Four Students Experience Bolivia In ERHS Research Campaign

by Ayomiposi Ajayi

In late May 2022, four student interns – Ayomiposi Ajayi, Fisayo Okunuga and first-year undergraduate students Monique Watson (Purdue University) and Hadijat Oke (University of Maryland College Park) – boarded a plane to La Paz, Bolivia, to participate in a week-long atmospheric research campaign. The goal of the research was to measure the flow of city-generated pollutants up to higher elevations, which can accelerate the melting of snow and glaciers in the high Andes mountains.

Traveling under the sponsorship of the U.S. State Department, the students, all of whom at one point participated in Eleanor Roosevelt High School's internship program, working under Howard University researcher and Greenbelt resident, Dr. David Whiteman, were excited to begin their research in Bolivia. In fact,

Oke stated that she “felt very surprised when Dr. Whiteman told us that we were going to Bolivia for our campaign analysis,” exclaiming that “it didn't really feel real” until the day she started packing for the trip. Prior to landing in Bolivia, months of preparation ensued, starting in November 2021 when student interns began engaging in weekly online meetings with eight Bolivian undergraduate physics students from the Universidad

Black History Month

Celebrate with Art, Exhibits, Dance, Movie and a Health Bus

by Lois Rosado

Each year the Greenbelt Black History and Culture Committee organizes programs to acknowledge the contributions, commemorate the sacrifices and illuminate the achievements of Black Americans. This year's theme is Black Resistance and Resilience in the African Diaspora, as determined by the Association for the Study of African American Life and History, founded by Carter G. Woodson, considered the Father of Black History Month.

Why acknowledge Black American history? History books have yet to tell the complete story of the nation. For example, Wes Moore was elected and sworn in as governor of Maryland on Wednesday, January 18. However, few of us know that in 1908, Maryland Governor Henry Lloyd vowed to disenfranchise Black residents and denounced Black voting rights as a threat to white supremacy.

The complete history of Maryland has yet to be printed in the history books used by educational institutions. That history should include the Piscataway nation and how their lands were stolen and their culture diminished.

Little has been written about the culture, skills and

Legislative Priorities

Council Seeks: Ban on Single-Use Plastics and No Maglev

by Susan Taylor

Each year before the Maryland Legislative session opens, the members of the Greenbelt City Council meet with representatives of state, county and other local jurisdictions to share the priorities of our community.

Priorities and Concerns

This year Greenbelt's top priorities are: a ban on single-use plastics; improvements to Greenbelt Road's streetscape; improvements to the Greenbelt Metro Station; requesting more information on abatements; and clarification of language describing constant yield tax rates.

Also discussed was opposition to three proposed projects: the maglev train routes, Beltway widening and construction of a Bureau of Engraving and Printing facility on the Beltsville Agricultural Research Center. Three additional concerns were addressed: acquisition of the Greenbelt Armory property, disrepair of sidewalks adjacent to State roadways and concerns about Greenbelt schools.

Single-use Plastic Ban

Single-use plastics are just that – plastic items designed to be thrown away after one use. Many single-use plastic bans target carryout plastic bags to reduce pollution that is dangerous to human and animal health, encourage more sustainable habits and prevent waste. This type of plastic bag is increasingly manufactured from fracked gas and very few are recycled. Those that are, gunk up machinery used for processing curbside recycling. Plastic carryout bags take up to 1,000 years to decompose.

Councilmember Kristen Weaver, the liaison from the city council to the Greenbelt Advisory Committee on Environmental Sustainability (Green ACES), states that not only will the ban

Police Search after Shooting Ends at Greenway Center

by Anna Bedford-Dillow

On Monday morning, January 23, an incident that police are describing as an “officer-involved shooting” in Lanham resulted in almost eight hours of searching for the driver who fled the scene. It culminated in his arrest at the Greenway Center. Twenty-year-old Tyler Clendenen, a Greenbelt resident, is now charged with assaulting two Prince George's County police officers as well as multiple firearms offenses.

Suspicious Vehicle

At 8:40 a.m., a resident of Hickory Hill Avenue in Lanham made a 911 call to report a suspicious occupied car – a four-door black sedan – whose horn had been sounding for about two hours. Two uniformed Prince George's County police officers responded and approached the car to talk to the driver.

Driver's Gun

An initial police statement said that “during the interaction the suspect produced a gun,” according to the PGPDNews Twitter account. However, at the Monday afternoon press conference, held while police were still searching for the driver, it was reported that the officer on the passenger side had noticed a gun, thought to have been on the passenger seat.

Two Weapons Fired

The officer on the driver's side of the car attempted to get the driver out of his car “or secure that individual,” said Prince George's County Police Chief Malik Aziz. When the driver grabbed for his weapon, the officer on the passenger side tried to secure it, ultimately taking hold of the gun. A round from

Letters to the Editor

It's a Struggle For Teachers, Too

I appreciated Anna Bedford-Dillow's informative article about parents' struggles during asynchronous virtual learning in our county schools. My co-workers from Fairfax are facing the same struggle with their children, as Fairfax is closed this Thursday and Friday to let their teachers finish their grading for the quarter (it's not just a local thing!).

What this has left me thinking is, what if these days to complete grading were not necessary, because public school teachers had enough planning and grading time built into their daily schedules?

Maybe we should ask our children's teachers how much time they have to prepare and if it's enough to properly prepare the classes they teach as well as grade and take care of administrative obligations. And if they tell us it's not, what are we as a society going to do to better support the teachers educating our children?

Full disclaimer, I am a teacher at a school that is not fully public and operates differently, and I do mostly have enough time to get all my work done. I wish for the same for my public-school colleagues.

Do the Research

According to a previous News Review, Mayor Emmett Jordan recently proposed removing a residency requirement for the city manager from the Greenbelt City Charter. Councilmember Kristen Weaver then asked "if any other municipalities had a clause restricting where the city manager could live," to which the city solicitor responded "that he had not seen that anywhere else."

In less than two minutes on Google, I found news articles about residency requirements for city managers in Colorado, New Hampshire and Oklahoma. Indeed, with an additional minute on Google, I found that both Glenarden and College Park have a residency requirement (but permit the mayor and/or council to waive the requirement for a specific city manager). These simple facts would have empowered city council to have a more productive discussion.

Resume In-person GHI Board Meetings

It's time for the GHI Board of Directors to conduct their meetings in person at the administration building. Understandably board and committee meetings were held virtually during the pandemic. The Greenbelt City Council and city advisory boards did likewise; however, beginning in February 2022 council reinstated in-person regular meetings along with a virtual or hybrid option.

There's absolutely no reason for GHI to continue holding its board meetings virtually. In the interest of accessibility, transparency and Maryland state open meetings policies the cooperative should re-implement public meetings so members can attend if they choose.

Over the past year alone there have been problems and issues that members are concerned about. They want to ask questions of board members and staff and can better express their concerns face to face rather than in some virtual format that doesn't always function well. Some members do not use or have access to IT. Some with hearing or seeing difficulties find virtual meetings rather cumbersome.

It may suit the majority of the board to continue meeting virtually in the comfort of their homes and not have to deal with a room full of members but this format worked well for 80 years. GHI isn't just brick and mortar and monthly co-op fees. It's about members living cooperatively in close proximity to others. It's a social construct with member involvement necessary, and this means attending meetings and staying informed.

The search for a general manager is one of the most important issues to the future of the cooperative. Members have had problems with navigating the Yardi system. Some members have had their monthly fees fail to debit properly. I understand there were issues with some members' heat/

On Screen at Old Greenbelt Theatre

A Man Called Otto

Otto Anderson (Tom Hanks) is a grumpy widower whose only joy comes from criticizing and judging his exasperated neighbors. When a lively young family moves in next door, he meets his match in quick-witted and very pregnant Marisol, leading to an unexpected friendship that will turn his world upside down. The film is a remake of the Swedish film A Man Called Ove, which was based on a novel by Fredrik Backman. The English translation of the book became a New York Times bestseller.

Living

Set in 1953, the film is the story of an ordinary man (Bill Nighy), reduced by years of oppressive office routine to a shadow existence, who at the 11th hour makes a supreme effort to turn his dull life into something wonderful. Directed by Oliver Hermanus from a screenplay by Kazuo Ishiguro, the story is adapted from the 1952 Japanese film Ikiru directed by Akira Kurosawa, which in turn was inspired by the 1886 Russian novella The Death of Ivan Ilyich by Leo Tolstoy. Says critic Candice McMillan of Seattle Refined, "Living breathes life into an otherwise quiet story of one man's wrestle to accept his mortality ... portrayed with sweet, unassuming simplicity by Bill Nighy, the one part of the equation essential to the film's sum believability and winsome charm."

AC mini-splits. I also have heard that GHI had recent challenges pertaining to meeting staff payroll and may have had to borrow funds from its replacement reserves. There have been concerns with some units bring rented without application or notification. These and other issues that members are concerned about can best be addressed and discussed if GHI members had access to open in-person meetings.

Board meetings should begin in person with hybrid option just as our city council has been doing for almost a year now.

Considering EV Costs

I am writing in response to a statement Interim City Manager Tim George made during the December 14 meeting of the Greenbelt City Council, to the effect that electric vehicles (EVs) are more expensive than fuel-powered ones, and therefore it is not currently in the best interest of the city to purchase EVs for municipal use. As evidence, George cited the purchase price of an electric-powered pickup truck as being far greater than that for an equivalent fuel-powered truck. With respect, George's statement is not correct.

Initial purchase price is not the best point of comparison when considering a vehicle purchase; rather it is the cost to own and operate the vehicle over its expected useful life. Often termed Lifetime Cost of Ownership or LCO, this is a calculated value that includes the cost of energy (whether fossil fuel or electricity), the cost of maintenance (both routine and repairs), the purchase price and other factors such as insurance.

In the case of an EV versus an internal combustion engine (ICE) vehicle, studies clearly show that the cost to own and operate an EV can be significantly lower than that of an equivalent ICE vehicle. Not only is the cost of energy to power the vehicle lower by 70 percent or more (electric motors are typically 3- to 4-times as efficient as ICEs), but the maintenance requirements and costs for EVs are far lower than for ICE vehicles (no oil, no antifreeze, no tune-ups, far fewer moving parts.)

Environmental cost is a second important consideration; the City of Greenbelt prides itself as a leader in environmental stewardship, and council has adopted a number of policies aimed at reducing pollution and promoting environmental health.

Deploying EVs without delay for the use of municipal employees is a 'win-win': it is sound fiscal policy and it is good for the environment. Let us practice the environmental leadership we profess to value.

Menstrual Products Distributed At Springhill Lake Rec. Center

Greenbelt CARES staff Joyce Kolenky and Brendy Garcia distributed menstrual products from Greenbelt's Pink Pantry Program at the Springhill Lake Recreation Center on the afternoon of January 18. Approximately 60 income-qualified persons received up to 72 pads, 20 tampons and two pairs of period underwear each, which were donated by the Greater DC Diaper Bank.

Two women receive period products from the Pink Pantry on January 18.

The Pink Pantry is working to address what is called "period poverty" in Greenbelt. Worldwide, many people use makeshift alternatives because pads and tampons are costly and often not covered by government aid programs. CARES is planning more Pink Pantry events, including menstrual education programs on how to use menstrual products such as period underwear and cups and other topics, based on interests that attendees reported in an event survey.

Greenbelters can help address local period poverty during the February 4 to 28 Menstrual Products and Bra Collection Drive sponsored by the Greenbelt Alliance for Reproductive Freedom (GARF). Donations will be accepted in designated bins at the Greenbelt Co-op Supermarket and other locations throughout the month of February. Look for more details in the February 2 News Review, as well as on local social media.

St. Hugh's to Sponsor Mission Here in March

St. Hugh's Catholic Church is coordinating with other local Catholic parishes to co-sponsor a mission under the guidance of the Franciscan University of Steubenville in Ohio. The mission will be held on three evenings: Sunday, March 5 through Tuesday, March 7 from 6:30 to 8:30 p.m. The location will be St. Joseph's Catholic Church, 11007 Montgomery Road, Beltsville. Many people have travelled to Steubenville to attend missions and retreats. This will be a chance for locals to obtain the "Steubenville Experience for Everyone." Everyone is welcome to attend.

The three nights will include Catholic speaker, musician and author Dan Harms along with the ministry team from the Franciscan University. Each night will include prayer, music and Eucharistic adoration as well as a time for refreshments and fellowship. There is a small registration fee. To learn more about this mission or to register, visit cvent.me/w8qyba. Call Mary Ann Tretler at St. Hugh's at 240-517-7559 for additional questions.

Rev. Ann Kadlecek with Liturgist Jim Flaherty

In any life, there are thresholds – moments when we choose whether to let go of key aspects of the past and enter into something new and different. Each threshold is an uncertain, challenging, in-between place, and it can be helpful to pause, look around, remember and imagine. We're at a threshold in the life of this church and its people, and today we will reflect together on this moment, where we've been, and what the future might hold.

knowledge of enslaved Africans who helped generate the wealth of Maryland and the nation's wealth their descendants don't fully enjoy. Missing are the stories of how Black soldiers fought in every war beginning with the War of Independence, but were re-enslaved. Black soldiers were attacked and killed at various moments in American history for demanding their rights, denied veterans benefits and prevented from living in decent communities, as highlighted in the book, The Color of Law, by Richard Rothstein. There is nothing in the history books about how lands were stolen from Black farmers, preventing the development of generational wealth as was noted in The Case for Reparations by Ta-Nehisi Coates in the Atlantic Weekly, June 2014. Nor are many of us aware of Marcus Garvey and the Pan-African movement in the early 20th century and why it was so popular. The high numbers of Black people lynched throughout the country during that period, can hardly be coincidental. Black resistance and resilience and the struggle for full citizenship continues to this day.

Black History Events

Wednesday, February 1. A new art exhibit opens at the New Deal Café and the Greenbelt Arts Center featuring works by artists of color. This exhibit is being curated by Shaymar Higgs, director of The SPACE Free Art For All at Beltway Plaza. It will show up-and-coming artists.

Sunday, February 5 at 1 p.m. and 2 p.m. Artful Afternoon at the Community Center invites the public to create artwork from childhood memories based upon the African American folklore work of artist Blanch Ackers.

Also on Sunday, February 5, from 2 to 4 p.m. a reception will be held for the opening of the art exhibit at the New Deal Café.

Saturday, February 11, noon to 3 p.m. Lindsey Vance, in collaboration with Higgs and Beltway Plaza, invites the public to create a personal, family or community symbol of legacy that will be added to a community mural in celebration of Black History Month. That mural will be on display at Beltway Plaza.

On Sunday, February 19 from 2:30 to 4:30 p.m. information on the various cultures from the African Diaspora will be on display at the Community Center. The program will feature African drumming, spoken word artists, children dancing and a history and demonstration of Angola Capoeira.

On Sunday, February 26 there will be a free family film at the Old Greenbelt Theatre. Free transportation will be available from Springhill Lake Recreation Center. Details about transportation to the theater are available at the Center. Ask for the program flyer.

This year's programs are sponsored by the Greenbelt Black History and Culture Committee together with Beltway Plaza, CHEARS, Greenbelt Arts Center, Greenbelt Recreation, Kaiser Mobile Health Unit, New Deal Café, Old Greenbelt Theatre, Peace and Justice Coalition and The SPACE Free Art For All.

Mayor de San Andrés in La Paz. Okunuga, who documented each meeting, stated, "The weekly meetings were very helpful as we got to learn about what we were going to be doing throughout the course of the trip." As the students became more familiar with concepts, they were even able to work directly with atmospheric instruments, preparing them further for the goals set to be achieved.

After arriving in Bolivia, the students found that their preparation efforts had been beneficial, as both the Bolivian and U.S. students dove right into the experiment. They set up tents, listened to explanations and learned how to inflate and deploy a tethered weather balloon and properly attach a radiosonde telemetry instrument. On the experiment day, the students split into groups and collected data in various locations, each at a different elevation to maximize the atmospheric instruments and retrieve comparable data. At the end of the day, many files of data consisting of black carbon concentrations, particle mass concentrations, temperature, relative humidity, wind speed, carbon dioxide and more were collected.

The organized and inviting homestay program set up by Bolivian mentors meant that the student interns were comfortable during their stay in Bolivia. After completing the experimental work, the students were given the opportunity to explore the vibrant city of La Paz, where they traveled via the city's primary transport, Teleférico (cable car), and were able to sample native Bolivian dishes like peanut soup and the infamous marraquetas. As a group, both Bolivian and U.S. students and mentors were given the chance to visit the town of Coroico, where they received a tour of an animal rescue center in the rainforest.

Despite spending a whole week in Bolivia, the U.S. students felt that the days had gone by too quickly. Watson describes her time in Bolivia as "one of the best experiences," stating that she has "made lasting memories and connections." Though good-byes were said, the work for the Bolivian campaign was not over. Even after returning to the U.S., the students were back in weekly online meetings, planning the next steps to analyze the collected data. Overall, the experience was indeed a great way to collaborate with other students and have fun experiences while improving public understanding of how pollution travels and affects Andean snowpack and glaciers which can have a direct influence on water availability.

Braveboy Addresses Council

by Deb Daniel

On January 9, Aisha N. Braveboy, Prince George’s County State’s Attorney, addressed the Greenbelt City Council, emphasizing the ways she has improved public safety by holding repeat offenders and violent crime offenders to their sentences while creating more diversion programs for low-level offenders. Last year, the county saw a 39 percent reduction in homicides. She complimented Greenbelt’s police department, one of three in the county to investigate homicides, for doing an excellent job in those investigations.

Aisha Braveboy

Pandemic Stress

The covid pandemic brought to light some of the disparities in the county’s population that resulted in increased tensions and crimes, and disparities in income, education and opportunity. Braveboy noted that her office is one player in the Juvenile Justice System. After her office sanctions an accused, the judge makes the decision on whether the defendant serves a sentence in a facility, which may lack educational and healthcare programs. If the defendant is not sentenced to a facility, they are back in an environment with little opportunity. The goal of the entire Juvenile Justice System is, by law, to rehabilitate not to punish.

Carjackings

Most crimes committed in the county are carjackings. The majority arrested are children but there usually are older people involved who also need to be held accountable. The children who can buy “ghost” guns on the internet and assemble them at home feel invincible and though legally adults are still growing, said Braveboy. Braveboy’s office is working on a statute to hold everyone involved in carjackings accountable but she believes the best solution is to offer opportunity and education, giving them hope for the future. She described an “emerging adult” between the ages of 18 and 26 who is still adolescent in their development. She and her department are working on an emerging adult program to reach this population, who also need more support while they are in prison.

Quick Release

Responding to questions from Councilmember Judith Davis about the “quick release” program, Braveboy explained that hours after a person is arrested, they appear before a commissioner (not a judge) who looks for probable cause and/or danger to the community. If there is no probable cause or danger to the community, the person will be released with or without bond. Braveboy does not ask for bond release if a person is a danger to the community as she thinks wealth should not buy you liberty. In serious crimes, Braveboy requests no bond or cash bail.

To resident Bill Orleans’s question about the Police Accountability Board, Braveboy responded that her department gets information from the board about crime but not about general orders or other areas of police work.

the driver's gun was discharged within the car. The second officer on the driver's side of the car then shot his weapon. At the press conference, Aziz was unable to say if the driver's gun was fired while in the hands of the officer who took it or the driver. How the weapon was discharged is the subject of an investigation, he said, and emphasized that it was something that took place in a matter of seconds. At that time Aziz also did not yet know how many times the second officer fired, saying they were still investigating. At the time of the press conference, Aziz could confirm that no officers were injured but it was uncertain if the driver had been struck by any gunfire.

Arrested in Greenbelt

Officers pursued the car but lost sight of it a short distance away, reported Aziz. The hours-long search then encompassed surrounding areas. The license plate on the car was determined to be from another vehicle. The driver was finally apprehended at approximately 4:40 p.m. at the Smoothie King in Greenway Center and taken into custody without further incident. He had not been injured.

Proliferation of Weapons

Asked about the weapon that the police took before the driver fled the scene, Aziz said they didn't yet know if the driver's gun was a ghost gun but noted that "the proliferation of guns is high in this county and across the region." In 2021, he said, 252 ghost guns were seized, and over 900 guns in total. In 2022, over 1,200 guns were seized, including 321 ghost guns, and this January they have already seized almost 40 weapons, including 16 ghost guns, he reported.

Ongoing Investigations

The Internal Affairs Division is investigating the actions of the officers. The officer who fired his gun, identified as a 16-year veteran, is on administrative leave pending the outcome of the investigation, which is standard procedure.

reduce the millions of tons of plastics polluting our waterways each year, but the ban will “encourage people to think about what they are doing.”

Background

For a few years former Maryland State Delegate for Baltimore City Brooke Lierman (now our state Comptroller) and Senator Malcolm Augustine (Prince George’s County) had sponsored a statewide plastic bag ban. The ban passed the House and the Senate Finance Committee but never made it to the Senate floor for a vote in 2021. At the time, Maryland would have been the ninth state to pass such a ban. In prior years the ban had gotten stuck in committee, just like the bags in the recycling machinery.

In 2020 the Maryland Retailers Association came out in favor of a statewide ban. Studies at that time showed that without a ban or fee charged for providing bags, 88.2 percent of customers would take a plastic bag in stores.

Nationally, the Department of the Interior has committed to phase out all single-use plastics (plastic and polystyrene beverage and food containers, disposable plastic bags, bottles, cups, straws and cutlery) in national parks by 2032. A 2011 ban on plastic water bottle sales in some national parks to reduce both waste and lower recycling costs was rescinded by the Trump administration. That ban had removed approximately two million water bottles per year for six years.

In October 2023, England will ban single-use utensils, plates, bowls and cups in an effort to reduce litter in the oceans and waterways of the world. Canada’s ban on single-use plastics took effect on December 20, 2022. Kenya, Zimbabwe, China, India, Thailand, Bangladesh, Rwanda and the European Union all have taken action on single-use plastics.

Locally, Montgomery and Howard counties, Takoma Park, Salisbury, Chestertown, Laurel, Easton, Westminster and Baltimore City have all passed plastic bag bans or a tax or statute that require stores to charge for plastic bags. These regional bans hope to change behavior in their areas and lead statewide efforts by example. The Four Cities (Berwyn Heights, College Park, New Carrollton and Greenbelt) are discussing a coordinated effort, according to Weaver.

Takoma Park bans plastic bags, straws, stirrers and polystyrene takeout containers. Additionally, Prince George’s County has had a plastic straw ban in place for food service and retail businesses since July 1, 2020.

Deb Daniel reported for the News Review on the presentation on plastic bag bans given by Martha Ainsworth of the Sierra Club to Greenbelt City Council on October 11, 2022 (see article on page 13 of the November 24, 2022 issue). ### Greenbelt Man Held

The Major Crimes Division is investigating the actions of the suspect, who was identified on Tuesday afternoon as 20-year-old Tyler Clendenen. Though initially described as a “Lanham man,” court documents show Clendenen’s address changed from Lanham to Greenbelt sometime in 2022. He is charged with assaulting two Prince George’s County police officers (felony first-degree assault), reckless endangerment, illegal possession of a firearm, loaded handgun on person, loaded handgun in vehicle, possession of a firearm as a minor and other firearm offenses. There was already a warrant for his arrest on other, unrelated charges in December. He is now being held without bond.

The suspect was arrested at the Smoothie King in Greenway Center.

A Less-than-scholarly Treatise On the Origins of Valentines

by Cathie Meetre

The News Review ran a double-page spread of Valentines in 2021.

What is certain about Valentine's Day is that the News Review allows its loving and gentle readers to submit beautifully adorned sentiments in the newspaper at a cut rate. Readers supply the sentiment and the News Review supplies the adornments such as hearts, flowers, elephants and old-fashioned bicycles made for two. Visit last year's crop of Valentines submissions at greenbeltnewsreview.com/issues/GNR20220210.pdf to view the creative artistry of the newspaper's layout team.

Murky Origins

What is less certain is how Valentine's Day originated and why or how Valentine became the patron saint of love. After a soupçon of less-than-scholarly research on the web, it seems that there's more than one candidate for the original Valentine, according to the Bollandists, a Catholic religious order that spent 300 years substantiating the canonized saints of the Roman Catholic Church.

Two of the original stories may have referred to the same Catholic priest who negotiated the conversion of a loving parent if the priest cured his child of blindness. When the child was successfully cured (so the story goes) the father kept his side of the bargain and the conversion led to trouble, with beheadings by those in charge during the pre-Christian Roman era. Hardly the stuff of romance.

Like so many Christian feast days, the association could have been that of a pagan Roman feast day conveniently transformed into a Christian saint day. The likely pagan celebration was Lupercalia, which celebrated procreation and fertility, something the ancient Romans were particularly keen on.

By the 14th century, Chaucer and his contemporaries were waxing poetic about Valentine's Day. By the 17th century, in the spirit of courtly love, the celebration was associated with gifts, hearts and flowers; participants apparently drew their Valentine out of a hat (as likely to be as successful as any chance encounter).

Greenbelters Are in Luck

But lovers of old weren't lucky enough to have the News Review simplifying their path to a declaration of love. Send a Valentine via the News Review. It's cheap, it's cheerful and it will definitely add that romantic wow factor to any relationship.

City Notes

The Greenbelt Assistance in Living (GAIL) program offered two distribution events: donated school supplies and period products.

Horticulture/Parks continued hauling discarded Christmas trees to the compost area and hosted a Service Day event where 40 volunteers caged approximately 80 trees around Greenbelt Lake. Street Maintenance installed a headstone at the cemetery.

Refuse/Recycling collected 29.35 tons of refuse and 10.65 tons of recyclables and Fleet Maintenance installed GPS and facial recognition on three trash trucks.
