Council Considers Cost Increases For Trash Removal, Other Models

by Matthew Arbach

City Manager Josué Salmerón, left, holds the microphone to John Lippert, right, who holds up a large-sized trash bag that could be used under the proposed fee-per-unit model.

During its May 5 worksession, the Greenbelt City Council discussed several options to deal with the serious financial situation concerning the city's solid waste removal program. Serving a quarter of the city, comprised of 1,600 Greenbelt Homes, Inc. (GHI) homes and 900 single-family homes, the city has largely been subsidizing the service from its general revenues for several years, causing the city to fall behind. The city has not changed the fee in nine years, with the problem compounded

Greenbelt Cinema Celebrates Its Ten Years as a Nonprofit

by Melissa Sites

At a special gala celebration at Greenbelt Cinema on Saturday, May 3, supporters heaped praise upon the revivification and growth of the Cinema, a long-standing Greenbelt institution, which has flourished over the past 10 years under the leadership of Executive Director Caitlin McGrath. Mayor Emmett Jordan praised the Cinema for "promoting the arts and thriving as a nonprofit, both with films and its educational components." Proclamations in honor of the Cinema were given by Jordan, City Council, State Senator Alonzo Washington and State Delegates Nicole Williams and Ashanti Martinez.

Councilmember Danielle McKinney remarked, "I love that the Cinema offers so many different options for our diverse community. I love that it does a lot of programming for young children and families, like on snow days, to be able to come and have an activity for children — that's important, that educational and awareness component. This is a place that's a hub of conversation. I really appreciate that they showed the Six Triple Prince George's County Fire Department data shows the recent average response times in Greenbelt (right) compared to a similar period a year earlier, before the removal of career firefighters.

Since the removal of career firefighters from Greenbelt on June 30, 2024, the Greenbelt community worried about longer response times and reduced service provided to the community. At the time of the announcement, Prince George's County Fire Department (PGFD) Chief Tiffany Green estimated the average response time would be around eight minutes. Before the staffing reallocation plan the average response time in Greenbelt had been close to four minutes (see the June 13, 2024, News Review issue). In a series of letters sent to Mayor Emmett Jordan, Green has provided updates on the state of fire and EMS service in the Greenbelt area.

Increasing Average Response Times

The average response time for all types of calls from June 30, 2024, through December 28, 2024, sat at just under six minutes according to the January 3, 2025, letter. The time period encapsulates the early portion of the "staffing relocation plan." The latest update from Green reports the average response time for any type of call has increased to six minutes and 25 seconds

Refugee Resettlement Organization Rallies to Continue Despite Freeze

by Ryan Colasanti

On January 20, President Donald Trump announced the future suspension of the U.S. Refugee Admissions Program (USRAP) for an initial period of 90 days due to the country's inability to "absorb large numbers of migrants, and in particular, refugees, into its communities in a manner that does not compromise the availability of resources for Americans, that protects their safety and security and that ensures the appropriate assimilation of refugees," according to a press release on the White House website. The administration also halted Department of State funded services to recently resettled

Letters to the Editor

Successful GCC Donation Drive

On behalf of the Greenbelt Community Church, I'd like to thank the community for their continued support of our donation drives. For the past several years, the church has collected your boxes and bags of household goods, books, clothes and more with the goal of keeping your unwanted treasures out of landfills and giving them a second life. After the Saturday and Sunday collection, we drive the trailer to Value Village in Hillandale. The trailer is weighed, and the church receives payment based on the weight of items. We have supported various nonprofits and causes with the funds collected over the years including those that support the environment, hunger relief and human rights. For the goods we collected at the end of April, we raised $624.40 for the Greenbelt Emergency Assistance Fund. Thanks to Sandy Hamlin and Ken Voigt for their efforts for this event. See you next October 25 to 26.

More Thanks Due

Thanks for publishing my letter to you and Greenbelt residents. I had to minimize my original post to you and, in doing so, neglected a thank you to Nelly Ortiz, former supervisor of the Greenbelt Animal Shelter.

Although no longer in her position in Greenbelt, Ortiz stepped in during the interim from her current position at the New Carrollton Shelter, while Trap-Neuter-Return (TNR) funding and management turnover were being settled. She spayed, neutered and TNR'd 10 cats as a help to my program.

Again, help me thank Ortiz for all her hard work and dedication to helping cats in our city!

William Tell

It's 1307 and the Holy Roman Empire is in turmoil. As its grip on Europe loosens, new dynasties such as the Austrian Habsburg family encroach on new lands, desperate for power. Switzerland, the once peaceful country, is overwhelmed and bows under the Austrian might. When the local huntsman William Tell (Claes Bang) sees a farmer begging for help after murdering a cruel Austrian governor, he reluctantly agrees to guide him to a safe location. But as he meets with more comrades along the way, Tell realizes that this act of violence is a larger sign of what's to come with the growing Swiss resistance. Tell is drawn into the madness when the cruel Austrian Viceroy Gessler (Connor Swindells) orders him to shoot an apple from his son's head for refusing to bend the knee to Austrian authority. Once Tell's family has been threatened, there is no turning back. Tell not only commits to joining the resistance but ends up leading the fight against the Austrian forces. Scarred by his own experience in the depravity and destitution of war during the Crusades, he comes to realize what matters most: his family and preserving his country's independence for future generations.

The President's Wife

Long the woman-behind-the-man, Bernadette Chirac (Catherine Deneuve) arrives at the presidential Elysée Palace in 1995 frustrated and all but cast off by her newly elected husband, Jacques (Michel Vuillermoz). Having always worked in his shadow to help his ascent to the presidency, Madame Chirac now fully expects to finally get the place in the political elite she believes she deserves. In Léa Domenach's whip-smart feature film debut based on true events, Madame Chirac's rise from invisible political spouse to major media figure – as calculated as it was inevitable – is chronicled with equal parts reverence and wit, driven by Deneuve's wryly memorable central performance.

Pride and Prejudice

In this adaptation of Jane Austen's beloved novel, Elizabeth Bennet (Keira Knightley) lives with her mother, father and sisters in the English countryside. She faces mounting pressure from her parents to marry. When the outspoken Elizabeth is introduced to the handsome and upper-class Mr. Darcy (Matthew Macfadyen), sparks fly. Although there is obvious chemistry between the two, Darcy's overly reserved nature threatens the fledgling relationship.

Mirai

In this animated feature, a young boy named Kun feels forgotten by his family when his little sister Mirai arrives. Running away from home, Kun stumbles upon a magical garden that serves as a time-traveling gateway where he encounters his mother as a little girl and has a series of adventures with his baby sister who is all grown up, opening a new perspective on his world.

Find More Peace Through Meditation

In today’s world, many people have trouble falling asleep and feel stress or anxiety. Could meditation help them?

Katrina Boverman, a longtime meditation instructor with the SAGE program, and the Mishkan Torah Synagogue Sisterhood have quietly offered summer Guided Meditation classes to Greenbelters and others for the past 10 years. Although the synagogue itself is a peaceful setting welcoming to all, meditation will again be offered via Zoom for those who prefer to attend from the comfort of home.

Attendees have expressed quieting of their bodies, minds and spirits, a deepening of inner stillness and a better ability to reconnect with themselves. They have described feeling more peaceful, serene, relaxed, mindful and present, both during and between the classes. Common experiences outside of the class for participants have been greater ease falling asleep and more patience during challenging times.

Classes begin Monday, June 2 from 3:45 to 4:45 p.m. for seven sessions, held every other Monday through August 25. There is no charge; donations are welcome.

For more information email Katrinaboverman@yahoo.com or call 301-641-1035.

Margaret Warner

Margaret Warner

Margaret Warner, 84, died peacefully in her sleep on the morning of January 11, 2025, in Peterborough, N.H.

Born in 1940 in Exeter, N.H., Margaret lived in various small towns in New Hampshire as a child. She attended the University of New Hampshire where she earned a bachelor’s degree in chemistry, and later graduated from the University of Maryland Library School with a master of library science degree.

She moved to Greenbelt Homes, Inc. in 1971 and lived there for the next 35 years. She worked for all those years as a librarian at Prince George’s Community College, and was active in the Paint Branch Unitarian Church, singing in their choir. She retired in 2006 and returned to her roots in Antrim, N.H., where she was very active in the town (leading their library board), Peterborough Unitarian Church, The Monadnock Chorus and the community.

With a particular fondness for children’s literature, Margaret travelled widely around the country and to Europe to attend children’s literature conferences, where she hobnobbed with noted authors and collected signed volumes of their works. She cultivated a large personal library, not only of children’s literature but other literature as well. She cracked open a book whenever she had a spare moment and would often start and end her day reading in bed.

Margaret always had pets, mostly dogs and cats (with a few gerbils, hamsters and skinks when she had young children). She loved little more than sitting propped up in bed, a dog on one side of her and a cat nestled on the other, a book in her lap and a cup of coffee on the bedside table.

Margaret loved gardening, music and singing, travel and the theater and loved her family. She is survived by her sons Jason (Needham, Mass.) and Jeremy (Bethesda) and her granddaughters Melissa (Medford, Mass.), Asha (Lansing, Mich.) and Sarah (Needham, Mass.).

Junior's foster says he's a gentle soul. He's super affectionate and loves to be wherever the household action is. His favorite activity is sitting by the door or window and watching the local wildlife and ongoing outside (he's a great neighborhood watch). REFUGEES continued from page 1

Relations for Lutheran Social Services of the National Capital Area (LSSNCA), which has a headquarters in Greenbelt. “What we didn’t expect is the work that we had been contracted for and funds had been appropriated for, to all of a sudden, overnight, be turned off.” A statement from the organization in January said, “The stop work order abruptly ends critical wraparound support LSSNCA had planned to provide refugees who arrived with legal status as recently as two weeks ago.”

Greenbelt Office

LSSNCA’s Greenbelt office is on the 12th floor of a Greenway Center office building. Inside there are still cheerful staff, a cozy waiting area with some playful elements for children, a bulletin board full of flyers advertising assistance with an array of things ranging from social security numbers and work authorization to enrolling children in schools, TB tests, English classes, WIC and even clothing. Though it’s welcoming inside, a note taped to the door reminds people to keep it locked.

Aid to Refugees

The LSSNCA was one of several refugee welcome agencies that were impacted by the suspension of USRAP. The organization started in 1917 and works throughout the region in Washington, D.C., Virginia and Maryland, according to their website. The group provides a range of services starting with the reception of refugees at the airport, Hirut Gebretsadik, communication manager for LSSNCA, told the News Review. The case managers assigned to welcome those refugees continue to help them find jobs, homes, pay rent and sign their children up for local schools throughout their first 90 days in the country. In addition to those services, LSSNCA also helps with wellness and legal services and pairs minors traveling alone with host families through the D.C. foster care system. The organization welcomed over 550 refugees through their Greenbelt office and helped over 4,000 refugees in total during its 2024 fiscal year. In the span of time between October 2024 through the suspension date (January 24, 2025) the organization welcomed over 300 refugees through the Greenbelt office, according to Gebretsadik.

Cuts and Layoffs

The capacity for aid dwindled when the freeze caused the organization to lay off 65 of its case workers. “You have refugees sitting, [they] just entered the United States, they know that they’re promised certain services, but then we don’t have case managers to be handling those, to be providing those services,” said Gebretsadik.

The turmoil caused an abundance of confusion for refugees in the country, Gebretsadik said. Some even contemplated returning to their home country despite the great risk of returning. “It was an extremely dark time,” she said. Throughout the “dark time” the organization powered through, thanks to the flexibility of its own employees and contributions from the community around them.

Coping

Once the organization communicated its struggles to the public, individuals and families came forward in bunches to ask how they could help, said Gebretsadik. Volunteers quickly became the lifeblood of the organization by donating time, money and even food to the cause. Other volunteers became case managers – following a training course – replacing those that were laid off due to the lack of funding. Roles within the organization also shifted. Gebretsadik went above and beyond in her role as communication manager, talking with refugees regularly when their case managers just disappeared, almost acting as a case manager herself.

“Positions were rearranged,” said Roche. “... With those shifts we were able to, for the most part, keep operations going as best as we could.” Roche added that the restructuring of the organizational depth chart required a ton of communication internally to make sure everyone understood what was happening at any given moment.

Due to LSSNCA’s ability to adapt and the influx of volunteers ready to help in any capacity, the organization is weathering the storm and continuing services as best they can. On April 20, the initial 90-day reassessment period mentioned in the press release ended, which is when a report from U.S. Secretary of Homeland Security Kristi Noem and Secretary of State Marco Rubio on USRAP status was to be sent to the President for him to consider the resumption of the program. According to an article by Forbes published on April 28, there has been no public announcement on whether the report was sent to the President or what information it contained.

Roche is hoping that the report means she and her organization can return to helping refugees in the capacity they did before January 24 when the stop work order was officially issued.

“I think this is my eternal optimism coming through,” she said. “I would love for it to be a ‘we looked at the structures, at the process and we believe that we can resume.’”

Rude Mechanicals Bring Much Ado to Greenbelt Arts Center

by Melissa Sites

In Shakespeare’s Much Ado About Nothing, Benedick (Erin Nealer) and Beatrice (Rebecca Korn) are possibly the bard’s most relatable couple. Intellectual equals, they pretend they don’t want to be partnered, when actually they’ve been dancing around each other so long that their family and friends are ready and willing to plague them about it. Crucially, they both care enough about their loved ones to take action when bad things happen.

Things take a bad turn when Benedick’s young friend Claudia (Claudia H. Bach) proclaims she will marry Beatrice’s cousin Hero (Peri Walker), even though they haven’t even spoken. Director Shirley Long, casting women in the roles of Benedick, Claudia and Joan (originally Claudio and John), complicates the idea of “toxic masculinity” by demonstrating how patriarchal ideals harm everyone in the play, regardless of their gender. Nealer plays Benedick as a little awkward and sweetly vulnerable, while Bach’s Claudia is emotional and easily duped. Hero is sweet, bright-eyed and alert, which makes it all the more sad when she is targeted by evil.

The play’s villain is “Joan the Bastard” (Joann Robertson), Prince Pedro’s evil elder sister. Robertson plays Joan as bitter and willing to score malevolent points without a care as to who will suffer. Because Pedro (Wes Dennis) seems like a fair and honorable prince, Joan’s villainy stands out more starkly.

Dogberry (Daniel Douek), the captain of the guard, is one of Shakespeare’s funniest comic characters, because he always uses the wrong words and consistently misunderstands his role as night watchman. In this production, Dogberry wears a police light strapped to his head and comically zooms about on a tiny Segway, which seems as if it will certainly lead to some hilarious accident. The night watch have overheard Joan’s vile minions and must thwart their evil plan, and it is fun to see sleek villains foiled by bumbling good guys.

This show includes a lot of fun physical comedy, while the more tragic elements are played down. The Rude Mechanicals make the play accessible, appealing and understandable for lovers of Shakespeare and novices alike.

Much Ado about Nothing will play at Greenbelt Arts Center Friday and Saturday this weekend, May 16 and 17, at 8 p.m. Visit greenbeltartscenter.org.

Film Depicts Faith Petric’s Life of Fearless Activism

by Donna Hoffmeister

The documentary, Singing for Justice, about folk musician and activist Faith Petric will screen Monday, May 19 at 6:30 p.m. at the New Deal Café. Born in an Idaho log cabin in 1915, Petric helped migrant workers during the Great Depression and worked as a Rosie the Riveter building Liberty ships during World War II. Despite facing FBI surveillance during the Cold War, Petric continued her activism, marching for racial justice in Selma, Ala. In her 80s, she protested war as part of the Raging Grannies movement.

Singing for Justice showcases how Petric used folk music – including union anthems, protest songs, traditional ballads and humorous tunes – to inspire action and solidarity. Throughout her long career, Petric performed at civil rights marches, anti-war protests and events supporting labor and LGBTQ+ rights. “In times of darkness, Faith showed that a well-sung song could light the way forward,” says Estelle Freedman, director of the film, who will attend the screening via Zoom.

The Labor Heritage Foundation (LHF), sponsor of the film, is a Washington, D.C.-based nonprofit working to preserve America’s labor history through art and music. Elise Bryant, former executive director of LHF will lead the post-film discussion.

Following the film, attendees will enjoy a special performance by the acclaimed D.C. Labor Chorus. They are bound to ignite a community sing-along. Note that the film’s start time of 6:30 p.m. is earlier than usual. While the film is free, the Café has a dinner menu with several plant-based options available for purchase. Those unable to attend in person can register to watch via Zoom at tinyurl.com/RnMMay25.

the big screen. Councilmember Kristin Weaver enjoys the collective experience of seeing movies at the Cinema, “learning stories that I wouldn’t have thought to go looking for,” remembering that the showing of the Six Triple Eight was attended by representatives and relatives of the real-life heroes. Former mayor J Davis and Greenbelt Black History and Culture Committee member Lois Rosado pointed out that different groups often cooperate to help bring events to the Cinema, such as the documentary that preceded Tyler Perry’s film and the proclamation given at the Cinema to one of the woman soldiers by former mayor Colin Byrd. Community member Judy Goldberg-Strassler said, “We just keep coming here for all the great movies and the fabulous speakers.”

McGrath remembered having a booth at the Greenbelt Farmers Market 10 years ago, “with a jar and an idea about what this place could become,” a vision of returning the Cinema to the community resource it was always meant to be, “watching hard things, talking about difficult subjects, laughing collectively, finding common ground.” McGrath thanked “the wisdom of our city council who made sure this space survives,” as well as the Cinema’s board of directors and administration team. McGrath noted two particularly outstanding community moments: at a showing of Elf, where people made snowballs out of new socks to be given to people in need, a man came in and gave all the cash he had in his wallet. Another donor gave $20,000 in honor of the longevity of the Cinema, being able to see movies that are not mainstream and to hear the lecture and discussion series. McGrath outlined plans to expand the Cinema’s already wide array of programming, to include Baby and Me, sensory friendly showings, Book vs. Movie events and an Advancing the Frame program to empower middle school girls.

The gala opened with local broadcasting icon and eight-time Emmy winner Arch Campbell giving signed copies of his book, The Accidental Critic: A Television News Memoir, to members of the crowd. A silent auction was held alongside a fun trivia contest about film history, including film clips, soundtrack music and an impressive array of head shots of “nepo babies” to test attendees’ knowledge. Food trucks and a move to Roosevelt Center rounded out the evening of entertainment and celebration.

by the county recently raising its landfill tipping fee. City Manager Josué Salmerón expressed the need for a “sustainable” approach, seeing that “now is as good a time as any” to finally adjust the model.

Attending the meeting to provide recommendations were representatives from Green ACES, Waste Zero, the GHI Board and the city’s Sustainability Coordinator, Luisa Robles.

The city asked Green ACES to provide a recommendation on raising the trash and recycling fee. John Lippert, representing Green ACES, proposed raising the fee from the current $280/year to $360/year, matching the county charges. This possible increase would start at the onset of Fiscal Year 2026.

Save As You Throw
To illuminate a further Green ACES proposal, the mission-driven benefit corporation Waste Zero (wastezero.com), represented by Kristen Brown, was on hand to present what Green ACES has dubbed a “save as you throw” (SAYT), or unit-based pricing system. The program would comprise a flat base fee, with participants then responsible for purchasing their own city-approved trash bags, sized small, medium and large, to be used in any combination needed. Brown said that her experience with SAYT in other states has been a lower cost for most consumers and a decrease in the amount taken to landfills, with an increase in recycling, reusing and donations. For those not wishing to take part in the SAYT model, an opt-out, convenience fee would be charged.

Green ACES suggested a flat fee of either $220 or $240 per year, with an opt-out fee of $410. Bag prices for those participating in SAYT would be: small $.80; medium $1.25; and large $2. Before the SAYT program could commence, Waste Zero would have to work with local vendors to carry the bags, with the city getting a cut of proceeds. A period of public education by the city and Waste Zero would also be required.

Participation Effects
Based on these metrics, a spreadsheet was shared showing possible participation rates and the corresponding financial surplus or deficit that could result. A higher participation rate meant less of a possible surplus, depending on the fee the city decides to charge, as fewer people would be paying the higher opt-out fee.

Brown outlined a pressing nationwide problem of an insufficient number of landfills to support a rising population, with the number of new landfills being cited as not keeping up with demand. She said that many communities simply don’t want a landfill in their area. Brown said that waste removal should be seen as a utility, like power and water, with cost dependent on usage.

It was pointed out at the meeting that some developments use a private waste collector, charging a lower fee than the city. Yet, Robles cited that these private companies do not offer the same amount of extra services, like bulk trash and lawn waste removal, as does the city. Robles said that the SAYT model would still include the same city services currently offered.

GHI Views
Stefan Brodd, president of the GHI Board, shared the sentiments of GHI, that a SAYT model is possible, but any decision would preferably wait until formalizing the next budget. He worried about the administrative costs and efforts of this new program. Council and Robles noted Lippert said that Green ACES hopes that if the city adopts SAYT, part of the potential surplus revenue could go toward continuing to subsidize the curbside food scraps pickup program.

Mayor Pro Tem Kristen Weaver shared a recent survey of the program’s 410 participants, which indicated that 100 percent of respondents would be willing to pay $5 per month to continue, with the percentage going down for an added amount, ending with 15 percent willing to pay $25. The survey showed a high appreciation of the program.

It was pointed out at the meeting that a consumer charge for curbside composting could be negotiated with the Compost Crew provider. Council indicated that any final decision on much of this will have to wait until the current budget has been deliberated. Salmerón wanted at least a 30-day window to alert residents to any change, and that after the obligatory two resolution hearings, any implementation would occur in August at the earliest.

Salmerón cited the city’s $4M deficit and the contributing revenue drain that waste removal draws from the city’s reserves, at $10,000 per month. He said that council faces a tough choice on this issue, and must move forward based on an informed decision.

that these details would need to be ironed out.

Food Scraps Pickup

The future funding of the city’s curbside compost removal was discussed. At the moment, the service is free, subsidized by a USDA grant. The grant expires in August.

from June 30, 2024, through April 26, 2025. That’s nearly an eight percent increase from the January 3 update. (Editor’s note: This increase does not reflect the times for the most recent month compared to previous months, but rather the average calculated over the first six months compared to an average calculated for a ten-month period (including that first six months in calculations of a new average). In this way, each new average provided by PGFD is for cumulative months, thus an average calculated over an increasingly large number of data points.)

Fire and Rescue Response

While most of the response times across different call types have fluctuated during the four 2025 updates, two categories – fire response and rescue response – have steadily increased throughout the timeline of reports. The first report analyzing response time data between June 30, 2024, and December 28, 2024, reported the average response time of fire calls at four minutes and five seconds. That time increased by 10 seconds in Green’s January 31 update and escalated to four minutes and 21 seconds in her March 14 letter. The latest update containing data from June 30, 2024, through April 26, 2025, registers the average response time of fire-related calls at four minutes and 47 seconds with a total of 438 fire calls through April 26. Since the first report on January 3, 2025, the average response time to these specific calls has increased by 42 seconds. The average response time for rescue calls also steadily increased since the initial period of June 30, 2024, through December 28, 2024. In the January 3, 2025, report Green wrote that the average response time to those types of calls was four minutes and 36 seconds using data from June 30, 2024, through December 28, 2024. In the latest report sent on May 2, the average response time increased to five minutes and 26 seconds, according to data between June 30, 2024, through April 26, 2025. It’s an increase of about 18 percent, although it should be noted that the number of rescue calls increased by close to 42 percent over that time.

Who’s Responding

In Green’s May 2 update letter, there were a total of 3,338 responses in Greenbelt Fire Station’s first due area from stations all throughout Prince George’s County from June 30, 2024, through April 26, 2025. The station that responded to the majority of calls in the area was Berwyn Heights Station 814, which responded to over 26 percent of calls in the area (880 of the 3,338), increasing its number of responses by 140 from June 30, 2023, through April 26, 2024. In addition to Berwyn Heights’ increased response in the area, West Lanham Hills Fire Station and National Harbor Station responded to 17 percent and 13.4 percent of calls respectively; in the area from June 30, 2024, through April 26, 2025. Greenbelt Station 835 responded to 2.6 percent of calls during that stretch of time, a total of 86 responses out of the total 3,338 responses. By contrast, prior to the reallocation of career firefighters, from June 30, 2023, through April 26, 2024, Station 835 responded to the majority of calls in the area, responding 1,364 times out of a total 3,546 responses.

City Charter Amended to Reflect Increased Council Compensation

by Anna Bedford-Dillow

On April 28 the Greenbelt City Council amended the City Charter, Section 4 Creation; Qualifications; Compensation to raise the compensation of council. The motion passed 6 to 1 with Councilmember Rodney Roberts opposed.

Opening the public hearing, Mayor Emmett Jordan said council salaries had not been increased since November 2007 although a salary increase was approved during Fiscal Year 2024.

Resident Bill Orleans spoke in opposition to an increase, citing council's recent move to reduce the number of their meetings, among other things. He also objected to the process of council increasing the salary for the next body when it's highly likely six members will run for re-election and the appointed member will run for election, thus directly benefiting themselves, he said.

The process of a current council body voting on the compensation of a future one is how the process is supposed to work. In this case the vote to increase compensation was already taken in 2023 and is currently in effect but not reflected in the City Charter.

Former councilmember J Davis argued that councilmembers not only attend meetings but also talk with constituents and attend an assortment of city events.

The work of a councilmember is meeting with officials, going to conferences and includes after-hours activities, preparation and many other things if done correctly, said Davis. "The money is definitely deserved and should have happened probably years ago, while I was still on council."

There were no further comments from the public.

The change was already voted on during the last term, clarified Councilmember Kristen Weaver, saying the fact the council salary is in the city charter is why the amendment is needed.

The amendment changed the compensation the mayor receives from $12,000 a year to $14,000 and the salary of other councilmembers from $10,000 to $12,000. Council is already receiving compensation at this adjusted level.

Sports

Raiders Seek State Championship, Win County, Regional Titles in Softball, Lacrosse

by Patrick Gleason

With a trio of commanding victories on Monday, May 12, Eleanor Roosevelt High School spring sports teams have continued a successful campaign. The softball team started the afternoon with a never-in-doubt victory over the DuVal Tigers. The 16-0 triumph places the Raiders in the region championship against the Bladensburg Mustangs, who defeated the Flowers Jaguars 12-9. With a victory there, the Raiders would host a Saturday afternoon state quarterfinal, a day after the strong Roosevelt senior class celebrates their senior prom. Pitcher Natalia Jarquin – a Bowie State commit – hopes to repeat last season’s quarterfinal victory over the Richard Montgomery Rockets as the Raiders seek their first state championship since 1985.

Meanwhile, the girls lacrosse team traded early goals with DuVal, before pulling away in the fourth quarter. Juniors Isabelle Becraft and Madison Walker maintained the Raider offense after seniors Cora Moore and Alena Beckmann jump-started the reigning region champions in the third quarter en route to the 13-5 victory. The Raiders enter the state quarterfinals as the number two seed, where they will face a familiar Roosevelt sport foe – the Perry Hall Gators from Baltimore County. The softball squad defeated the Gators in the state semifinals last season, while the girls soccer team fell to them 2-1 this past fall. This is the girls’ fifth region championship.

Finally, the boys team capped Monday’s lacrosse doubleheader by coasting to a 14-1 win over Parkdale. Seniors Ifeoluwa Folorunso and Vishant Bhagat started the scoring for the Raiders in a convincing region final win. With that achievement in hand, Roosevelt will face North County High School next. The Raiders enter the quarterfinals as the state’s top seed after an undefeated regular season. With three county and three region titles in hand this spring, Roosevelt athletics now hopes to add to the impressive haul.

Green Man Festival Celebrates Environment, Local Music, Art

This year’s Green Man Festival, which was held on Saturday and Sunday May 10 and 11, landed on a sunny weekend and enjoyed a steady throng of festivalgoers, many adorned with flower headdresses, fairy wings or other costume pieces. Bands performed at the central stage in front of the Mother and Child statue and vendors lined Roosevelt Center selling clothing, jewelry, art and more. Children enjoyed making fairy gardens at one booth. There were also booths for local organizations, including the Chesapeake Education, Arts and Research Society (CHEARS), the organization that adopted the Green Man Festival in 2008, though the festival dates back to 2003. CHEARS offered saved seeds and sold commemorative Green Man T-shirts at their booth. The Roosevelt Center restaurants offered special fare and some set up outdoor stands. Puppets, including dragons, joined the dancers along with musicians parading through the first farmers market of the season on Sunday morning.

A spirited array of happy and rhythmic drummers gathered about 11 a.m. on Saturday, May 10 in the plaza at Roosevelt Center to open the annual Greenbelt Green Man Festival.

Greenbelt Farmers Market Season Opens for Summer

by Jake Ballard

Sunday, May 11 marked not only Mother’s Day but also opening day for the Greenbelt Farmers Market.

Going back to 2008, the Farmers Market has been a fixture of Greenbelt, starting the second Sunday of May every year. With the exception of Labor Day weekend, it runs until the week-end before Thanksgiving, returning for a special holiday market in early December.

The market has around 30 to 40 vendors each Sunday, but the vendors change week by week. Some are there weekly, but some are pop-up vendors, there about every other week or a certain series of weeks.

The market provides a plethora of options that go beyond the expected produce. Available products range from fruits and vegetables to things like Thai food, bread and soap. Timothy Obenshain, who described himself and his wife as regulars at the market, credited the variety as one of the main reasons that they keep coming back. “We usually stock up a little bit on vegetables, my wife likes getting fresh flowers every now and then,” Obenshain said, “and we buy soap here, we get fruit.”

The variety is only part of it though, as Obenshain also credited the community aspect as one of the reasons he keeps returning to the market. It allows people to see others from the community as well as support local farmers and vendors. The market is also community-led and mostly staffed by volunteers.

This year the convergence of opening day, Mother’s Day, the Green Man Festival and wonderful weather brought more people to the market than usual. Matt Cruz, who runs the tent for Agripina and Bloom, ran out of product quickly. “I brought all my stems with me today knowing that it was going to be busy,” Cruz said. “The community just really came out and supported it.”

The market is a hub of community for Greenbelt residents, but also the vendors. A micro-community has formed among the group.

Cruz said he finds everyone at the market easy to get along with, and that despite being a pop-up vendor, he is able to recognize the people around him and they have friendly relationships.

“[I notice] the vendors that are here regularly, how they communicate, and like they haven’t seen each other since whenever the market ended last year so you definitely see that camaraderie amongst them,” Cruz said.
