City Council to Move Slowly on Name Of Community Center, Schwan Memorial

by Pat Scully

"I think Charlie Schwan would have enjoyed this discussion," opined Council member Thomas X. White at the April 8 regular meeting of the city council. "I hope he can get channel B-10, wherever he is."

White's remark came at the end of council's discussion on two agenda items: whether to rename the Center School as the Rexford Guy Tugwell Community Center at the appropriate time and what would be the most appropriate way to memorialize the late Charles F. Schwan, Jr.

Tugwell Center?

The Community Relations Advisory Board (CRAB) had reported its endorsement of the Tugwell Center nomination to council on March 25. Retiring City Manager James K. Giese made the nomination. Tugwell was the leading figure in the original design and establishment of Greenbelt.

Council member Antoinette Bram moved that council begin the process by asking staff to draft the appropriate resolution to name the center in honor of Tugwell. By acting now, council would also honor Giese, who made the nomination, she said. In seconding the motion, council member Joseph Isaacs said Tugwell is the individual most associated with the founding and shaping of Greenbelt and that the building most symbolizes the community.

Schwan Room?

CRAB had also reported on March 25 its recommendations concerning proposals by Greenbelt Homes, Inc. (GHI) to memorialize Schwan, who served on the city council from 1971-81 and on the GHI board of directors for many years, as well as taking a leading role in many community organizations. GHI had suggested three options for Schwan memorials: a joint city/GHI foundation to support community projects, naming the community center for him and renaming Hamilton Place.

CRAB rejected renaming Hamilton Place, which commemorates the Hamilton family, who lived on the property at the time of the American Revolution. They also disapproved of naming the community center for Schwan, suggesting that instead that perhaps a room in the center could be dedicated to him. It also noted that if GHI and its Schwan Memorial Committee would activate and administer the foundation, CRAB would support dedicating it to Schwan.

Nat Shinderman, who chairs the Charles Schwan Memorial Committee, requested that council not act on the Tugwell nomination until it considered the Schwan memorial. He strongly advocated the establishment of the foundation, which could support community projects and assist students with education costs. Such a foundation would be a living entity, he said, to keep Schwan's memory alive. However, the committee is looking for more support from the city than just "holding our coats" while GHI and the committee establish and run the foundation.

Tugwell's place in history is secure, said Shinderman, and needs no embellishment. But "he gave the skeleton to the community, the genesis of the idea, but it was the people of the community who made it work. Charlie Schwan was a significant individual in making Greenbelt what it is." He requested that council schedule a work session on the Schwan memorial before naming the center for Tugwell.

Haste or Foot-Dragging?

White, too, spoke for giving the decision more thought and letting the idea germinate, saying that "we would be acting hastily in naming a building we don't own yet." It will be three years before the community center is opened, he said, noting as well that there is a memorial room to Tugwell in the Greenbelt Library.

Doug Love, surprising himself, supported White, saying that the city should go slow in naming anything for anybody.

Konrad Herling argued that naming the Tugwell Community Center and Charlie Schwan Foundation would be the most appropriate memorials for both men. He called Schwan "a man of idealism, integrity, and morality" and said the foundation would be "in concert with Schwan's vision."

Eunice Coxon, Leonie Penney and Lee Shields also spoke in favor of the council's adopting Bram's motion. Penney noted that Tugwell was not only involved in the establishment of Greenbelt but had also been a resident, living in Woodland Hills during the 1950s.

Mayor Gil Weidenfeld said that he felt the need for an overall concept, in addition to the city's official procedures on memorializing, before starting to name things after people. He suggested a meeting with GHI to discuss the Schwan Memorial and come up with an overall plan. "There's no urgency to make a decision this evening," he said.

"We'll talk and talk and do nothing," countered Bram, urging for action now on the Tugwell Center motion. She recommended naming something else for Schwan, such as Schrom Hills Park or the lake at Buddy Attick Park.

After further discussion, Isaacs withdrew his second of the motion and council took no action on the Tugwell or Schwan memorials. A meeting with the Schwan Memorial Committee and a work session on an overall plan for suitable individuals to be memorialized will be scheduled at a later date.

Senior Housing High-Rise

Council also agreed to schedule a future work session with the senior housing subcommittee of the Greenbelt Consumer Co-op to discuss the subcommittee's proposals for a nine-story co-operatively-owned senior citizens apartment building on the library parking lot. The first three floors would be parking, the top six apartments. The Advisory Planning Board and the Park and Recreation Planning Board (since the building would abut parkland) will be invited to attend the work session.

The proposal is a variation of the non-binding question that was on the last city election ballot. Under the plan, the city would lease the land for $1 to a to-be-established housing co-operative. A majority of voters who responded to the question supported the concept, but neither of the sites then proposed was acceptable.

James Cassels, chair of the senior housing subcommittee, said the group would like to meet with council when architectural renderings of the building are available. (Cassels is also chair of the Greenbelt Consumer Co-op (GCC), which runs the grocery store, pharmacy and gas station. The GCC itself has taken no position on the senior housing proposal.)

Bram asked how tall the building would be. Nine floors at 10 to 12 feet per floor would create a building that would tower over the Roosevelt Center, school and library. Cassels said that he believes the building would add to the appearance of the center.

Several citizens spoke in opposition to the plan. Coxon said that for the city to "give tax-free land for building for private use . . . would set a bad, dangerous precedent." Ruth Myers concurred, asking "Why should council even consider this?" She described herself as

by Betsy Likowski

The impact of the Greenbelt Metro station on the Greenbelt area and how the city can minimize that impact were the topics discussed at the city council worksession on Monday, April 1. No final decisions were reached that night and the discussion was free, frank and lively.

The meeting was well attended, for a work session, with seven people in the audience. Besides the impact of Metro, several petitions to council dealing with Metro were briefly discussed: a parking garage at the Metro station, a park near the Metro station, and a name change for the station.

Council member Edward Putens had called for the work session to discuss what council would like to see in the area around the station. "We need to be proactive, not reactive" with our proposals for the area, he exclaimed.

The city's Director of Planning and Development, Celia Wilson, explained to council the normal planning process for the Transit District Overlay zone (TDO), which includes an area about a mile in diameter around the station. This 18-month process should start soon.

The first step is identifying the boundaries of the TDO. The following step is data collection: map sites; calculating the projected number of trips by people and cars to and from the station; environmental impact; impact on public services such as schools and libraries.

The work is primarily done by the staff of the Maryland-National Capital Park and Planning Commission (M-NCPPC). Owners of nearby properties and officials of nearby jurisdictions are consulted. Existing development is allowed to remain, said Wilson, but future projects are affected.

Council members discussed their hopes, fears, and plans for the process and its impact on the city.

All the council members expressed the wish to take an active role in defining the permissible development in the areas surrounding the Metro station, and not just react to Metro's plans.

Council members Joseph Isaacs, Thomas White and Putens said the city needs to hammer out its own idea of what should be near the station. Isaacs asked if staff could handle the job and Wilson said she would not have enough time to do Metro planning and her other work. We may need to hire help Isaacs suggested.

Council member Antoinette Bram recommended meeting with Metro and officials of nearby jurisdictions, and walking the area considered for the TDO.

Mayor Gil Weidenfeld suggested that the city staff draft a proposal outlining what Greenbelt would like to see in the TDO for review by council and the Advisory Planning Board.

The impact on nearby areas was discussed. "I'm extremely uncomfortable with Metro. If left to their own devices they'll crap all over Greenbelt," said White.

Wilson thought the boundary of the TDO would be Cherrywood Lane. Is there an advantage to Beltway Plaza being in the TDO, Putens asked? Yes, that would provide greater control over development in the Plaza, Wilson replied. City Manager James K. Giese said Springhill Lake should also be included in the TDO.

Council members also expressed concerns about increased crime when the Metro opens and the environmental impacts of the station. Putens said the city's goals are to keep traffic minimal and reduce impact on the flood plain to zero. Improve the flood plain area, added Bram

Recycling Reminders

—Recycling containers in in the GHI courts should not block trash closet doors.

—Newspapers in GHI courts and in the rest of the city should be bundled or bagged and placed next to recycling containers.

Over 900 residents picked up their yellow recycling bins at the Recycling Festival. All customers should have had a recycling bin dropped off at their house, if they had not picked up their bin at the Festival. If customers did not receive a recycling bin they should contact the Prince Georges County Office of recycling at 925-5963.

A Fine Job

Last summer, much criticism was leveled against city staff when it became apparent that the Centerway renovation would not be completed on schedule.

The critics were only half right. Yes, the situation was unacceptable and avoidable. But who was to blame? In my view it was not the city staff.

As I visited Roosevelt Center almost daily, it was quite common to see on site Celia Wilson, Planning and Development Director, her assistant, Jim Sterling, and any number of other staff members. They were there ensuring that the work performed was of the quality the city was paying for. Through the determined efforts of staff we were assured to receive what was paid for with nearly $450,000 in taxpayer funds.

As the merchants made a sacrifice, and the Roosevelt Center patrons were moderately inconvenienced, we all made a short term investment in what is now a much more beautiful and appealing Centerway. This spring should be a time of praise, when we need to remind ourselves of the fine job done by city staff in undertaking and completing this very costly project.

Thanks to the efforts of James K. Giese's staff, and the Public Works employees that performed most of the finishing work, we now have a Roosevelt Center that is much more attractive. We should all be pleased with the results, while also being encouraged by the efforts of many city employees.

TWO SLAPS

Two slaps in the face. That's what GHI residents got from city and county government officials as they anticipated the start of home recycling in Greenbelt on April 16.

The first slap—actually more of a knock-out blow—came from Jesse Buggs, head of the county's recycling office. At the Greenbelt recycling fair on April 6, Mr. Buggs announced that the one-year trial of door-to-door pickup for GHI would be dead in a year. Even before the first Greenbelt bin was picked up, Mr. Buggs already "knew" it would cost twice as much to collect door-to-door for GHI compared to curbside pickups for other homes.

The second slap came on April 11 with the city's ad in the News Review. The ad asks GHI residents to place their recycling bins outside their trash closets. Never mind that Mr. Buggs had defined "door-to-door" as picking up bins placed inside trash closets. He articulated that definition under deliberate questioning at a workshop attended by city officials and the public.

That workshop was held as Greenbelt was deciding whether to have the city or the county run the recycling program. Under pressure at the meeting, Mr. Buggs gained support by offering to try door-to-door pickups for GHI for a year. Mr. Buggs' statements at the fair show he did not intend a good faith trial.

These statements, combined with the city ad's ignoring the promise to go inside trash closets, are not the way to foster trust in government or help us believe that the city government mirrors Greenbelters' commitment to recycling.

Unemployed Support

by Doug Love

As the recession worsens and more consulting contracts disappear, there will be more unemployed Greenbelt residents in the next few months. Some of us are taking time out between interviews and resume passing to start a support group for the currently unemployed. Since it is easy to reserve the large meeting room in the Library without cost, we have done so for the next three Wednesday mornings. We invite anyone who is not currently working and hopes to return to work soon to come and share your expertise on job finding. We plan to encourage a positive outlook for all participants, through government and private resources, play-acting possible interview situations, possibly with help from Greenbelt Access Television.

We are attempting to do this without any costs. So far, the only expense has been advertising. We are looking for foundations and other sources of funding to cover this advertising, and make our program a success.

We hope that we won't see you at the library next Wednesday morning, because you will be at work. But if you can join us, please do. You might not be with us very long.

Arts Center Offers "Crossing Delancey"

The Greenbelt Arts Center will present "Crossing Delancey" a play by Susan Sandler, on Friday and Saturday, April 26 and 27, and May 3 and 4, at 8 p.m., and Sunday, April 28 and May 5, at 2 p.m., at Capitol College, Springfield Road, (off Powder Mill near the B-W Parkway).

The play is directed by Mary Lou Fisher and produced by Virginia Zanner.

"Crossing Delancey" is the story of Isabel (Ilene Levine), a young Jewish woman who lives alone and works in a NYC bookshop. When she is not pining after a handsome author (Dave Quinn) she is visiting her grandmother (Judy Holland), who lives by herself "in the old neighborhood."

Worried that Isabel seems in no hurry to get married, Bubbie hires a matchmaker (Trix White head) who comes up with a good catch, Sam, the pickle vendor. How Isabel handles Bubbie, Sam and everyone else makes for a delightful piece of theatre.

Tickets will be available at the door for general admission, seniors and students. For reservations or further information, call 441-8770.

Police Blotter

A 27-year-old resident male was arrested and charged with two counts of battery and one count of malicious destruction of property on April 7 after he hit two people with a baseball bat and broke the rear window of a vehicle in a parking lot in the 7800 block of Mandan Rd. during an argument. After appearing before a District Court Commissioner, he was held on $1,000 bond pending trial.

Two breaking and enterings were reported on April 11. One occurred in the 7800 block of Mandan Rd.; entry was gained by prying open a locked sliding glass door. A computer system and a microwave oven were stolen. The other breaking and entering occurred in the 6900 block of Hanover Pkwy.; there entry was gained by shattering a sliding glass door. Two 14-speed racing bikes and stereo equipment were taken.

When police tried to pull a car over for a traffic stop in the 6100 block of Breezewood Court on April 7, the car took off and a car chase ensued. The chase ended when the car struck a parked vehicle, at which time the driver bailed out and got away. He is described as black, 15-16 years old, 5'8", 130 lbs., wearing a white shirt and black shorts.

On April 10 a stereo was stolen from a vehicle in the 9200 block of Edmonston Rd. The next day, the Montgomery County Police arrested 3 teenagers in connection with the theft and the stereo was recovered.

A gray 1984 Chevy van, MD tags 538 016, was stolen from the 5800 block of Cherrywood Lane on April 6. A gray 1987 Ford Escort, MD tags YCB 419, was stolen from the 6200 block of Springhill Court on April 7. A red Dodge Ram pickup, MD tags 127 825, was stolen from the 9100 block of Edmonston Rd. on April 9.

Vandalism to, thefts from, and attempted thefts of autos were reported in the following areas: the 6200 block of Breezewood Court, the parking lot of Beltway Plaza, the 8200 block of Canning Terr., the 100 block of Centerway Rd., the 7900 block of Cherrywood Terr., the 7500 block of Greenway Center Dr., the 200 block of Lakeside Dr., the 7800 block of Mandan Rd., the 100 block of Northway Rd., the 47 Court of Ridge Rd., and the 6100 block of Springhill Terr.

Three More Green Belt Fires Prompt Citizen Action, Patrol

by Doug Love

Three separate fires burned more than an acre of the 72 Acre parcel in the Green Belt Thursday afternoon prompting quick action from the fire department and members of the Committee to Save the Green Belt.

Just one day after five acres were scorched in the 100 acre woods at the end of Plateau Place, three more patches of woods were set ablaze along the trail between Eastway and Wolfe Field, and along one of the Perimeter Trails between the ballfields and the gardens near the Greenbelt Homes Administration. Residents noticed the fire closest to GHI about 4 p.m. Thursday and began battling it with shovels and garden hoses. The fire department was there almost immediately, possibly because they were expecting a repeat of the previous afternoon's fire, which they checked at least once on Thursday morning.

Environmentalists noted that these fires were more completely snuffed than the one in the 100 acre woods. Only a few flare-ups were encountered on Friday, and rain over the weekend completely put out all four of the fires. The firemen were more careful with the brush this time, and by Saturday the bridge was replaced across the creek just south of the ballfields. (This bridge is made of an old diving board, and is expected to last much longer than those built from local wood.)

Fire Patrol

Some local residents, concerned over the repetitive nature of the fires, have banded together into a special crime-watch program. The Committee to Save the Green Belt/Greenbelt Greens Joint Taskforce is patrolling the woods every afternoon, looking for suspicious activities. Task Force members carry a special identification card and a map of the woods copied from the Citizens for Greenbelt map, with the grid pattern accented. If a fire or suspicious act is seen, the police will be quickly notified as well as the fire department. Task Force members do not have authority to detain or hang arsonists. They are armed only with cameras. On a trial run Friday, the Task Force met about a dozen very nice residents walking dogs and catching frogs. The recreational vehicle whose tracks have been seen in the woods recently was found to belong to one of the firemen. Some suspicious evidence found near the fires has been turned over to the Greenbelt police.

The patrols will continue, because walking in the woods in dry weather is a civic duty, and a lot of fun. To join the Task Force, stop by 3-D Plateau Place any afternoon.

Hunting Ridge Meeting

The Hunting Ridge Condominium Association, Inc. will hold its annual homeowners' meeting on Wednesday, April 24. COUNCIL a Greenbelt resident since 1938, who could soon benefit from the proposal, but is "absolutely opposed."

Mary Linstrom said the height of the building alone made it unacceptable, as did many others. She said that if council was going to hold a work session they should certainly look at the architect's plans but that she "would object to a 9-story Taj Mahal."

Metro Land se

Council directed staff to pursue data on the impact of the opening of other Metro stations as part of the city's effort to provide input to the planning of the Transit District Overlay (TDO) zone around the Greenbelt Metro station. Weidenfeld and other council members stated their intent that the city be involved in the process from the beginning with the Maryland-National Capital Park and Planning Commission.

Research into the question of the cost of structured versus surface parking had revealed a wide range of figures. According to City Solicitor Robert Manzi, planners allow $1,000 per space for surface parking but structured parking estimates run from $6,500 to $12,500 per space. The wide variation results from such issues as soils and building design.

Rodney Roberts stressed the need to include in their cost time and money spent restoring the streams adversely impacted by surface parking. "I never thought I'd support a parking garage," he said, "but in this instance it's the best option."

White suggested that the council schedule a meeting with those involved in the Anacostia River restoration to get a better understanding of the issues involved and decide whether to get serious in pursuing strategies to change Metro's decision from surface to structured parking. Isaacs suggested conveying to Rep. Steny Hoyer the city's concerns and seek his aid in trying to overcome Metro's time and cost arguments.

Progress Reports

The second in a series of video progress reports on the natatorium was shown. The dramatic highlight of the film was the rapid raising of the roof, with uprights, beams and panels moved into place. According to city Planning and Development Coordinator Celia Wilson, the pool is on track for a September opening.

The bids for construction of Schrom Hills Park were opened on April 4. Kettler Brothers Construction submitted the low bid of $689,000, plus contingencies that could increase the total to $788,000. (The contingencies cover specified problems that could arise; Wilson said she did not anticipate that all contingencies would occur.)

The engineer's estimate for the project, including contingencies, is $950,000. City staff is looking into using all of the budgeted funds. One possibility they are researching is pre-germinated grass. If early claims for growth and durability prove valid, the grass could mean use of the fields within six months instead of a year.

Council approved award of the contract to Kettler Brothers.

Petitions and Requests

Council heard and took under advisement two petitions. Chris Crellin, a free-style skateboarder, requested that the city set aside an area in a park where skateboarders could build a ramp and practice their hobby. He said that there is no place in the city to practice or ride; there have been complaints about skateboarders in the Roosevelt Center. A set-aside area, such as he had seen at a Winchester, Virginia, park, would allow them to pursue their healthful hobby without damage to property.

Julian Weiss requested city sponsorship of a symposium on economic development. Topics such as the current and future economic base of the region and city, plans of businesses and major employers in the area such as NASA and Greenhorne & O'Mara, the impact of Metro and other long-range planning items should be discussed by taxpayers, businesses and agencies.

Meetings Scheduled

A number of meetings and work sessions were scheduled for April and May, many relating to the budget and the selection of a new city manager. Scheduled were:

Monday, April 22, regular meeting; Thursday, April 25, meeting with Robert Slavin on the search for a city manager; Monday, April 29, work session on marketing for swimming pools and with North College Park Civic Association on the Metro station name; Tuesday, April 30, budget work session on reserves, general government and recreation.

METRO, fr. pg. 1

quickly. Protecting the flood plain is simple said Giese, worry about protecting the non-flood plain area.

Putens asked for an update on the petition suggesting a parking garage at the Greenbelt station rather than surface parking. In a letter to Giese dated March 15, WMATA acting General Manager William Boleyn said that the station plus parking structure would cost $68.9 million, as opposed to $32.3 million with surface parking. The parking lot design is approximately 25% complete. Designing and building a parking garage would delay parking and bus access at the station by 18 months, he continued.

Giese commented, Metro "does not have money to get to Greenbelt now," let alone $30 million extra. But Putens said "I'm not willing to let it die."

White doubted that "we'll hold up Metro. Let's just pursue the parking structure from legal and environmental arguments," he suggested. Get rid of the suggestion to use land freed up by a parking garage to build ballfields, White continued, it just contaminates the argument.

Putens and White asked for an update on Rick Meetre's proposal to have a thin park along Indian Creek north of Greenbelt Road. Wilson replied that Meetre will review the proposal with APB.

Greenbelt Facility to Track Cosmic Data on Big Bang

by Mary Lou Williamson

The Cosmology Data Analysis Center officially opened on March 25 in the Commerce Center II building, 7601 Ora Glen Drive. The Center consolidates the scientists, engineers, programmers and support staff — 90 in all — who process raw data from the Cosmic Background Explorer (COBE) satellite into usable information for scientific analysis.

NASA's Goddard Space Flight Center developed the experiment, which was first proposed in 1974, and launched the satellite in 1989. ST Systems Corporation (STX) of Lanham, prime contractor for data analysis, operates the facility. The 18,000 square foot space is leased from the Midland Companies. STX leases another 15,000 sq. ft. on the third floor for the National Space Science Data Center and some Earth Observations Satellite (EOS) activities.

The ribbon-cutting ceremony and reception were the culmination of two months of design and construction of the interior two-thirds of the ground floor to Goddard's specifications.

Data from COBE will provide for astrophysics research at Goddard and elsewhere for the next 10 years. The goals of the project are to answer some elemental questions concerning the Big Bang theory of the origin of the universe.

COBE was designed to investigate the "Big Bang," the great explosion which produced the universe some 10-20 billion years ago. In the initial seconds the universe was very compact and both matter and radiation in it were extremely hot. As it expanded, it cooled: matter formed galaxies and the radiation changed as it moved down the spectrum, from gamma-rays to visible light and now to a diffuse glow of microwaves, filling the universe. COBE probed this glow: how did it fit the Big Bang theory? How evenly does it come from all directions?

With its sensitive detector, COBE provided answers. Observations fit theory so well that when their curve was first shown to the American Astronomical Society last year, it seemed as if the scientists must have cheated, because no difference was visible between the projected curve and the one actually observed. The radiation also arrives rather evenly from the entire sky, suggesting a symmetric Big Bang. The analysis continues and may take 10 years to complete.

Each of the experiments has its own area and a conference room for daily meetings within the Center. There is space for visiting scientists to work. A library in the main computer room contains two "juke boxes" which store data. A scientist or programmer makes a selection, then a robotic arm picks out the tape and plays it. The computer can store on-line and make available 1000 giga-bytes of information—the equivalent of a 100,000 book library. Several times that amount of information can be stored off-line.

John C. Mather is the project scientist.

Capital Office Park Begins Recycling

Greenbelt's Capital Office Park is not only the first, but one of the largest participants in Prince Georges County's "Office Paper Recycling Program," according to representatives of the Prince Georges County Office of Recycling and Waste Management of Greater Washington.

"The new recycling program has been met with great enthusiasm by the tenants at Capital Office Park," said property manager David Dawson. "With the cooperation and support of the firms located at the Park, we are hoping to recycle much of the paper generated by companies here and, in turn, protect the valuable resources of our community and our state."

Capital Office Park is professionally managed and leased exclusively by Community Realty Company, Inc. of Greenbelt.

Capital Office Park Leases Office Space

Community Realty Company, Inc. announced that Decision Systems Technologies, Inc. has signed a full floor lease (approximately 14,000 square feet) in 6301 Ivy Lane of Capital Office Park.

In addition, Allstate Insurance has signed a new, expanded lease in 6411 Ivy Lane of Capital Office Park.

in Prince George's County

Commercial Recycling Counts

Half of the garbage thrown out in Prince George's County comes from the business community.

Consequently, the County is depending on local businesses to start recycling to help conserve valuable landfill space and vital natural resources.

Recycling is a quality of life issue. A clean, environmentally aware County attracts new residents and companies, which means more business for you.

Recycling by the commercial sector will help the County meet its required recycling goals. It could also assist in avoiding mandatory recycling.

Recycling can also reduce your waste disposal costs. So don't "waste" this opportunity.

For your personal copy of the Guide to Business Waste Recycling and other recycling information, call the County Office of Recycling at (301) 925-5963 (TDD/TTY 925-5167).

Earth Day Events Planned

Regional Earth Day 1991 events will take place on Saturday, April 20 in the District of Columbia.

This year's theme for Earth Day is "Hands Across the Anacostia". Earth Day organizers have chosen to focus on the Anacostia River because these troubled waters have not received the same public attention that have benefitted the Potomac River. Greenbelt is in the Anacostia watershed.

Working with individuals from more than 70 environmental, community, public service, and business groups, the Metro D.C. Environmental Network (Met-Net) has planned an Eco-Thon in the Anacostia River Basin. Also, there will be a rally and concert in Anacostia River Park and an Eco-Fair with booths and exhibits from local, regional, and national organizations at the Park Pavilion. Other activities will include crew racing flotillas for celebrities and public officials, and environmental posters from area youth.
