 to 140 bags a week.

Obituaries

Phyllis Cook

Longtime resident of Windsor Green, Phyllis Jean Cook, 87, died at her home on May 19, 2021. Known as Jean to family and friends, she was born July 6, 1933, in Bellwood, Pa., to Felice and Laura (Pedro) Cristillo. The fourth of six children, she grew up in a close-knit Italian family. She graduated from Altoona High School in 1953 and during senior year met her future husband, John Franklin Cook of Duncansville, Pa. They married on January 11, 1958, and settled in Maryland in 1966.

Known as Nana to her grandchildren, Jean enjoyed cooking and baking with her husband and sisters. Her Italian dishes were joyfully anticipated at family gatherings and holidays, especially her Italian cookies at Christmas, macaroni salad in summer and her pasta all year round.

Phyllis Jean Cook

She loved reading mysteries, gardening and cheering on the local Washington sports teams, especially the Nationals, Capitals and her favorites, the Washington Football Team and the University of Maryland Terrapins basketball team. Of course, she still kept an eye on the Pittsburgh Steelers. In recent years, her strength and devotion was focused on caring for her ailing husband, John. As day-to-day caregiver and best friend, she dedicated herself to taking care of him without hesitation.

Jean is survived by her husband John; a son, James Cook and his wife, Susan, and daughters Alexandra and Jennifer of Glenelg; and her daughter, Laura Ann Moleski and husband Walt, and their daughter Gabrielle and son Ryan of Laurel. She will also be missed by members of her extended family in Maryland and Pennsylvania.

Services will be held in Bowie on June 1 and 2. Jean will then make her final trip home to Altoona, Pa., where her life will be celebrated on June 3 with a Catholic service and interment.

ERHS Class of 2021 Graduates In Outdoor Ceremony, May 28

by Kyla Hanington

The Eleanor Roosevelt High School (ERHS) Class of 2021 graduated on Friday, May 28 with a brief ceremony held at Capital One Field, Maryland Stadium at the University of Maryland, College Park. Principal Reginald McNeill congratulated the graduates, acknowledged the many members of the class who had achieved a 4.0 grade point average and thanked teachers, parents and all who had supported the graduates in their endeavors.

The ceremony was shorter than previous years, notable for its lack of long speeches and acknowledgment of various elected officials, as none were in attendance. This well-choreographed ceremony was mindful of everyone's time while still marking the achievement of the graduates with solemnity and celebration. Appropriate safety measures were taken in terms of social distancing with designated seats for graduates and guests spaced well apart and required mask wearing. Decision-makers had to keep a watchful eye on threatening weather, which fortunately held off until the ceremony was long over.

Magnolia Elementary to Robert Frost Elementary and from Greenbelt Middle School to either Thomas Jefferson or Charles Carroll Middle.

PGCPS reported that the approaches are based on the school system's priorities, community feedback and original analysis conducted by a consultant team. The report explores school capacity and utilization, distance traveled to school and facility condition in addition to recent boundary changes and the possible impact on specialty programs and services.

"We do not take lightly the potential impact of a change in school boundaries on our students and families," said Chief Executive Officer Monica Goldson. "But many schools are over capacity, while others are under capacity or need revitalization. Given the expected increase in utilization and growth challenges, adjusting school boundaries now will help to provide all students with the educational experiences they deserve."

The report has an interactive tool that offers three different approaches to boundary changes. After putting in an address, the user sees the existing assigned schools and three new scenarios. Scenario One puts the most importance on minimizing changes. Scenario Two emphasizes improving school utilization. Scenario Three focuses on improving facility conditions by moving more students to updated facilities.

Following public input throughout the spring and summer, a second round of community engagement activities will take place in the fall. The Boundary Initiative will conclude by February 2022 with recommended boundary changes offered by the CEO to the Prince George's County Board of Education for their approval. Potential boundary changes will be phased in starting with the 2022-2023 school year.

For more information, visit the Boundary Initiative website at pgcps.org/boundary.

ERHS Graduate Nathan Addai Wins David Craig Scholarship

The David Craig Memorial Scholarship Foundation (DCMSF) announced on Monday, May 10 its selection of Nathan Addai of Bowie as its 2021 recipient of the newly raised $12,000 award. This year's Eleanor Roosevelt High School (ERHS) graduate will be enrolling at Anne Arundel Community College (AACC) this fall to study computer science.

In his four years at ERHS, Addai involved himself in many activities and courses of study. He was a member of the Track and Field Team; treasurer of the Black Student Union, organizing community events such as food drives and discussions of racism in America; mentor in the Science and Technology Mentoring Society, including serving as advisor to the class of 2024; a member of the National Honor Society and the Science National Honor Society; and first chair in the Concert Band.

Addai also participated in many activities outside of his school including being active in his church and volunteering at the Prince George's County Animal Services Facility.

Addai's leadership, interpersonal skills and kindness are beyond his years and he is well-respected by his classmates, as well as all those who have had the pleasure of teaching him.

Quotes from those who know him are filled with praise: "I have witnessed his commitment to excellence in his academic coursework as well as his positive outlook on education." "Thoughtful, engaged, willing to take risks – these qualities have defined Nathan Addai's two years in my class." "If you saw Nathan's genuine grin – a smile, cheek to cheek – you too would feel the warmth of a classroom community punctuated by Nathan's presence." "He works hard in everything he does and never settles for less than his best."

"Students begin the Science and Technology Program in the ninth grade and conclude their experience with an original research project and senior thesis. Nathan's research explores lightning through the Western Hemisphere, monitored through an instrument called the Geostationary Lightning Mapper. He is building a website that will allow users to query data from this tool."

Addai has flourished throughout his four years in high school, maintaining a 4.104 GPA with a rigorous course load. In a year of chaos, calamity and closed schools, he has excelled beyond expectation in his virtual classroom and provisional and make-shift community.

In the words of Chief of Animal Services Rodney C. Taylor, "This young man values and gives his time and commitment to the four-legged homeless ones who depend on us to survive. Nathan demonstrates his passion for activism by challenging established social norms and exposing his personal experiences, by leading discussion, with unjust racial practices."

With an interest in computer science and willingness to work, his goals to please his mom and determine his own future are beginning to take shape. The DCMSF is proud to assist Addai as he moves on from ERHS to AACC.

Greenbelters Have History Of Juneteenth Participation

by Leeann Irwin

Residents of Greenbelt have celebrated and commemorated Juneteenth over a number of years and in different parts of the country. Participants and friends of the Greenbelt Black History and Culture Committee enthusiastically shared some memories.

Locally, a short time after the 1968 urban riots in Washington, D.C., a group of African American IBM staff organized a Juneteenth fundraiser. Mel Black participated in the Good Foot Dance that raised money to buy shoes for urban African American youth. Leigh Ryan has attended the county festivities at Watkins Park. She presented and participated in the annual African American Genealogy and History Society all-day workshops.

Regina Small has attended many events including celebrations at the Strathmore Mansion with jazz and other music, sponsored by her sorority, the Potomac Valley Alumnae Chapter of Delta Sigma Theta. These concerts went on from 2007 to 2015 with over 100 participants and a reception where everyone dressed all in white. In 2018 Small joined about 70 people at a 70s dance fundraiser. Participants danced, played trivia and sought prizes for the best dressed male and female at a local party room in Bowie. The event was hosted by the D.C. Metro Chapter of the Langston University National Alumni Association to raise scholarships for college-bound students.

About five years ago, Lois Rosado went to an Afro-centric church in Washington where the African Diaspora Ancestral Commemoration Institute held a Juneteenth ancestry service with about 55 people. The program was an uplifting event that included poetry readings, prayers, historical presentations and drumming and many African ritual activities.

Carol Malveaux stated that she went to school in Dallas and "we did not celebrate Juneteenth." Katie Pugliese commented that "I am sad to say that I only learned about Juneteenth in the last few years."

Leeann Irwin has participated in celebrations on both coasts. In 1986 she enjoyed a cultural program that included a puppet show and musical performances at a San Diego city park. Around 1990, after taking a workshop with world-renowned Yoruba drummer Baba Olantunji, participants performed on stage as part of an all-day celebration in Buffalo. As a white woman, Irwin had mixed feelings about performing at a Juneteenth event, wondering if her being on stage was respectful or privileged.

Some 30 years ago in Brooklyn, Rosado was at Coney Island overlooking the Atlantic Ocean with about 35 people. "There was a libation, prayers thanking the ancestors for their sacrifice and resilience, a moment of silence, drumming and dancing. In the end we threw the flowers we were asked to bring in the ocean as a commemoration."

We hope Greenbelters will join us in our local and varied events. As Small put it: "Participating in any Juneteenth celebration always warms my heart with positive affirmations and fills with me great pride in celebrating Freedom Day or Emancipation Day. A day that should never be forgotten."

Bridging Communities Vigil Draws 100 to Greenbelt Center

On Tuesday, May 25, at 6:30 p.m. approximately 100 people gathered peaceably on the lawn in front of the Community Center to mark the anniversary of George Floyd's death and the many others who have been injured or killed by police or vigilantes.

The event, called "Bridging Communities to Stop the Violence," was sponsored by Greenbelt Racial Equity Alliance and attended by people from all parts of Greenbelt, including Mayor Colin Byrd and Police Chief Richard Bowers.

After a brief program, the group marched through the Roosevelt Center to the Spellman Overpass where they displayed their signs.

Cosponsors include: Connecting Across Greenbelt; Drumming for Wellness; Prince George's Change Maker; Prince George's Young Democrats; Prince George's Peace and Justice Coalition; Random Unselfish Acts of Kindness; Strib'ble District, LLC; Prince George's Democratic Socialist of America and Greenbelt Interfaith Leadership Association.

$12,000 for software to manage the animal shelter volunteer hours, and $20,000 for a contractor to seek and manage grants. This last expenditure was proposed by Councilmember Emmett Jordan at the first final budget worksession on May 17.

This proposal would keep the projected end-of-year fund balance at 17.0 percent, the minimum suggested by the city's financial advisors.

Councilmember Silke Pope supported Davis' proposal. Councilmember Leta Mach said that the only addition she could support (presumably beyond the workers' compensation premium) was the tile floor project.

Jordan called Davis' proposal reasonable but suggested using 0.2 percent to 0.4 percent more of the reserve to increase what council could add. He pushed to include an estimate of possible grant revenues that the position could generate but that idea found no apparent support among his colleagues. He argued that some new positions are really needed, including the assistant director of planning and community development and additional code enforcement officers.

Councilmember Rodney Roberts opposed touching the city's reserves at all, asking why council always had to try to add in stuff it does not have the money for.

Tax Rate

The beginning of the meeting was cut off in the broadcast and streamed versions of the meeting. City Treasurer Bertha Gaymon told the News Review that, in response to a question from council, she reported that in projecting revenues she had assumed a gradual increase in economic development starting slowly in the first quarter (July to September) and picking up gradually until regaining its pre-pandemic level in the final quarter (April to June, 2022). She sees no reason yet to modify those assumptions.

She also told the News Review that Roberts had asked her what she would cut if the city needed to reduce expenditures. Gaymon stated that she would need to work with the department directors to determine where cuts or delays in expenditures could occur based upon what was happening at the time.

Roberts and Jordan pressed to lower the tax rate to the level that would keep the city's revenue from the tax level with the current fiscal year, rather than increasing due to higher assessments. Jordan pointed out that he had expressed his desire to do this at the first budget worksession. Davis expressed her frustration to be talking about this at the 23rd hour, not during the two months of budget worksessions. While Jordan had stated his desire, specific cuts to accomplish this goal have not been identified.

Byrd argued against lowering the tax rate, noting that the American Rescue Plan (ARP) Act of 2021, from which the city expects to receive a substantial amount, prohibits reducing taxes using ARP funds. He pushed to use more of the city's reserves to fund additional programs, particularly the race and gender equity director that he proposed late in the first final budget worksession. Roberts repeated his unwillingness to use any of the city's reserve funds to increase the level of expenditures.

Gaymon told the News Review that she had told council that in preparing the original budget proposal, "It was difficult to close the revenue vs. expenditures gap as we had to add new items like the maglev, absorb required increases in contracts and other expenses and incorporate increases in staff compensation. Reducing revenue by the Constant Yield rate would have forced major cuts throughout the budget."

At the second public hearing on the budget, held during the May 24 regular council meeting, Bob Rudd urged council to not effectively raise taxes on those who own their own homes or small businesses. He argued that council has a duty to provide true homeowners and small businesses in Greenbelt with the kind of relief council has offered to others such as renters.

Lore Rosenthal sought and received confirmation that homeowners' taxes will go up due to increases in assessed valuations and that renters, in effect, face the likelihood of higher rents as these costs are passed through to them.

ARP

The ARP was a source of uncertainty and frustration among the councilmembers. The city is likely to get substantial funding through this national stimulus plan, perhaps as much as $8 million to $9 million each for the next two years. However, as Gaymon reported to council, the federal government is still working to define what the funds can and cannot be used for. With a recent update that the state will determine the funding allocation, Davis suggested that council lower its expectations of what it will receive. Gaymon noted that the city will be very constrained in terms of what the funds can be used for. The city will have to submit its spending plans for approval before the money can be spent and the project will be very paperwork-heavy, she cautioned. These funds are not included in the budget although they could be used to fund some of the wish list projects and offset certain revenue losses.

Byrd's Concerns

In addition to his demand that the race and gender equity director position be included, he also wanted to ensure that the economic development intern receives at least $15/hour. The director of race and gender equity would evaluate city actions in terms of their impact on people of color, women and people from the lesbian, gay, bisexual, transgender and queer community. To accommodate this, he proposed taking another $120,000 from the city's reserves. There was no discussion of this proposal beyond Roberts' opposition to using reserves.

City Manager Nicole Ard said that she has already committed to having a group of staff attend race and gender equity training and that the soon-to-be-announced human resources director is coming from an organization that specializes in race and gender equity.

Byrd's proposal received support at the second public hearing on the budget, when Bob Rand called for more emphasis on the council work plan, arguing for including in the budget the racial and gender equity position and a second position in the Department of Planning and Community Development focused on evidence-based projects to invest in city neighborhoods to improve the quality of life, education, affordable housing, food and nutrition; to serve at-risk youth; and to reduce crime.

Abatements

Gaymon reported that the latest information from the county is that 41 commercial properties with a total assessed valuation of $375 million have appealed their assessments, but the impact of the requested reductions on property tax revenue is not yet available. The proposed budget has set aside $450,000 for property tax abatements.

Next Step

Council will attempt to pass the budget at its June 7 regular meeting. Under the city charter the budget must be adopted by June 10. The budget resolution would normally require introduction at one meeting and adoption at a subsequent meeting. Because there is no time to follow normal procedure, council will need to suspend the rules allowing first and second reading to occur at the same meeting. A supermajority of six councilmembers must vote to suspend the rules although just a bare majority is needed to approve the budget itself.

The US Department of the Treasury (Treasury), Bureau of Engraving and Printing (BEP), published on June 4, 2021 its Final Environmental Impact Statement (EIS) for the Proposed Construction and Operation of a Currency Production Facility (CPF) within the National Capital Region (NCR). In accordance with the National Environmental Policy Act (NEPA), the Final EIS analyzes potential environmental, cultural, and socioeconomic impacts and identifies mitigation measures to reduce potential adverse impacts as a result of the proposal to construct and operate a new CPF within the NCR.

The Proposed Action would replace Treasury's insufficient Washington, DC production facility (DC Facility), and would provide Treasury with a modern, scalable, sufficiently sized production facility within the NCR that meets Treasury's needs. The Proposed Action would result in more efficient currency production, while allowing Treasury to maintain its presence within the NCR. Following construction of the new CPF, currency manufacturing at the DC Facility would be phased out.

Treasury considered and addressed in the Final EIS comments received on the Draft EIS from government agencies, Native American Tribes, and the public during the public comment period. Based on the thorough analysis presented in the Final EIS, Treasury will prepare and execute its Record of Decision (ROD) announcing which Alternative is environmentally preferable, which Alternative it selects for implementation (be it the Preferred Alternative or the No Action Alternative), and which mitigation measures it will implement to reduce potential adverse impacts. Finalization of the ROD will occur after July 6, 2021.

Printed copies of the Final EIS are available at the Puente Library at Capitol Technology University and the Thurgood Marshall Library at Bowie State University until July 6, 2021, or you may review the Final EIS and associated materials, including a Digital EIS (i.e., a digital representation of the data presented in the Final EIS) online at <https://www.nab.usace.army.mil/home/bep-replacement-project>. Treasury has also prepared a Spanish-language Executive Summary of the Final EIS, which is available at the libraries and on the project website.

years spent in law enforcement. For the next four years Mathews did not sit quietly at home. He landed a position with the Maryland Police and Correctional Training Commission, working as an instructor in the Community Outreach Division. Mathews developed and implemented a gang awareness program, traveling all over the State of Maryland conducting trainings. "This was a great position for me, it taught me a lot, how to speak to community groups and other officers," Mathews told the News Review.

In 2013 he accepted the community relations job in Greenbelt, the first civilian to hold this position. Being the press contact person for the department is one of his main duties and he is on call 24-7. He is responsible for the weekly crime report and is a liaison for the department with the city Youth Advisory Committee. Mathews enjoys working with young people and, as a crisis intervention counselor, another one of his duties, he has worked closely with the Eagle All-Stars, a mentoring program located at Springhill Lake Elementary School.

The job has changed over the years due to social media. "Citizens are informed very quickly about a crime incident, road closures or crime trends, which is a good thing," said Mathews. Explaining further, he stated that through Facebook, Twitter and the Neighbors website, information is driven out quickly as an incident unfolds, to people who need it, which takes pressure off the police. Mathews says he has worked hard to educate the public about crime trends, such as the recent rash of car thefts, by putting out videos, press releases and citizen advisories warning people not to leave their cars running with the keys in the ignition even for a moment.

This past year during the pandemic Mathews missed dealing with people in person. "It sort of took the wind out of my sail for a while," he stated. He went on to explain that it took a lot to maintain relationships within the city, something he values greatly. Mathews has many fond memories of the people he has worked with through the years and the friendships he has made, telling the News Review, "I value these personal relationships and friendships more than ever... looking back, I will miss this."

Mathews plans to keep busy in his retirement by spending more time with his wife, two daughters and friends. When asked what advice he would give to the next person to fill his shoes Mathews stated, "Be all in with the community, love the people and show empathy, you have to like working with people and kids."

Can You Make a Cicada Map By Keeping Your Ears Open?

by Herb Reed and Cathie Meetre

Herb Reed, Ph.D., is an entomologist and University of Maryland Extension Service senior agent emeritus who lives in the Lakewood subdivision. On being asked by a permanently puzzled News Review reporter why there were so many cicadas in some city areas but very few up by the Research Road gate into Beltsville Agricultural Research Center (BARC), he, as a true scientist, decided to investigate empirically.

Reed took a leisurely stroll up to the BARC gate from Empire Place and through it on Research Road down to Beaver Dam Creek (where the eagles live) at midday Saturday, May 22, during the height of the cacophony.

Reed's Report

"The cicadas seemed to be loudest at the corner of Empire Place and Greenhill Road," Reed discovered on his walk. "The wooded hillside bounded by Ridge Road, Empire Place and Greenhill Road seems to be the source of the most spirited singing. My hypothesis is that this area is relatively undisturbed in terms of tree canopy compared to some other areas for the period of say the last three or four 17-year cycles. This is important because the cicadas do not move very much when they are under the ground as they need to be feeding on tree roots and they are not going to strike off cross-country in search of more roots. So their only chance to move is when they emerge and the adults appear to be relatively weak flyers (this is an area where I am lacking data but I surmise that they do not move more than a few meters generally).

"If an area has been in farmland with few wooded areas, it is not going to have many cicadas except for the wooded patches," explained Reed. "And in fact, as I got closer to the gate and the research farm fields the cicadas did indeed quiet down significantly. I could still hear them clearly at the gate. But as I proceeded through the gate and down the Research Road hill toward the stream, they diminished very quickly to the point that by about a quarter-mile beyond the gate I had to listen carefully to hear them and soon after that did not hear them even where there was something of a wooded area to the right going down the hill.

A cicada climbs up a tree.

"Maybe this area (the copse on the right) was still open fields several cicada cycles ago?" Reed suggested. "Again, we would need more data - maybe some aerial maps from say, the 1950s."

In conclusion, said Reed, "The good news in this analysis is that the efforts in Greenbelt to preserve wooded areas appear to be well worth it for periodic cicadas and their fans, not to mention the animals which enjoy eating them."

Cautious Speculation

Reed was anxious for the newspaper to note that his study is neither scientifically accurate nor quantitative but feels it is a fine indicator of the density of the cicadas.

He also noted in conversation that he believed the steep hillside between Ridge Road and Empire Place was a focal point for the cicada brood, speculating that because of its steepness, the area might not have been plowed even before the city was built in the late 1930s on land that had been worn out by generations of tobacco farming. This would have insulated an island of trees and vegetation that was hospitable to the long-term survival of the insects.

He pointed out that a fairly accurate map of cicada concentration could be put together by walking the streets using a meter to measure sound levels at regular intervals.

Editor's Note: Cicadas scarcely got a mention in the Greenbelt News Review or its predecessor, the Greenbelt Cooperator, until 2004. The construction of the original community in the late 1930s likely wiped out lots of cicadas - 1936 was an emergence year for Brood X - and it may have taken a few cycles for cicada numbers to build up after that.

Have You Seen Birds Munching on Cicadas?

The Maryland Ornithological Society is studying which bird species are foraging on Brood X periodical cicadas for a publication in Maryland Birdlife. Those observing a bird eating a cicada are encouraged to tell the society about it. It is important to be able to identify the species of bird doing the eating. "Little brown bird" isn't enough; the society needs to know chickadee, bald eagle, turkey vulture, etc.

So, Greenbelters who know a robin from a cardinal, a blue jay from a woodpecker, a hawk from a raven are encouraged to participate. A website form is available to record observations at bit.ly/BirdsEatingCicadas. For each individual observation of a bird eating a cicada, there are five short questions to answer; each cicada snack is to be separately recorded. People and dogs eating cicadas don't count. Just birds.

Questions or photos can be emailed to Gabriel Foley at mddcbb3@mdbirds.org. If sending photos, indicate whether or not the photos can be used, with credit, in an article summarizing the data for Maryland Birdlife.

Old Armory to Get Assessment Before Concrete Plans Are Poured

by Brogan Gerhart

The Greenbelt Armory has sat undisturbed and underutilized on the corner of Southway and Greenbelt Road since 2016. That may change, as the City of Greenbelt has been given the chance to acquire the building and site surrounding it for no charge, according to Greenbelt City Councilmember Judith Davis. However, the cost for repairs has not yet been estimated by the city.

The two-story red-brick structure was built in 1954 and has several detached garages and storage facilities on site, according to a request for a proposal report compiled by Assistant Director of Public Works Brian Kim. In addition to the armory itself, the site the armory is located on is approximately eight acres, the size of just over six football fields.

With the demands created over time by the expansion of Central Greenbelt to Greenbelt East and Greenbelt West, Davis said a new, modern firehouse is one idea being considered for the space once the property is acquired. Councilmember Leta Mach also advocated in an email for the armory to be used for "additional city office space as it is close to the center of town and city offices."

"We want to acquire it and I'm pretty sure we will be acquiring it," Davis said, explaining that the city is next in line to receive the building if they want it, since both the state and county did not want the surplus government building when it was offered up by the National Guard.

Although the city has dibs on the armory, Davis said that she wanted an assessment of the building done prior to officially accepting it to see if there are any major problems with the property.

Kim, who has been to the site several times and is the primary point of contact for the armory project, said the city has "received proposals [for assessing the site] and they are currently under review." After a proposal is selected, a recommendation will be given to City Manager Nicole Ard. Kim said he is unable to give a date as to when a proposal will be accepted.

"As far as the land and the facilities, it is a very valuable piece of land," Kim said. "Having said that, in the last year and a half, the building itself has deteriorated quite significantly. There's been no maintenance on the building [and] with regard to hazardous material and contamination, that is still unknown." Kim said the request for proposal and assessment phase, which is where they are now, will help determine these variables and hopefully lead into the next step of this process which is the city deciding what it wants to do with the space once it is assessed and formally acquired.

While the future of the armory is still in flux, the building has had a long history with the City of Greenbelt. According to the News Review archives, the armory was dedicated in 1955 by former Maryland governor Theodore McKeldin and then-commanding officer of the Maryland National Guard Major General

Milton Reckord.

For over 60 years since its dedication, the Greenbelt Armory has had a hand in everything from creating contention between the military and the city to participating in national events and tragedies to hosting community events for Greenbelters.

In 1958 there was a disagreement between National Guard leaders and the city who fought for the removal of a "hideous, cheap" sign that hid the "attractive marble front of the building." In 1968 members of the National Guard stationed at the armory were sent to control the riots in Washington, D.C., following the assassination of Martin Luther King, Jr. And in the 1960s it was used for community activities including the Mishkan Torah Sisterhood antique show and sale in 1969 and the News Review's 25th Anniversary dinner.

Regardless of its perception by residents throughout time, the armory has stood as a solid and consistent part of the city for many years. As of now, there is no set date to discuss the plans for this space in upcoming work-sessions, but Davis said council is waiting for the assessment of the building to be completed before planning what to do with the space.

In 1955 it was Reckord's and other officials' "desire and intention to offer the armory to the residents of Greenbelt for whatever use they may have in mind." Whether this ideal was achieved by the government or not is debatable, but the city has similar intentions for its residents to be a part of the process.

"Once we know exactly what we have," Davis said, "definitely as far as designs and what is going to go in the building ... residents will be very much involved in what goes there."

City Council and American Legion Honor Fallen Heroes

The Greenbelt City Council and the American Legion Post 136 family held a Memorial Day ceremony at the city's War Memorial to honor the more than one million men and women who have lost their lives defending America since the Revolutionary War. The solemn memorial, which followed assembly and communications constraints caused by the Covid-19 virus, featured commentary, the Star-Spangled Banner, Pledge of Allegiance, taps and wreath placements.

Post 136 Commander Mike Moore said, "This day is sacred with the almost visible presence of those who have gone before us. We are here to honor the memory of those who gave their lives in the service of our country. May the ceremonies of today deepen our reverence for our departed family members and friends whose selfless service and sacrifice has helped us to preserve our nation. Because this is a day of remembrance, I ask that you remember the 22 veterans from our post who have passed away in the last year and keep them and their families in your thoughts and prayers."

Mayor Colin Byrd addressed the cost of war, saying no one wants to lose their lives but the Memorial Day ceremony allows us to honor those who did. Byrd read the annual Memorial Day proclamation which acknowledged the brave men and women who gave their lives to protect our country. "We are saddened by the deaths of America's sons and daughters and the hardship endured by their families ... we are gathered at the Greenbelt War Memorial to once again remember and honor those from our own community. This proclamation expresses deep gratitude to the women and men who have given their lives in the service of the United States of America who are remembered not just this day but every day [for] the ultimate sacrifice they made so that we may enjoy peace, prosperity and the freedom we all cherish."

As Eleanor Roosevelt said, "When all is said and done, and statesmen discuss the future of the world, the fact remains that people fight these wars."

War veterans are the last to lionize war and its devastating results. Former President and Commander of allied forces in Europe during World War II, Dwight D. Eisenhower, agreed. "I hate war as only a soldier who has lived it can, only as one who has seen its brutality, its futility, its stupidity." But he also understood the reality of today's world. "History does not long entrust the care of freedom to the weak or the timid," he said.

The Memorial Day event was recorded for community presentation on Facebook and local cable channels.
