Deep Cuts to NASA Goddard Face Bipartisan Opposition in Congress

by Anna Bedford-Dillow

President Trump's budget request would drastically cut NASA – including a 50 percent cut to NASA Science that would remove nearly half (48 percent) of the approximately 1,700 civil servants at Goddard Space Flight Center (GSFC), warned Goddard Engineers, Scientists and Technicians Association (GESTA), the union representing GSFC federal workers. There appears to be broad Congressional support for a budget that would avoid such cuts. However, last week a Senate bill that would bolster GSFC's funding was waylaid by a battle over the future of another site with great significance to Greenbelt: the FBI Headquarters.

NASA's Science budget is the primary funding source for GSFC. However, Republicans began withdrawing their support for the Commerce, Justice, Science (CJS) bill following Senator Chris Van Hollen's (D-Md.) successful amendment to prevent funds being spent on an FBI headquarters in D.C.

On Monday, July 14, the House Appropriations Committee, also with bipartisan agreement, set their version at $6 billion for NASA Science. The bill was to be considered in subcommittee on July 15.

The current Senate version of the bill would cut $60 million from NASA Science and the House bill would cut

On July 10, the Senate Appropriations Committee amended the NASA Science budget to return it to existing levels, rejecting Trump Administration cuts which would reduce NASA's Science budget from $7.3 billion to $3.9 billion.

Indoor Pool Deck and Wading Pool Repairs Are on Schedule

by Will Hammann

The Greenbelt Aquatic & Fitness Center indoor pool remains on schedule to reopen no later than September 29, according to Andrew Phelan, assistant director of Recreation Facilities and Operations.

Phelan said there have been no significant setbacks to the indoor pool deck repair project, and he is confident the pool reopening will not be delayed. The outdoor pool will remain open for the full duration of the project.

In addition, repairs are underway to address a leak in the infant wading pool, which has long needed repair. The wading pool is an outdoor one, located in the corner closest to the Community Center.

The wading pool has operated intermittently for several years as a result of the leak, according to Phelan, but costs to repair it were lower than anticipated after the leak's source was confirmed, allowing funds for the repair to finally be allocated.

2024 Outstanding Citizen Meetre Still Works Behind the Scenes

When Cathie Meetre arrived at the Greenbelt Labor Day Festival's opening ceremony last year, she was in for quite a shock. She was thinking her family was inviting her for an evening out for dinner when in reality she was to receive the 2024 Outstanding Citizen award. Now a year later, she reflects on the humor of it

Senate Blocks Funding for Trump's FBI HQ in D.C., Supporting Greenbelt

The Senate Appropriations Committee voted last week to approve an amendment that would block the Trump administration from relocating the FBI headquarters to anywhere other than Greenbelt.

The current FBI headquarters is housed in the aging J. Edgar Hoover Building in Washington, D.C. While there is broad agreement that the agency needs a more secure and modern facility, debate over where to move it has dragged on for years.

The Trump administration and FBI officials announced plans earlier this month to redirect the $555 million set aside to build the FBI headquarters in Greenbelt, instead using the money to move the headquarters to the Ronald Reagan Building and International Trade Center in Washington, D.C.

"Moving to the Ronald Reagan Building is the most cost effective and resource efficient

Letters to the Editor

Helping Each Other And the Farmers!

The Greenbelt Farmers Market (GFM) would like to thank all patrons who agreed to round-up at the Co-op Supermarket and Pharmacy during the month of June and who donated at our table on the Co-op ramp. You helped us raise almost $3,000. We also learned that the Greenbelt Community Foundation has awarded GFM a $4,500 grant. Together, these funds will be used to increase the SNAP match at the Farmers Market for an extra $10 match. We anticipate serving at least 200 families. Those who receive SNAP or FMNP benefits, come as usual to the Info Table to receive the extra $10 Greenbelt local match.

The Board of the Greenbelt Farmers Market would like to thank Dan Gillotte and the Board of the Co-op for having chosen GFM for the Round-up Program.

Real Greenbelt Fans

This week, Teresa and I were reminded, again, of one of the many blessings of living in this community: the employees of Greenbelt and all the services they provide so well.

The reminder was a small thing. A tree in front of our house fell over, partly into the road. I had to chain-saw it into pieces, creating a pile on my front lawn for pickup by Public Works. I made the call and left a message. The next day the pile of branches was gone, without a twig left on the lawn.

The day before, Public Works picked up our trash and recycling on time and cleanly, despite the extraordinary heat. Just two days before that I had interactions with two of the employees of the Aquatic & Fitness Center: competent, friendly and caring, as they invariably are. Teresa enjoyed her pottery class at the Community Center. Walking to and from these activities, we passed the Youth Center bustling with programs. And on the Fourth of July holiday, the city team put on the terrific fireworks show they always do.

We moved here eight years ago. One of the constants has been how well this city is run, how much it offers the residents, and the quality, service and attitude of the Greenbelt staff. Thank you! As Teresa said this morning: "I'm a real fan of Greenbelt!"

David K. Aylward

Eagle Scout Project Benefits Youth Center

I am writing to share my Eagle Scout Project. As a resident of the City of Greenbelt for my whole life, I wanted to use my project to give back to my community. I helped to improve the outdoor area of the Greenbelt Youth Center by building two picnic tables and clearing out invasive plants around the patio area behind the building. I worked with volunteers from Scout Troop 214B to do this work.

For many years, I have enjoyed being a part of the many activities at the Youth Center, including Camp Pine Tree, Camp YOGO and Teen Takeover. When I was a camper, we used to have picnic tables outside where we ate food and played games. Over time, the tables began to fall apart and eventually had to be removed. My project was to build and sand new tables for all people to use, whether they're campers at summer camps or other people who use the space for various activities.

I would like to thank the many volunteers from my scout

Pamela Lambird

Pamela Lambird

It's been a year since Pamela Lambird, 72, of Greenbelt and Mt. Dora, Fla., died on July 12, 2024, in Greenbelt. A resident of Greenbelt for over 25 years and a recent resident of Florida, she was born in Washington, D.C., and raised in Montgomery County.

Pamela attended the University of Maryland and was the first in her extended family to graduate from college. She worked in a wide variety of jobs, from owning a day care center to managing a county recreation park in Florida to working for the City of Greenbelt, first for the Finance Department and then for Planning and Community Development. While working for the city she volunteered at the Greenbelt Animal Shelter where she cared for the animals and eventually adopted two cats. She retired from the city in 2013 and enjoyed giving back to the community by joining Greenbelt CERT and volunteering with the Bowie Community Theatre.

After she retired, she became a certified senior fitness instructor helping seniors stay active through classes at local adult centers. She joined many clubs: Toastmasters, the Red Hat Society, Mahjong and various knitting groups. Pamela and her husband were very active in the local dance community.

A lifelong artist, Pamela enjoyed painting and creating art projects. After retirement she could be found most days taking her morning daily walk or swimming at the Greenbelt Aquatic Center. She had a winning smile and was very much loved. She will be missed.

Pamela is survived by her husband, Steven M. Lambird, and two daughters, Elizabeth and Cassandra.

Senior Nutrition Program Luncheon

The Senior Nutrition Food and Friendship program provides lunch for seniors Monday through Friday at the Community Center beginning at 11:30 a.m. Meals must be reserved two weeks ahead so that enough food is ordered. Participants must complete a registration form in person at the Community Center office, Monday through Friday between 9 a.m. and 4:30 p.m. There is a suggested donation. Call 301-397-2208, ext. 4215 with questions.

Two menu options, one vegetarian, will be offered for each luncheon. All meals, which provide at least one third of recommended dietary allowances for older adults, include margarine, coffee or tea and skim milk.

PGCPS Offers Free Meals for Children

Beginning in July, Prince George's County Public Schools (PGCPS) will provide free meals to children 18 and younger on a first-come, first-served basis. This is separate from meals provided to children in summer programs. No registration or enrollment in the program is required. Each child must be accompanied by a parent or guardian.

The closest sites to Greenbelt are in Beltsville. Calverton Elementary School, 3400 Beltsville Road, will serve hot meals until July 31 from Monday to Friday - breakfast between 9 and 9:30 a.m. and lunch between 12:30 and 1 p.m. Bagged lunches will be offered at the Beltsville Library, 4319 Sellman Road, until August 7, Monday to Thursday from 1 to 2 p.m. Find the complete list of sites and service times here: pgcps.org/offices/food-and-nutrition/summer-meals. Find an interactive map for locating children's meals at mars.msde.maryland.gov/mars\_sitesearch/.

Our condolences to the family, neighbors, colleagues and students of Pamela Lambird who died on July 12, 2024. She was a former city employee and was active in many Greenbelt groups.

Condolences also to the many family members and friends of Henry Haslinger who died on July 10. He worked for the county and had volunteered for many years at WAMU.

Ready for Adoption? Call (301) 474-6124.

Her name may be Rose, but this sweet lady has no thorns! 11-year-old Rose was surrendered a few weeks ago after living with her previous owners her whole life. She was pretty scared being back at the shelter, but Rose really blossomed! She is SO affectionate and warms up to new people quickly with loud purrs and asking for belly rubs. Since Rose may be nervous in new or loud environments, she may do best in a quieter home (she also gets along well with other cats!).

MEETRE continued from page 1

all with a characteristic wit that may have something to do with her British origins. “I was bamboozled,” she says of the way her family got her to join them that night while keeping her in the dark.

“They promised me dinner with my children and my grandchildren at the Festival,” she remembers. With her family living over 50 miles away and not often in town she thought it was odd that they’d decided to come all the way for dinner so she was “90 percent surprised” when she found out.

She adjusts herself in her seat at a desk in the Greenbelt News Review newsroom. Shaded windows span the length of the wall and filter in light that catches the highlights in her hair and her eyelashes. They keep the shades down because of how strong the sun is, she explains. What follows are her responses to questions about the award and her reflections on what it means to serve.

What was your reaction to being selected?

I was quite struck by it, stunned that it happened. I felt delighted because mostly I try to keep behind the scenes. I don’t strut around claiming credit for things. It was very affirming that the things I’d done for many years had been noticed, had added up to something in people’s minds. I think I’m a born volunteer. I felt my help was needed so I ought to help.

Tell us more about helping.

Some feel shy and some don’t feel as strong a pull to help. Recognition of an Outstanding Citizen does set an example for other people. It gives them some sort of reference for doing public service, whatever that public service is. And it’s often quite different for different people. I feel it’s an encouragement to people to help, but I don’t think anybody helps just to be the outstanding citizen. It really didn’t cross my mind. The newspaper has a league of outstanding citizens. Like Mary Lou Williamson [editor of the Greenbelt News Review].

How are you staying young? Is it related to service?

Oh, I think it is. It’s about staying busy, staying engaged, having to learn new things to keep up. I’ve learned new technologies. I post things on the website, design things, do a lot of quite sophisticated work with Excel. I just figured if it was possible you can find out how to do it. I just bang around until I find something in the right direction. It’s a quest.

What have you been doing since receiving the award?

The same things I was doing before. I do a lot of background work for the News Review in a business sense, in a process sense. How to organize ourselves more effectively, how to strategize. Whatever is necessary to help make decisions.

I write proposals for nonprofit groups. I’ve done that for the Co-op, News Review and Farmers Market.

Advice for volunteers?

When you volunteer to help, you’re perhaps more effective if you volunteer to do the work you know how to do. But I think you should also look to see what’s needed and see how you can do that, even if it’s something you don’t necessarily feel attuned to do. If an organization needs clerical support, do that even if it’s not your favorite thing. It’s just as affirming, even more so, because it’s for the greater good.

You can have fun while giving service because the fun might be at right angles to other things you’re engaged in. You can have fun with the people and you can make a difference.

You can change the way things are done. You can make them better. We use a lot less work to get a paper out than was once the case. No one’s here till midnight anymore as they used to be.

If you could add something to Greenbelt, what would it be?

I wouldn’t add an institution; I would change an attitude perhaps. If more people volunteered, that would connect them better with the city and their neighbors. If they live here and work here and don’t engage with the community, they don’t realize how much they’re missing, how much more engaged they would be in life. If you don’t put something in you don’t get anything much out. That’s kind of my view of life. Even if it’s only two hours a month, you probably have time to do that.

Who should be next?

So many possibilities, from the News Review, Farmers Market, the Rays on the Roof Campaign.

What do you do just for fun? Have you experienced anything new or different?

Becoming a great-grandmother. So there’s that. I can ski and I can ride a bike. We go to Europe and cycle from city to city along small roads. In fact, I’m giving a talk to the Golden Agers in October about how to do a cycle trip in Europe when you’re no longer 25.

I’ve actually written some books. The one that may get published is a children’s book for the 9-to-12-year-old age group, based on a local story. In 2005 a car came off the road on Powder Mill and went down into a chasm, a drainage ditch where you couldn’t see it from the road. Fortunately, it didn’t rain enough to fill up the ditch. A man finally emerged a week later from the car. He had been unconscious and concussed, but finally climbed out on the eighth day. A woman and her daughter picked him up; people had been hunting for him for a week. In my story he’s helped to survive by the animals.

The other one is a mystery story about a guy who was murdered in a vacuum chamber in Goddard Space Flight Center.

Nominate the Next Outstanding Citizen

Do you know someone who quietly strengthens Greenbelt through service, creativity or leadership? The Outstanding Citizen Award is your chance to shine a light on a neighbor who makes a difference. ## U.S. Officials Say They May Deport Abrego Garcia Before Trial

by Will Hammann

U.S. immigration officials have said that Kilmar Abrego Garcia could be deported before his trial to a country where he’s never lived, saying he is a threat to the community.

U.S. Immigration and Customs Enforcement (ICE) Assistant Director Thomas Giles said that Mexico or South Sudan may be willing to take Abrego Garcia if deported, but added that the Trump administration has not determined a destination. At the July 11 hearing in Greenbelt’s federal district court, lawyers for Abrego Garcia argued that sending him to a third country could serve to send him back to El Salvador indirectly, as he could be deported there from those countries instead of directly from the U.S.

U.S. District Judge Paula Xinis repeatedly rebuked Justice Department lawyers at the July 11 hearing for refusing to clearly detail the administration’s plans for Abrego Garcia, at one point saying that getting answers from them was “like trying to nail Jell-O to a wall.”

Abrego Garcia has been detained in Tennessee since his return from El Salvador on June 6 to face charges of human smuggling stemming from a 2022 traffic stop, to which he has pleaded not guilty.

He was previously determined neither a flight risk nor a danger by a federal judge in Nashville, but his defense asked the judge to delay his release out of concerns that he would be deported. For the same reason, they now ask Xinis to either delay his release further or temporarily bar the administration from beginning removal proceedings altogether.

The Trump administration admitted to mistakenly deporting Abrego Garcia in March, and defied orders from judges to facilitate his return, claiming that he was out of their jurisdiction while in Salvadoran custody – yet he was promptly released after U.S. officials presented a warrant for his arrest.

A document filed in federal district court July 9 says Abrego Garcia suffered “severe beatings, severe sleep deprivation, inadequate nutrition and psychological torture” while detained at CECOT, El Salvador’s megaprison built by President Nayib Bukele.

Bukele has denied those allegations, but multiple human rights organizations and members of the United Nations have criticized the facility’s treatment of inmates.

Protestors continue to gather outside the federal court in Greenbelt during the hearings in Abrego Garcia’s case.

Nigerian Hit Film Premieres To Sold-out Crowd at Cinema

by Jason Inanga

On Sunday, July 6, the Greenbelt Cinema played host to a sold-out audience at the U.S. premiere of one of the most popular Nigerian films released this year, Aso Ebi Diaries, produced by Laide Daramola (of Lady Laide Studios), a Nigerian American resident of Prince George's County.

Initially released in the middle of April this year, it became an instant box office hit in Nigeria and then Ghana. Trailers of the film appeared on social media and helped to drive its popularity and success.

According to Daramola, "The film is a celebration of our culture, our people and our traditions. With Afrobeats [music] and African culture going global, I wanted to create a film that helps both Africans and the rest of the world understand the heart behind what we do, especially when it comes to Aso Ebi."

"Aso Ebi is more than just matching fabric – it's about unity. From weddings to birthdays, baby dedications to funerals, we show up in style, in sync and in celebration. Each outfit is a unique expression of joy, love and identity. That's who we are, a people of beauty, art and community," she added.

Mayor Emmett Jordan was among attendees and in a brief comment, he said, "What better place to have the East Coast premiere of this film, than here in Greenbelt. Our strength in this town is in the diversity we have. We [Greenbelt] are proud to host a large African community. Everyone is welcome here."

Speaking further, Jordan said that the Greenbelt Cinema carries a lot of history. It has existed since 1938 and the screen the movie premiered on is the largest in Prince George's County.

Jordan sat in the audience with other patrons, enjoying the film and the ambience.

Daramola expressed appreciation to Jordan and others for participating. She apologized to those who were unable to attend the sold-out showing. She indicated that this was the first of what will be many stops for the film in the United States. "We are looking at showing the film in Houston next," Daramola added.

A patron at the event, Anita, said in a brief interview, "I am not Nigerian. I love the Nigerian [Nollywood] movies and have been watching them for years. I love the outfits they wear – that's what got me started. Now I am a big fan of the industry." Another attendee, Deborah, also said that attending the premiere of the movie was her first time watching a Nigerian film.

A trailer of the film is available on YouTube. Follow Lady Laide Studios on YouTube to get regular updates and see other productions by Daramola.

PGCPS Shares Cost and Plans For New Bus Tracking System

by Ellie Jornlin

As Prince George's County Public Schools (PGCPS) prepares to phase in its new bus tracking app, Chipmunk (see the July 10 issue), district officials share more information on the cost and functionality of the system.

Chipmunk, operated by Bus-Planner, will provide "precise ETAs, stop notifications and real-time updates," according to the PGCPS Board Action Summary. "The system will also support tablets on board school buses, allowing drivers to input data to ensure accurate ETAs and stop notifications."

The full transition to Chipmunk comes at the one-year cost of approximately $3.2 million. That cost includes the Department of Transportation plans to install tablets on approximately 1,250 school buses, at an estimated hardware cost of $1.875 million. The software cost is projected at $1.3 million for the first year, according to the summary.

"This investment is essential to modernize the district's transportation infrastructure and enable the platform's full capabilities," said Senior Public Information Specialist Lynn McCawley.

The current bus tracking app, StopFinder, was provided at no cost to the district as it was paid for through a partnership with BusPatrol, which has a contract for cameras on the buses' stop arms (see the February 6 issue), a contract that was flagged in a recent audit.

While PGCPS promises the app will be effective, it currently holds only a 1.5-star rating on Google Play and a 1.2-star rating in Apple's App Store, ratings that are lower than StopFinder.

"We understand that parents may have concerns. However, this is more than a change in apps. It's part of a complete overhaul of our transportation technology," McCawley told the News Review. "To support families, we're improving communication, expanding help desk support and providing training and updates. We're also investing in technology and staffing to reduce past frustrations."

Besides Chipmunk, other apps considered were My Ride K-12 by Tyler Technologies, Here Comes the Bus and WheresTheBus.

Chipmunk will be released on a three-phase schedule. Pilot testing and staff training will take place in summer 2025, followed by initial implementation with special education programs in the first semester of the 2025-26 school year. Full district wide adoption is planned for the second semester.

$1.3 billion, which is still much better for GSFC and NASA as a whole than the $3.4 billion cut in the President's budget request.

Future of the CJS Bill

The bipartisan support for funding NASA Science is good news for NASA and especially GSFC. However, the bill has a way to go. Both the Senate and House need to move their versions of the CJS bill out of committee and onto the floors of their respective chambers for debate, amendments and voting. If differing versions are passed, a committee with members from each chamber will have to reconcile them. Then the bill will go back for final passage and, if approved, on to the president for his signature (or veto). Congress can override a veto with a two-thirds vote.

The next fiscal year begins on October 1.

If Trump desires to make deep cuts to NASA, it's unclear how secure NASA and GSFC employees could feel, even with Congressional funding, particularly after watching the dismantling of the U.S. Agency for International Development without Congressional input. "That's a huge concern," said one source at NASA Headquarters, particularly with Sean Duffy as the Acting Administrator of the agency. Duffy, already Trump's Transportation Secretary, was appointed on July 9.

Impact on Greenbelt

"We are monitoring the federal budget process and the discussions around workforce reductions very closely. Our federal and state representatives are working tirelessly to prevent these proposed cuts," said Greenbelt Mayor Emmett Jordan.

"The proposed federal cuts and workforce reductions carry far-reaching implications for Greenbelt," Jordan told the News Review. "Local income tax receipts, commercial and retail revenues, housing demand and the office space market could all be affected," he said.

According to data from the U.S. Census, in 2023 Greenbelt was home to 1,357 federal employees, over 14 percent of Greenbelt's 9,599 workers. Greenbelt is home to a substantial number of Goddard contractors and federal civil servants, said Jordan, who has been told there may be twice as many contractors as civil servants at GSFC. City Councilmember Kristen Weaver is herself a contractor at GSFC and was unable to comment. "Several Goddard contracting firms maintain office space here in the city," said Jordan. "However, contractor employment is project-based, causing these numbers to frequently change."

One civil servant working at GSFC told the News Review most of their colleagues fear for their jobs and are applying for other positions. Last month then Acting Administrator Janet Petro announced a new Deferred Resignation Program, Voluntary Early Retirement and Voluntary Separation Incentive Program, as the Science Mission Directorate was asked to plan for a 50 percent reduction (see the June 12 issue).

GESTA, the labor union representing approximately 1,700 federal scientists, engineers and technicians employed at GSFC and two other centers, said Trump's proposed funding cuts would be "catastrophic." "If the proposed NASA budget cuts are realized, the loss of this highly specialized workforce, both within the federal government and with our partners in industry and academia, and the loss to our nation's technical and scientific knowledge could take generations to rebuild," said GESTA in a written statement.

"The Trump Administration's 2026 federal budget request asks for an unprecedented reduction to the NASA budget, shrinking it to the lowest levels since 1961, prior to the start of the Apollo program," said GESTA. "The requested cuts represent an existential threat to our nation's leadership in Space and Earth Sciences, including about 50 percent cuts to those programs (50 percent to Earth Sciences, 30 percent to Planetary Science, 66 percent to Astrophysics and 46 percent to Heliophysics)."

Impact on the Next Generation

"The budget would also zero out NASA's STEM Engagement programs, through which NASA educates, inspires and brings NASA to the next generation," said GESTA. The next generation of NASA scientists and technicians are already being impacted as internship programs, such as Pathways, are unable to offer the "direct pipelines to full-time employment at NASA upon graduation" as intended. The current cohort is finding themselves unlikely to land the civil servant positions they were training for.

Weather, Food Impacts

In addition to the space exploration it is known for, NASA provides climate and weather data and modeling used to predict severe weather events and impacts on food production. It also contributes to the economy; in 2023, the most recent year with such way to carry out our mission to protect the American people and uphold the Constitution," said FBI Director Kash Patel in a press release.

Backlash

This decision sparked backlash from Maryland officials, as the site in Greenbelt had been determined as the best fit in November 2023 after a very competitive process.

"It's an issue with missed opportunities. The back and forth, the ongoing uncertainty about the relocation, it's been a real impediment to our local economy, to the progress that could have been made," said Greenbelt Mayor Emmett Jordan.

In response, Senator Chris Van Hollen (D-Md.) proposed an amendment to block the use of federal money to relocate the headquarters anywhere but Greenbelt. The amendment narrowly passed in a 15 to 14 vote with Senator Lisa Murkowski (R-Alaska) crossing party lines to back the proposal.

"Last week the Trump Administration notified the Congress of its intent to poach funding intended for the new, competitively-selected FBI Headquarters in Greenbelt, Maryland, in order to permanently relocate the Bureau within the Ronald Reagan Building," said Van Hollen in a statement. "This unauthorized use of funds is directly at odds with what has been passed by the Congress on a bipartisan basis and sets a dangerous precedent for executive overreach into Congress's power of the purse. The Administration has also not provided any information around the total cost of the project or whether it will meet the Bureau's security needs."

Greenbelt Site Benefits

If built in Greenbelt, the headquarters would be located near the Greenbelt Metro Station and would bring significant economic benefits to Prince George's County and the state of Maryland.

Governor Wes Moore estimated in 2023 that relocating the FBI to Greenbelt would generate 7,500 local jobs and more than $4 billion in economic activity, according to Streetcar Suburbs News. This would not only positively impact Greenbelt, but also surrounding cities such as College Park and Berwyn Heights.

"Our city stands ready to partner with the federal government and the FBI to ensure the new headquarters is constructed efficiently and becomes an integral part of our community," a City of Greenbelt press release said. "We look forward to the economic growth and job opportunities this project will bring to Prince George's County, and we are proud to contribute to strengthening our nation's security."

data, "NASA provided a total economic output to our nation of $75.6 billion, representing a return on taxpayers' investment, if measured only in economic terms, of 3x," said GESTA.

"We urgently ask for Congress and the public's support in rejecting these proposed cuts, retaining U.S. leadership in Space and Earth Sciences, and keeping the dreams of NASA alive for future generations," said GESTA in a written statement.

Meanwhile, Greenbelt's City

Council and City Manager "have taken a very conservative approach to revenue projections and have allocated additional resources to support residents, particularly with food and housing assistance," said Jordan on Tuesday. "We are working with regional agencies to provide workforce development resources for displaced workers (Employ Prince George's) and local organizations to assist affected families. The city will continue to advocate for our residents."

Plea for Protesters

by Casey McGrath

Please join our group, NASA Needs Help, for a Save NASA protest on Sunday, July 20, 2 to 6 p.m. We previously organized a protest in front of NASA Headquarters in D.C. on June 30. We are a peaceful protest group and we stand in solidarity with other scientific advocacy groups.

This time, we are gathering on the historically appropriate Moon Day, the anniversary of the first human to set foot on the surface of the Moon, to try and save the Agency that has inspired the world.

This protest intends to raise public awareness and provide information about present and near-future cuts at NASA, and to demand that the Trump administration (including OMB, the Office of Management and Budget, and DOGE) cease all pressure on NASA and allow Congress to pass the next budget.

Current NASA leadership is already acting on the President's and OMB's proposed budget by beginning to greatly reduce the number of civil servants and contractors, which will be detrimental to the mission of this Agency. Cuts to NASA's science budget will drastically hinder its ability to produce science from current and future missions. To win the Space Race to the Moon, NASA was prioritized and appropriated $68 billion in 1965 alone (adjusted for inflation). In 2026, with goals to reach Mars, NASA's proposed budget is only $18.8 billion. Some of the cuts to NASA science involve turning off spacecraft that are already in space and actively sending back data. NASA contributes to agriculture, weather predictions and safety. Without NASA Earth science, early detection for natural disasters and forecasting would be imprecise and difficult.

Current protest details are listed below. We are securing a protest permit, and we will add updated details on the time/location to our website: <https://sites.google.com/view/nasaneedshelp>.

Sunday, July 20, 2025 at (primary option) Dwight D. Eisenhower Memorial Park, across from the Air and Space Museum, 540 Independence Ave S.W., Washington, D.C., or (back-up option) outside NASA Headquarters, 300 E. St. S.W., Washington, D.C.

Greenbelt's Barracudas Finish Swim Season with Two Wins, Three Losses

On Saturday, July 5, the Greenbelt Municipal Swim team competed against Belair Swim and Racquet Club at another hot meet in Bowie. Belair's Barracudas defeated Greenbelt's Barracudas in a fairly close score of 302.5 to 272.5 after 49 events.

Saturday, July 12, Greenbelt's second "home" meet was hosted an hour away in Indian Head due to the limited availability of the Greenbelt pool during the indoor pool construction. The team swam hard and cheered loudly, with several swimmers setting personal records in a sweltering heat for the last meet of the season. Ultimately, Indian Head Swim Team finished the season undefeated but Greenbelt fought hard against the division favorite, winning several events and earning 255 points to Indian Head's 315.

Greenbelt's swim team finishes the regular season with two wins and three losses. This summer the Barracudas worked hard, training alternately in the mornings and evenings when lanes were available, and they celebrated a new head coach (see the July 3 issue).

This coming Saturday Greenbelt's top two swimmers in each stroke in each age group (under 8, 9-12, 13-19) will head to Divisionals in Bowie to compete against other Division C teams' fastest swimmers.

Climate Change Is a Local Issue: Outlook for Prince George's County

by Sasha Allen and Rachel McCrea, Capital News Service

This month the country witnessed and mourned devastating loss of life in the flooding that hit Texas and this week numerous additional flash flood warnings paused recovery efforts there. This week in Maryland a flood watch was issued for much of the state. Federal climate change data shows extreme heat, flooding and severe weather are set to increase across the country. The changes Maryland is likely to face due to climate change are detailed in the federal government's fifth National Climate Assessment – but the Trump administration deleted all that data from the internet on June 30. However, the Local News Network at the University of Maryland's Philip Merrill College of Journalism had already downloaded the data and are using it as the basis for a series of stories.

Since the 20th century, temperatures in the state have risen around 2.5 degrees Fahrenheit, according to the National Oceanic and Atmospheric Administration. But it's more than just heat. Federal data shows the state is experiencing increasing precipitation, a higher probability of summer droughts, more extreme weather events and flooding accompanied with rising sea levels.

The impact of climate change on the state is as varied as its landscape. From vast forests and rolling farms that line the Eastern Shore to the 80.9 square miles of Baltimore City scattered with heat islands, different areas of the state will be affected by climate change in vastly different ways.

Here's a closer look at what's happening to the climate, and what's expected to happen in the Capital Region.

Prince George's and Montgomery are the two largest counties in the state, and along with Howard County, this region is home to 2.4 million people, according to 2023 U.S. Census Bureau estimates.

While this region will continue to see climbing temperatures, extreme precipitation will remain a major problem. The three counties will see dramatic increases in days with extreme precipitation each year as temperatures rise.

Federal projections show Prince George's County will see just over six days at or above 95 degrees a year at the lowest levels of temperature increases. At this same level of warming, the county can expect an extra 31 days a year with extreme levels of precipitation.

Over a century of historical data show temperatures rising, and researchers predict a future with higher rates of extreme heat and precipitation, more warm nights and fewer days that dip below freezing.

Annual average temperatures in Prince George's County have risen, according to 130 years of federal data. The annual average temperature for 2000-2024 is 57 degrees Fahrenheit (F). That's two degrees warmer than the 20th century mean of 55°F. The county's warmest years were 2024 and 2012. Both had an average temperature of 58.8°F. Scientists predict a range of future impacts in Prince George's County if the planet continues to warm. An interactive map published by the U.S. Global Change Research Program and its partners – but later removed from the web by the Trump administration – used climate models to predict county-level changes at different degrees of global warming. The Local News Network at the University of Maryland's Philip Merrill College of Journalism archived that data before it was deleted. The data shows that with 2.7°F global warming, Prince George's County is predicted to experience:

31 more days per year with extreme precipitation

Six more days per year with temperatures over 95°F

14 more nights per year with temperatures over 70°F

14 fewer days per year with temperatures under 32°F.

With 3.6°F global warming, Prince George's County is predicted to experience:

34 more days per year with extreme precipitation

13 more days per year with temperatures over 95°F

24 more nights per year with temperatures over 70°F

23 fewer days per year with temperatures under 32°F.

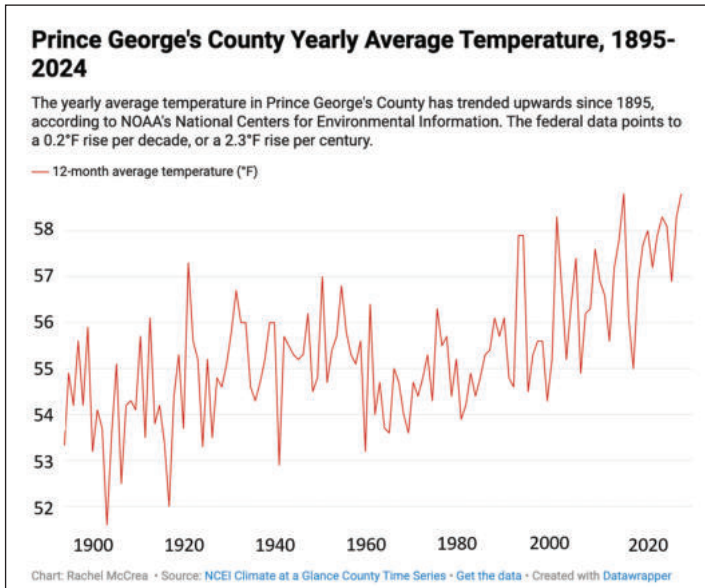

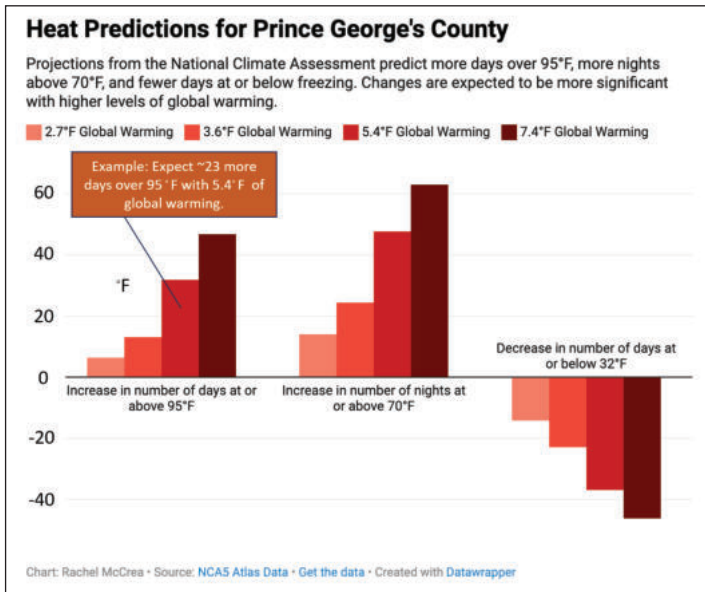

Note: Data rounded to the nearest whole number.

Changes are compared to data from 1991-2020: for example, 12 more days per year over 95°F means 12 more days compared to the 1991-2020 average.

The federal climate atlas measures global warming by comparing Earth's average temperatures to those measured from 1851-1900, called the "pre-industrial average." The Earth is 2°F warmer than the pre-industrial average, according to NOAA.

Climate models used by the National Climate Assessment predict increases in average temperature and precipitation. The U.S. Climate Resilience Toolkit (run by the U.S. Global Change Research Program and NOAA) also predicts more rain, though it notes that "global climate models are simply not as skillful at projecting outcomes for precipitation as they are for temperature."
