City's 2011 Art and Craft Fair Offers Creative Gifts for Sale

The Greenbelt Festival of Lights Art and Craft Fair celebrates 40 years of providing creative gifts this year. Prospective buyers can again connect with artists selling original creations that make great presents for year-round giving. Handmade items create meaningful connections between giver and receiver, the maker and the local economy. The show will open Saturday, December 3 from 10 a.m. to 5 p.m. and Sunday, December 4 from 11 a.m. to 4 p.m. at the Greenbelt Community Center. There is no admission charge.

Artisans from Greenbelt and the surrounding region offer a wide range of creations including ceramics, jewelry, toys, fine arts, handbags, home goods, stationery, personal care products and more. Gifts for all occasions will fill the gym.

Additional attractions will include live music, hands-on workshops, a prize drawing and a café to benefit the Greenbelt Arts Center.

The "Humanities Mart" will feature gifts for all ages from the Greenbelt Museum, Greenbelt's 75th Anniversary Committee, publications by the Greenbelt Writers Group and more. Youth entrepreneurs and nonprofit exhibitors will also present their creations.

Greenbelt's Sector Plan Process Is to Be Extended to Early 2013

by Thomas X. White

At the November 16 meeting of the Greenbelt Advisory Planning Board (APB), Chad Williams, the project manager for the Greenbelt Area Sector Plan, provided updates on the ongoing Greenbelt Metro Area and MD 193 Corridor Sector Plan and Sectional Map Amendment process. The Sector Plan and Sectional Map amendment will guide the long-term growth and development in this area including land use, transportation, environmental infrastructure, public facilities and economic development among other issues.

In his report Williams noted that the fourth community workshop on the Sector Plan was held on October 13 at Greenbelt Middle School. The Sector Plan covers Greenbelt West including Beltway Plaza Mall, Franklin Park at Greenbelt Station, the MD 193 Commercial Corridor and Berwyn Heights Industrial Area. The workshop essentially ended the first phase of the planning process for the Sector Plan. He indicated a summary of the October 13 workshop would be posted on the agency's website at www.pgplanning.org/Greenbelt.htm and that an updated newsletter was mailed on November 15.

Williams also reported that the planning staff has requested a six-month extension for the planning process from the Prince George's County Council. If granted, the planning process and the plan approvals would occur in the first quarter of 2013 instead of the last quarter of 2012. Williams expressed regrets that the extension would likely preclude the Sector Plan adoption occurring at the time of Greenbelt's 75th Anniversary.

Upcoming Activities

In the meantime, a Prince George's Planning Staff meeting was scheduled for November 17 that would be a charrette-like planning session and include staff from other agencies. Williams indicated that he has prepared a draft memo on existing traffic

American Education Week November 13 to 19, 2011

In a celebration of American education, these columns will be telling the stories of selected teachers from the schools that serve the Greenbelt community.

This week readers will get a glimpse inside Greenbelt Middle School and Turning Point Academy (see page 6). In coming weeks we will focus on Eleanor Roosevelt High, Springhill Lake, Magnolia and Greenbelt Elementary Schools.

Stephanie Blackwell Aids Special Students at GMS

by Amy S. Hansen

Many of Stephanie Blackwell's kids come past her in the cafeteria before class. She says good morning, makes eye contact and agrees that it is early. She has already started teaching.

Blackwell is a para-professional teacher's aide in Greenbelt Middle School's (GMS) Community Resource Instruction (CRI) program.

This is a program for special education students. "Everything they learn in the classroom, we bring it to life in the community."

Besides working with the curriculum of English, math, social studies and science, the goal of CRI is to move the students into society. The school wants to help these kids be as accepted as possible, ready to employ their skills.

Blackwell says it's not a hard job. Her students are a joy. "I get a good laugh from someone every day."

And the affection is mutual. If she is out, they ask her where she was and why she wasn't at school. "That's nice," she smiles "It means they care. It means I'm making a difference."

She's worked at GMS for 13

Wayne Davis: Guidance Counselor at GMS

by Amy S. Hansen

Wayne Davis walked in the Labor Day parade, ready to carry the Greenbelt Middle School (GMS) banner if the students needed help. He participated at the District 2 School Showcase, where all the schools had displays and information available for parents. And he is ready to show off GMS to prospective parents. Last year he organized three tours between January and May 2011.

This year the tours started earlier. "I am here to serve," he said during November's tour. Which is true, but he is also one of Greenbelt Middle School's best advocates.

He led the tour group outside to have a look at the new building rising from the dirt next to the parking lot. The building is on schedule for completion in July 2012.

"For 14 years I have worked at GMS," he said. "For 14 years I have heard about a new Greenbelt Middle School. Next year, I'll be able to say I've been here," he pointed at the old Greenbelt Middle School that is still in use. "I heard about the new building. And I have moved into it and used it."

Appreciation

Please know that your mailman, Tony Schiavone, and his entire family are deeply appreciative of all the support each and every one of you has shown him. We are working through the process and remain hopeful that Tony will be returned to his position with the United States Postal Service. There are not enough words to express how humbled we are by this groundswell of caring. I have never been prouder to have been born and raised in such a wonderful community. From our family to yours, we wish all of you a happy holiday season.

A Huge Thanks

To those who looked out for me when I could not look out for myself during last week's "out-of-body" transient global amnesia experience. I'm back. With special gratitude to everybody who pitched in on no notice during the News Review production period for the Nov. 17 issue to assure the paper got out and was on time.

Thank You Greenbelt

The two Help By Phone food pantries that serve Greenbelt and nearby areas sincerely thank the generous residents of Greenbelt for the van-loads of canned goods we have received during the past two weeks. Last week we received food collected by Greenbelt Cub Scout Troop 202 and this week it was the residents of Greenbriar. We also thank Greenbelt Boy Scouts and the Greenbelt Lions Club for sorting and delivering the food.

Reporter Keeps Learning As She Covers City Council

by Barbara Hopkins

When I answer the phone and hear the voice of our news editor Elaine Skolnik, my mind begins racing immediately for excuses, reasons why I can't report on the city council meeting I'm sure she will ask me to cover. Though my initial response is reluctance, unless I have a legitimate reason for not accepting, I find I always end up agreeing to the assignment.

Sure, I'd rather stay comfy at home watching Dancing with the Stars or the Bachelor and "enjoyable" is not the correct description of covering the city council. But the truth is – and I hesitate to say this in print, especially where I know Elaine will read it – I'd have to say I benefit by covering these meetings.

As a result of attending and writing about Greenbelt's City Council meetings, I've learned something about a number of subjects I probably never would have otherwise encountered: city planning, the workings of city governments, the county's Green Infrastructure Plan, the many interesting things that go on at the Beltsville Agricultural Research Center, the Playful City program.

Without these assignments, I would likely still have no idea what MWCOC is (Metropolitan Washington Council of Government) and I might be unaware that buildings can be built and insulated with straw or of the restraints on remodeling in a historic district. I would be less informed about the Purple Line and the workings of the county fire department.

I'm often amazed when I realize that I have some familiarity with a topic only because I covered a city council meeting when it was discussed. I can't help but think that all this exposure to new material and wrestling with it to produce a coherent story has increased the amount of wiring in my brain. And for one who checks the "over 65" box, that has to be an especially good thing.

Further Research

Sometimes I don't have a clue what council is talking about and it takes a thorough reading of background material put together by City Clerk Cindy Murray, often a little research (help from the Internet) and queries to Greenbelt citizens or members of city staff in order to put together a story that I hope represents the truth.

Though I have been reluctant to call on city staff, knowing surely they are busy and lacking time to educate a cub reporter, I have to say that, to a person, they have been exceedingly, cheerfully helpful – willing to enlarge my understanding by sharing their time and expertise. Their help, invaluable, is much appreciated.

I've been challenged to decide what is the real news of the meeting. In the beginning I tended to report on everything. Essentially I was providing minutes.

Writing about council meetings has helped me, I think, to become a better writer. Writers are usually instructed to "write what you know." And writing

Obituaries

Jane R. Stern

Jane Roberts Stern, 73, of Greenbelt died of cancer on Saturday, November 19, 2011, at her home.

Mrs. Stern was born in Baltimore and raised in Catonsville. Serving as a public school teacher in Baltimore City for over 30 years, she moved to Greenbelt in 2002 after the death of her husband.

A volunteer throughout her life, she was a docent at the Baltimore Zoo, program coordinator for the Catonsville Women's Club, member of the GHI Companion Animal Committee, volunteer for GIVES and assisted the elderly and any neighbor in need in her 5 Court of Gardenway. She was also a member of Sukyo Mahikari, a community-based spiritual organization. Through this practice of True Light, she offered support to animals of her Greenbelt neighbors.

With an active circle of life-long friends, Mrs. Stern traveled the world. Her other interests included scuba diving, playing Scrabble and reading books. She thought of others first every day of her life and her life was filled with the joy she brought to other people.

Mrs. Stern was preceded in death by her husband David Stern. She is the mother of Cindy Barbee and her husband Snick and Susan Stern. Besides her children Mrs. Stern is survived by her mother-in-law, Naomi Stern, seven brothers-in-law and nine sisters-in-law, in addition to one dog named Boo and a very depressed cat named Rocky.

As a celebration of her life, a memorial service will be held at 2 p.m. on Saturday, November 26 at Catonsville United Methodist Church, 6 Melvin Avenue, Catonsville, Md.

In lieu of flowers, expressions of sympathy may be directed in Mrs. Stern's memory to the National Park Foundation, 1201 Eye St., NW, Suite 550B, Washington, D.C. 20005.

College Park Youth Choir Will Perform

The College Park Youth Choir will perform at the Riverdale Presbyterian Holiday Celebration on Sunday, December 4 at 4 p.m. The church is located at 6513 Queens Chapel Road, University Park.

The Youth Choir Fall Concert will be held on Tuesday, December 20 at 7:30 p.m. at St. Andrew's Episcopal Church, 4512 College Avenue, College Park.

There is no admission fee.

UM Gamer Symphony Plays Fall Concert

The University of Maryland's Gamer Symphony Orchestra (GSO), which performs music drawn entirely from classic video games like Final Fantasy and new hits like Super Mario Galaxy, will give its annual fall concert on Saturday, December 3 at 2 p.m. in the Dekelbourn Concert Hall of the Clarice Smith Performing Arts Center. The show is free, family-friendly and open to the public. The hall will open at 1:30 p.m. for seating.

For three semesters in a row, the GSO has filled Dekelbourn, the largest performing arts space on the College Park campus. Highlights from this concert's repertoire include themes from Pokémon, Shadow of the Colossus and Civilization V.

GSO's 120-plus members include a 30-person chorus, which sings both on its own and together with the instrumentalists. Founded in 2005 by five students, the GSO works to establish video game music as a serious art form and uses it to bring new and younger audiences to orchestral performances.

GSO is the first organization of its type at the college level. In addition to performing, members organize yearly video game tournaments to raise money for the Children's National Medical Center in Washington, D.C., and engage in educational outreach endeavors with area high school students.

Details about the group as well as recordings may be found at umd.gamersymphony.org.

Saturday Is Support Small Business Day

Saturday, November 26 is the nation's second Annual Small Business Saturday. Taking advantage of the busiest shopping weekend of the year, the day is dedicated to encouraging support of the many small local businesses that create jobs, boost the economy and preserve neighborhoods around the country.

Part of a national movement to increase awareness of the critical role played by small businesses, the day's focus is on job creation; small firms have created 65 percent of new job growth. An important statistic in deciding whom to patronize is the fact that every $100 spent in locally-owned, independent stores returns $68 to the community through taxes, payroll and other local expenditures.

Gwen McCall, president/CEO of the county's Economic Development Committee, reminds shoppers that supporting local businesses is more than a one-day event – and encourages consistent patronizing of local small businesses, which are the backbone of the economy and the glue that holds communities together. That is especially true in the current economy when these local businesses most need community support.

years and isn't yet tired of the many field trips or the curriculum.

During a normal school day, students start with the creative arts classes – art, music, physical education and technology. For Blackwell, that means sitting near them and keeping students on task. She reminds them to keep their voices reasonable and, like she does in the cafeteria, works at socializing the kids.

Later in the language arts classes her duties are similar – helping and encouraging where students need it. Some of the students can't read, so she may read the stories out loud. Teachers use pictures for students whose brains work better with pictures.

They push the students to achieve the highest level of independence that they are capable of. When CRI students get to high school, Blackwell says, they will be in vocational training. The students work well on jobs such as landscaping and banquet preparation, where the overall job can be broken into small repeatable steps.

She says that the new school building will have more facilities that can be used with the CRI kids. And she praises GMS Principal Warren Tweedy for walking the halls and having a presence with the CRI students as well as the rest of the school.

Stephanie Blackwell's job grew out of what she did at home. The mother of three, one of her sons has autism. Through advocating for him she learned about possibilities for kids with significant learning disabilities. She also saw how much of a difference one teacher could make for her son.

Early in elementary school her autistic son had an exceptional teacher. "She saw what we saw," Blackwell said. With the teacher's help Terry was able to go much further, eventually graduating from the CRI program at High Point High School and landing a job at the Riderwood retirement community.

She became an advocate, testifying on Capitol Hill about the importance of special education. Even as her own children have graduated – one is in college – she continues to help other parents navigate the maze of getting services for special education students and she mentors kids who want to go to college.

"I'm giving back something," she said explaining one of the reasons she loves her job. "That's my passion."

Davis came to the school via administrative work at the University of the District of Columbia. After 25 years there, he retired. He said his wife wanted him to volunteer but he decided to be "selfish" and get paid. He commutes from his home in Cheltenham, near Andrews Air Force Base.

After admiring the brick and mortar Davis led the tour back to the current GMS library. Here was the real point of the tour, the faculty and the atmosphere of the school.

As we walked through the halls he pointed out the quiet. Students were working. Teachers were working. Yes, Davis admits, the change between classes is a little chaotic but it isn't unreasonable. "People can't really get a feel for this building unless you spend some time here," he said after the tour had dispersed.

And this building is a school he likes.

Davis' job as seventh grade guidance counselor means helping some 350 students identify career aspirations and register for classes. He works closely with students having emotional or discipline problems. He tries to be in constant contact with the parents and with the rest of the faculty. He also monitors students who may have learning disabilities.

"I think it's a crime that there are kids with learning disabilities that get to this level and have never been screened," he said. "These kids could get by in elementary school. We should be able to screen any child whose parents ask for it. Parents should know to ask."

This year Davis and his intern are creating a mentoring program specifically for Hispanic students. He also has helped with Saturday school for students who need extra help.

His overall goal is not only to help the school make Adequate Yearly Progress – the state standard for students' test scores – but to help grow self-motivated learners. As an example, he points out his grandson's high school graduation picture.

"He told me last year, 'I don't want to take your money [for college], I'll find scholarships.' And you know what?" Davis asks with some pride, "He did."

American Education Week – Nov. 13-19

E. Anderson Leads Way with Challenges

by Jim Link

It's closing time at Turning Point Academy (TPA) on Friday at 2:30; anticipation is high; the bell rings and a lovely horde of K-8 students bursts into the corridors, scurrying to their buses and heading home for the weekend. Noisy? Yes. Chaotic or rough? No.

Directing this controlled traffic is Dr. Kenneth Jones, principal of the first charter public school in Prince George's County. Standing in the middle of the main corridor, he crisply insists, "Keep right!" and "No running!" Then the dapper, alert Jones leads me to the classroom of Eulalee Anderson, a teacher who he says "has no difficulty with children with challenges."

"Her students' test scores always improve; her children are always mannerly; I don't have to worry about them running in the corridors," he adds.

Born in Jamaica, Anderson speaks with a soft island accent, punctuating her speech with a soft smile. In her fifth year at TPA, Anderson has been teaching "for 26 years total in Jamaica and here," she says. Teaching third grade means she teaches "ev-everything – reading, math, social studies, science."

Anderson's destiny took her to TPA after a pair of twins she had taught at Berwyn Christian School enrolled there. Their grandmother praised her to Principal Jones, who contacted her for a job interview. Bingo, so to speak.

Satisfaction in Growth

What is most rewarding about teaching, Anderson says, is "the growth. Growth in academics and behavior. I love to get basic kids and see them move to proficient and then to advanced. I get very excited by that. That's my satisfaction," she said.

Maintaining classroom discipline is crucial according to Anderson. "I know a child cannot learn in a disruptive environment; teaching is ineffective in a disruptive environment. I try different strategies to quell stuff (acting out) at the beginning of the school year. If the first effort doesn't work, I go home and think, 'What can I do different the next day?' So I try another tactic, keep trying until I basically get it about perfect. It's never perfectly perfect," she smiles.

In addition to using this methodological flexibility, Anderson tries hard "to know my students and their different home environments."

What frustrates Anderson most about some home environments is parental indifference to their children's school assignments. "I can tell when parents have not supervised their children – their homework is missing completely or done incorrectly."

It's comforting to see her "Helping Hands" bulletin board with the names of the students who have done chores for Anderson or helped to decorate the classroom. And it's reassuring to realize the truth of her big poster: "Bully-Free Classroom."

Character Education Defines Baum's Style

by Jim Link

Dr. Kenneth Jones, principal of Turning Point Academy (TPA), had me liking Nicole Baum, his 6th grade reading teacher, even before I met her.

The helmsman of the elementary school (K-8, 543 students, 26 teachers) located on Good Luck Road in Greenbelt, explained that TPA concentrates on "character education." The mission of Prince George's County's first charter public school, begun in 2006, as he said, is "to point young people in the right direction."

To this end Nicole Baum is a great asset. "This is her second year here and she hasn't missed a beat since she came on board. There is no difficulty in her classroom; she has a real passion for teaching and is constantly honing her pedagogical skills," he said.

Ensnared in her temporary classroom on the back parking lot of the school, Baum assures me she and her colleagues have not been relegated to some academic Siberia. Actually their rooms are quite sturdy and acoustically muffled. Her professional touch brings its prevailing intimacy and brightness.

In her fourth year in Prince George's County, Baum lost her job when her previous school eliminated the 6th grade.

"The kids went to various middle schools and four teachers needed new jobs," Baum said. "I was intrigued by teaching at a charter school – I'm extremely happy I landed at TPA. I really enjoy mentoring my children; building interpersonal relationships is very important to me."

Nicole Baum

The reading department's chairperson and team leader, Baum says it's necessary "to know the students' families, the sort of support system the kids have. Our charter is character education, so I educate them not only in the classroom, but also try to be a role model."

Baum and her two other team members meet regularly, discuss student achievements and plan activities. They recently set up "an after-school intramural sports and homework club. If the students kept their grades up, they could play sports. It's a very positive experience for the kids and for me," she said.

Baum relies heavily on a computer program called Study Island: "It facilitates teaching the core skills the students need to learn by the end of the year."

Baum's voice trailed off slightly when she said, "I love working with middle school age students – not everybody does ..."

Skeptical Interviewer: "What about hormonal rage?"

Baum: "Well, it's a challenge. In a perfect world all my children would come in every day prepared with all their school supplies and homework complete. But we don't live in a perfect world. I'm pretty strict and I try to point them in the right direction, to help them grow, to become genuine young men and young ladies. Character building and mentoring is a dimension we have here that makes us unique."

A Philadelphia native, Baum ended the interview by pointing out her Philadelphia Sports Wall, where newspaper headlines blazoned the Phillies' recent World Series victory. "We are winners!" one said. The same could be said of Baum and her students.

Kliman to Speak at Lecture Series

On Thursday, December 8 former Greenbelter Andrew Kliman, Ph.D., will lead a discussion based on his new book "The Failure of Capitalist Production: Underlying Causes of the Great Recession" at the Takoma Park Community Center Auditorium.

Kliman grew up in the 58 court of Crescent Road, where his mother, Itsy Kliman, still lives. An economist, he is a tenured professor of economics at Pace University in New York. His brother Todd Kliman of Hyattsville is also an author who has given talks in Greenbelt and elsewhere about his own book, "The Wild Vine."

The book discussion starts at 7:30 p.m.

Donations Sought For Shop with a Cop

The Greenbelt Fraternal Order of Police will hold its third Shop with a Cop event on Saturday, December 10 at Beltway Plaza.

Shop with a Cop partners needy children from the community with police officers for a shopping outing where the officers help each child buy Christmas presents for their families and themselves, followed by a present-wrapping party with pizza. The children, who are selected by nominations from their elementary school, are each allotted a $100 budget for the shopping trip.

Shop with a Cop is funded by corporate sponsorships and community donations. Donations may be mailed to Greenbelt FOP, PO Box 94, Greenbelt, MD 20768 or dropped by the police station in an envelope marked Greenbelt FOP/Shop with a Cop.

For further information contact Tim White at 301-379-8191 or Twhite@greenbeltmd.gov or Scott Kaiser at 301-474-7200 or Skaiser@greenbeltmd.gov.

Murder Suspect Gets Life Plus 30

On November 10, 2011, Rydell Lee Estep was sentenced in the Prince George's County Circuit Court to life in prison plus 30 years with no possibility of parole for the murder of 16-year-old Jericka Chambers. Chambers was fatally shot outside an apartment building in the 5900 block of Cherrywood Lane. After an intensive four-week investigation, Greenbelt detectives identified the suspect and obtained an arrest warrant for Estep.

On September 22, 2011, Estep was found guilty of four charges, including First Degree Murder.

Craze Urges Enactment Of Communications Act

On Tuesday, November 15 Greenbelt Chief of Police James R. Craze, speaking on behalf of the International Association of Chiefs of Police and joined by U.S. senators and representatives, called on members of the Joint Committee on Deficit Reduction (the so-called "Super Committee") to include in their proposal to Congress the "Public Safety Spectrum and Wireless Innovation Act," a measure they claim would reduce the deficit by $6.5 billion. This proposed legislation would create a nationwide communications network for public safety officials to use during emergencies.

Craze was joined by public safety first responder colleagues from across the nation. Creating this network is one of the few remaining recommendations of the 9/11 Commission report not implemented. The measure would provide the public safety community with sole control of the airways within a radio frequency spectrum and also the funding needed to deploy a nationwide, inter-operable broadband network.

The Department is offering a reward of up to $1,000 for information leading to the arrest and conviction of a suspect in any of the unsolved crimes reported in the blotter.

Sing Along at Free Bach Cantata Series

The University of Maryland School of Music will present the second performance in the Bach Cantata Series on Thursday, December 1 at 1:30 p.m. in the Grand Pavilion of the Clarice Smith Performing Arts Center.

The Bach Cantata Series is dedicated to exploring the more than 200 extant cantatas of J. S. Bach through informal performances by students and friends of the UMD Choral Activities. The cantata to be performed, "Nun Komm, Der Heiden Heiland (BWV 610)," was written by Bach for performance on the first Sunday of Advent.

All singers are welcome. A rehearsal will be held before the performance from 12:15 to 1 p.m. in Room 2201, near the Music Department.

No reservations or tickets are required for the audience. Admittance is on a first-come, first-seated basis, beginning 30 minutes before the event. For directions or more information visit claricesmithcenter.umd.edu or call 301-405-2787.

Electric Supplier Info Now Online

The Maryland Public Service Commission (PSC) has launched an online portal that allows electricity suppliers to upload their most current offers to the PSC's website. Consumers can search the website to identify licensed suppliers and to find any current offers suppliers have uploaded.

Information includes specific details to assist potential buyers shopping for a new electricity supplier, such as the duration of the contract, the cost of electricity per kilowatt hour, any applicable contract cancellation fees and a link to the supplier website.

Because electricity rates are subject to fluctuation, each supplier is required to update its offer information at least once a month. The accuracy of the information and number of open offers on the portal is based solely on data uploaded by each supplier. The PSC advises consumers to review all offer information carefully and to note key contract terms such as early termination fees. Visit the site on the PSC's web page at www.psc.state.md.us.

conditions that reflects A or B conditions for most East-West traffic in the plan area and E or F (failing) conditions for North-South flows. Following the staff charrette Williams said that the results, including preferred alternatives, would be shared with the community. No time frame for a meeting with the community was given.

Williams also noted that a mid-January 2012 meeting is planned with consultants. Community workshops including another youth workshop will likely resume in May 2012. Following the second round of community workshops a joint public hearing of the Prince George’s Planning Board and the County Council would be scheduled around October 2012.

In his interactions with the City’s APB at the meeting, Williams noted that his group is mindful of various activities taking place outside of the Sector Planning process that may have impacts on the overall plan. He and his group are well aware of the Greenbelt Middle School issues and especially the county’s planning for a school bus lot for the northern area of the county. They are also following the ongoing discussions among the community and WMATA and “The-Bus” agencies on possible modifications to the area bus routes. Members of the APB advised him that they are in the final stages of approving a comprehensive Pedestrian & Bicycle Master Plan for Greenbelt and hoped that that effort would be considered in the Sector Plan process.

APB members were also interested in the likelihood of land-use or zoning changes being included in the Sector Plan process and Williams indicated that some zoning change recommendations may be included in the final Sector Plan and Sectional Map Amendment. He noted that there was some feeling that the Sector area may have too much retail and may need additional residential development. Further he noted that with the long delay in realizing potential development of the Greenbelt Metro sites, there could be a potential downgrade of the Metro site from “Metro Center” status to “Regional Center.”

APB members also noted the sensitivity related to the public open space needs in the area and the proposed plans for Beltway Plaza redevelopment. Williams noted that with Beltway Plaza’s proposals, the owners felt that the site-plan proposal for the rear parking lot (Breezewood Lane) appears to be driving the (plans) for the existing shopping center. He also noted that possible public recreational uses for the state owned conservation site between Cherrywood Lane and the Metro Property will be considered.

Be Bright About Light

Artificial lighting accounts for nearly half the electricity used in office buildings. Turn off lights whenever leaving a room and invite a natural light wherever possible. Buy Energy Star-rated lightbulbs and fixtures, which use at least two-thirds less energy than regular lighting and install timers on motion sensors that automatically shut off lights when they’re not needed.

HOPKINS

up a council story challenges a reporter to get to know something, fast.

Sometimes I make a mistake, the reading public rightfully complains and that doesn’t feel good. But also sometimes someone takes the time to say they enjoyed my story, or to thank me for explaining something and enlightening them. They may not be aware, of course, that I was enlightened myself while writing the story and that their expressed gratitude is another reward for the effort it took.

Either way, it helps me grow as a writer and a person.

Curiosity Increased

In short, reporting on city council meetings has stimulated my curiosity. It has taken me down streets I never thought about traveling. It has challenged me as well to make a story as interesting as I possibly can about a subject that may be pretty dry – or at least to be concise and clear while relaying the information.

City council meetings can be boring, they can be long, they can use what might as well be a foreign language later to be decoded. On the up side, reporting them can broaden one’s knowledge, give a deeper appreciation for the workings of city government and the dedication of its staff and, of course, challenge one to improve as a writer.

The News Review does not have a large pool of reporters, even fewer willing to cover city council meetings. We could use more.

The “pay” is minimal, of course; there is no health insurance or paid vacations or holidays. But there are snacks, the camaraderie of convivial people and the personal satisfaction and sense of accomplishment from accepting and meeting a challenge.

And exercise for the brain. Give it a try; you might be surprised and find yourself willing to do it again.

Why Is It Necessary To Replace Missing Teeth?

Dr. David McCarl, Dr. Clayton McCarl,
Dr. Monica Mattson, Dr. Jay McCarl
McCarl Dental Group

Replacing a missing tooth is important for several reasons. When you lose a tooth, your jawbone gradually loses strength and firmness, causing bone loss and changes in facial features. The loss of even one tooth can cause an unstable bite and chewing problems. Because remaining teeth often shift, proper cleaning becomes more difficult leading to periodontal problems and tooth decay. Teeth that have shifted no longer fit together properly, which can create excessive wear, headaches, and many other problems. There are also concerns associated with the appearance of a smile with missing teeth. First impressions are made at a glance and nothing makes a better impression than a beautiful smile. Most adults feel extremely self-conscious about a gap in their smile.

A dental implant restored with a crown looks, feels and functions like a natural tooth. Dental implants are safe, reliable and effective for single and multiple tooth restoration. Implants are made of a biocompatible titanium alloy and are placed in the jawbone, where they fuse to the bone, replacing the root of the tooth. In many cases, a temporary crown can be placed on the tooth immediately and replaced with a permanent crown. Implants typically last a long time (they won’t decay), and they are the best restorations in cases where the neighboring teeth are healthy and properly aligned.

With the recent advances in minimally invasive dental implants, more patients are candidates for permanent tooth replacement. Mini dental implants are popular because of their immediate use and also because they are less invasive, less expensive, and heal faster than traditional implants. The most common use of mini dental implants is stabilization of dentures.

The bottom line for many dental implant patients is that for the first time since they have had dentures, they can actually talk and chew without being afraid that their dentures will fall out or shift causing sores in their mouths. Patients are able to remove and replace the denture easily so that they can clean their gums and dentures daily.

Every dentist should listen to their patients’ concerns and goals for dental health and present a range of treatment options so the patient can choose a plan which best suits their dental needs.
