Greenbelters Hold Emergency Meeting about BARC Closure

by Will Hammann

A crowd gathered in the council chambers for a meeting to respond to the news of BARC's closure. Speaking from the back wall is U.S. Representative Glenn Ivey.

Greenbelt residents met Saturday in the Greenbelt City Council chambers for an emergency meeting in response to the potential closure of the Beltsville Agricultural Research Center (BARC) (see story below).

The meeting was swiftly coordinated by residents via Facebook and email, resulting in a turnout of nearly 100 people, including several public officials, crowding the council chambers.

"I want to be clear that this meeting is a grassroots meeting," said resident Aileen Kroll, who moderated the discussion, "and the purpose of this meeting is for us to talk about what it is that we want to see happen in very concrete ways."

The closure of BARC was announced July 24 by Secretary of Agriculture Brooke Rollins, who said that three Department of Agriculture office spaces in the

Seasonal Ground Bees Emerge In Greenbelt, Not Aggressive

by Anna Bedford-Dillow

Last week we heard from a resident about how ground bees were being treated in Greenbelt, after seeing workers spray a nest with RAID. "While their sudden appearance may have caused alarm, most ground bees are native, nonaggressive pollinators that pose little to no risk to the public," said the reader. "Unlike wasps or hive bees, ground bees are solitary and rarely sting unless directly provoked." We reached out to local bee expert Jay Evans to find out more.

"Ground bees are very seasonal and often confused for yellow jackets," explained Evans, an award-winning research entomologist at USDA's Bee Lab at Beltsville Agricultural Research Center.

Beltsville Agricultural Research Center

U.S. Secretary of Agriculture Brooke Rollins on July 24 announced a "complete reorganization" of the U.S. Department of Agriculture (USDA) that will include closing the Beltsville Agricultural Research Center (BARC).

Citing goals of efficiency and more-affordable cost of living, Rollins said USDA will be "moving our key services outside Washington, D.C." and relocating much of the Washington, D.C., area workforce to five hub locations: Raleigh, N.C.; Kansas City, Mo.; Indianapolis, Ind.; Fort Collins, Colo.; and Salt Lake City, Utah. There will also be reductions and consolidations of offices and staff.

D.C. area offices slated to close are BARC, the George Washington Carver Center (GWCC) in Beltsville, Braddock Place in Alexandria and the South Building in D.C. Once vacated, these facilities will be returned to the General Services Administration. Area offices that USDA plans to retain include the Whitten and Yates Buildings in D.C.

A memo that accompanied Rollins' YouTube announcement stated that BARC, a USDA

Former Superintendent's Payout From PGCPs Totals $877,578.70

by Anna Bedford-Dillow

Former Superintendent Millard House II received a payout from Prince George's County Public Schools (PGCPS) of $877,578.70, almost $150,000 more than previously known or estimated by news reports. On July 24, the News Review reported that House must have received at least $733,992, which we calculated based on our projections of 24 months of his salary with annual cost of living adjustments, noting that how much it exceeded that by was unknown. The separation agreement related to his departure, shared in response to a Public Information Act request, contained no financial figures whatsoever, leading to reporting of approximate figures, such as "at least $730,000," by the Washington Post, for example. On Thursday, July 24, the News Review received supplemental information related to our public information act requests showing that the payout was over $877,578.

"To this office's best knowledge and understanding, the final severance payout to former Superintendent House was $877,578.70," stated the letter to the Greenbelt News Review from Sally Robinson, associate general counsel for PGCPS. "At the time

Bad Shabbos
An engaged interfaith couple are about to have their parents meet for the first time over a Shabbat dinner when an accidental death gets in the way. Said critic Bob Strauss of the San Francisco Chronicle, “Neither too ‘oy vey’ nor Weekend at Bernie’s but steeped in the best aspects of both Jewish and black comedy, Bad Shabbos is a treat any night of the week.”

Sorry, Baby
Something bad happened to Agnes. But life goes on ... for everyone around her, at least. “Tough, tender and observational, Sorry, Baby suggests that [film director Eva] Victor’s promising career has been suitably launched. The best, with luck, is yet to come,” said critic Ann Hornaday of the Washington Post.

Tomorrowland
Whenever Casey Newton (Britt Robertson) touches a lapel pin with the letter T on it, she finds herself transported to Tomorrowland, a city filled with huge robots and sleek buildings. The gifted young woman recruits the help of scientist Frank Walker (George Clooney), a previous visitor to Tomorrowland, who years ago made a startling discovery about the future. Together, the two adventurers travel to the metropolis to uncover its mysterious secrets.

To Catch a Thief
Notorious cat burglar John Robie (Cary Grant) has long since retired to tend vineyards on the French Riviera. When a series of robberies is committed in his style, John must clear his name. Armed with a list of people who own the most expensive jewels currently in the area, John begins following the first owner, young Francie (Grace Kelly). When her jewels are stolen, Francie suspects John, destroying their tentative romance. John goes on the lam to catch the thief and clear his own name.

Festival Express
This compilation of footage from the Grateful Dead’s Canadian train tour depicts the height of the band’s music and fame for five days in 1970, along with that of performances from Janis Joplin, Buddy Guy, The Band and The Flying Burrito Brothers. However, there’s also a dark side shown alongside the seminal concerts, as when the train stops, the musicians are often confronted with worried promoters, inquisitive reporters and protesting students who can’t afford ticket prices.

The Parent Trap
Twins Annie and Hallie (both played by Lindsay Lohan) are strangers until happenstance unites them. The preteen girls’ divorced parents, Nick (Dennis Quaid) and Elizabeth (Natasha Richardson) are living on opposite sides of the Atlantic, each with one child. After meeting at camp, American Hallie and British-raised Annie engineer an identity swap, giving both the chance to spend time with the parent they’ve missed. If the scheme works, it might just make the family whole again.

Douglas Johnson

Douglas Michael Johnson

Douglas Michael Johnson died at his home in Greenbelt on Monday, July 21, 2025.

Born on May 29, 1947, in Denver, Colo., Doug grew up in Denver before moving to College Park for elementary school. He graduated from Northwestern High School, then attended the University of Maryland, where he earned a bachelor's degree in education. He completed his master's in education at Geoge Washington University, then returned to the University of Maryland for his doctorate in human development.

During this time, he worked as a clinician, leader and co-director of the Children's Health and Developmental Clinic, which his father began at the University of Maryland. Doug taught for several years in Prince George's County before becoming the educational director at the Chesapeake School in Annapolis. He moved into the hospitality industry as assistant general manager at Rip's Country Inn for 24 years before retiring.

Doug was a good man, loyal friend and loving husband, who married Winifred Kuebler in 1981. They moved from Seabrook to GHI in 1983, where they happily resided for 42 years.

He will be missed by the GHI community, his families and friends. Doug was a visible presence all around Greenbelt, visiting neighbors in the 4 Court of Ridge Road, at the Fitness Center, working in his garden plot, shopping at the Co-op on his more than daily trips, walking around the Lake at Buddy Attick Park or checking out produce at the Farmers Market, which he rarely missed.

Doug was survived by Win Johnson, his wife of 44 years; sister Traci Johnson and her twins Josey and Zoe; niece Lydia Filazola and family; many Blum relatives spread around the country; Gregory Rankin and Kirby Willis, whom he considered brothers; and Jamaican family members Barrington McNeil, Kadian McNeil and husband Stephen Ellis, June McNeil and son Zedaine, and Jasmine and Ted Wood.

Doug was preceded in death by his parents Warren Russell Johnson and Rose Marie Blum Johnson and Jamaican family member Winsome McNeil.

As he requested, there will be no organized service. There will be small group gatherings of friends from Doug's many activity and interest groups – sharing a meal around a table, having a conversation around a plot firepit or sipping rum and tonic on Negril Beach.

In lieu of flowers, consider a donation to the Greenbelt Animal Shelter, Co-op or Farmers Market.

Gerald Roper

Gerald (Jerry) Roper, Sr.

Gerald (Jerry) Roper, Sr., 77 of Greenbelt, died on July 25, 2025, at his home after years of battling colon cancer.

Jerry is survived by his wife of 35 years, Rebecca Wittig, and two sons, Callum and Gerald Jr. of Greenbelt. He is also survived by two sisters, Jackie Holohan (John) and Joan Kinze, sister-in-law Cathy Wittig-Donald, and numerous nieces and nephews.

He was preceded in death by his parents, his brothers Lawrence and John, and a sister Sherrienne DiSabatino.

A service for Jerry will be held on Sunday, August 3, at St. Matthew's United Methodist Church, 14900 Annapolis Road, Bowie at 2 p.m.

FEATURED PET - ROSE

Ready for Adoption? Call (301) 474-6124.

Her name may be Rose, but this sweet lady has no thorns! 11-year-old Rose was surrendered a few weeks ago after living with her previous owners her whole life. She was pretty scared being back at the shelter, but Rose really blossomed! She is SO affectionate and warms up to new people quickly with loud purrs and asking for belly rubs. Since Rose can be nervous in new or loud environments, she may do best in a quieter home.

If you're interested in meeting this sweet Rose, call (301) 474-6124 or email animalservices@greenbeltmd.gov!

Washington, D.C. area and BARC would be vacated for the sake of efficiency, with plans to reduce the number of staff and to relocate services to various cities such as Raleigh, N.C., and as far away as Salt Lake City, Utah.

The center, established in 1910, is officially named after Henry A. Wallace, a former secretary of agriculture and also former vice president under President Franklin D. Roosevelt. It houses the Abraham Lincoln Building of the National Agricultural Library and conducts a wide range of agricultural research for plant and animal science, food safety, climate change and a number of other subjects.

Throughout the meeting, a chief concern of residents was to whom or to what entity BARC land might be sold off, and what it would then be used for. Several expressed fear that the land might be used for data centers or the Northeast Maglev project, which county and state officials have shown interest in developing.

Mary Cook, from the office of Prince George's County Council Member Tom Dernoga who represents District 1, which includes Beltsville, said that Maryland legislation requires the county's District Council (the County Council when deciding zoning and land use) immediately place a zoning classification of agricultural, reserved open space upon any sold BARC land.

But that protection was questioned by Greenbelt City Councilmember Rodney Roberts, who cited the 2018 authorization of BARC land transfer from USDA to the Department of the Treasury to build a Bureau of Engraving and Printing currency production facility.

Although the facility's construction was halted in January by the U.S. Army Corps of Engineers which cited budgetary constraints, resident Kiki Theodoropoulos noted that the transfer between agencies served as a way to work around zoning laws.

Roberts insisted that investing in legal resources would be the ultimate strategy to fight BARC closure, and said, "If you think that the zoning of the property is going to save it, you're ignoring what's happened in the past few years."

U.S. Representative Glenn Ivey (Md. District 4), who represents Greenbelt, made a surprise appearance halfway through the meeting and said that the focus right now should be to prevent the movement of BARC employees, as federal offices cannot be sold until their staff is vacated.

He cited the closure of the USAID building, where the staff's removal made it possible to dismantle the agency, even though the agency could not be dissolved or its offices sold without congressional approval.

Ivey thus argued that legal action such as that by federal workers against President Donald Trump's administration would be critical, and said that he's been in contact with several unions such as the American Federation of Government Employees.

U.S. Rep. Glenn Ivey speaks at the BARC meeting.

Ivey and others at the meeting also stressed the importance of forming alliances across party lines and with interest groups outside of the Beltsville area.

Residents noted Arkansas Senator John Boozman, chairman of the Agriculture, Nutrition and Forestry Committee, as someone who has been outspoken about his displeasure with the threatened closure of BARC.

Ivey pointed to Congressman Andy Harris, who represents Maryland's largely rural Eastern Shore and is the chair of the Agriculture Subcommittee on Appropriations, as someone to seek as an ally due to his constituency's shared interest in the research done at BARC.

Resident Darien Boggs said that advocates for BARC should attempt to reach farmers, who as a bloc have consistently been able to make the Trump administration backtrack on policy.

"Those people don't want to hear that the research that's helping them is going to get eliminated," Boggs said.

Greenbelt Mayor Emmett Jordan, who attended the meeting along with Councilmembers Roberts, Danielle McKinney and Jenni Pompei, said that he attended a "Four Cities" meeting on July 24 with College Park, New Carrollton and Berwyn Heights to address the issue.

Jordan said that there is a unified, concerted local effort to determine what action to take. "Rest assured that we are working together."

Greenbelt architect Matt Dirksen recalled when he first moved with his wife to Greenbelt in the early 2000s, residents donned T-shirts saying "Keep It Wooded" in defense of the Forest Preserve, and found the community effort inspiring. He also noted that part of the original "belt" of Greenbelt was the land of BARC itself.

"I came here because I want to preserve the 'belt' of Greenbelt. That's what the BARC is. So let's work to keep the BARC," he said.

Will Hammann is a University of Maryland student at the Philip Merrill College of Journalism interning with the Greenbelt News Review.

Agricultural Research Service (ARS) facility, will be "vacated over multiple years to avoid disruption of critical USDA research activities."

The GWCC on Sunnyside Avenue, which has offices for ARS headquarters staff as well as the Maryland State Office for USDA's Natural Resources Conservation Service, will be "sold or transferred upon conclusion of its use as a temporary location for USDA personnel during the realignment of USDA offices and personnel."

The National Agricultural Library will be "retained for use, and the Department will fully leverage available office space for USDA mission areas and staff offices."

BARC Particulars

There are more than 500 employee positions at BARC, with about 400 of those currently filled. As with other federal agencies anticipating staff cutbacks, many employees opted to retire or to take buyout or deferred resignation offers over the last few months.

In a staff meeting at BARC held after Rollins' announcement, researchers learned that they likely would be moved to one of the 95 locations across the country where ARS conducts research rather than to one of the five hubs Rollins identified. However, more specific information on the relocation and its timing will be released over the coming months.

June Court Ruling Brings Relief For Some AmeriCorps Members

by Ellie Jornlin

A federal judge ruled in June that the Trump Administration must restore hundreds of millions of dollars in AmeriCorps grant funding in 24 states and the District of Columbia (see the June 12, 2025, issue).

U.S. District Judge Deborah L. Boardman granted a temporary block on the nearly $400 million in funding cuts that caused thousands of AmeriCorps staff and volunteers to lose their jobs. The block was only granted to the 25 jurisdictions that sued the administration in April.

Jackson Tuthill, a 20-year-old Greenbelter, was an AmeriCorps National Civilian Community Corps (NCCC) member who, along with roughly 32,000 others, was prematurely sent home from service. He had also been accepted to an AmeriCorps State and National program in Alaska that was also terminated.

Following the June ruling, Tuthill informed the News Review that AmeriCorps has restored his education award, stipend money and food budget from the last month of service that was prematurely ended. According to Tuthill, AmeriCorps explained in an email that this was done for his entire class (which was to graduate in May 2026).

"I reached out to the Alaska position, but they replied that there was no such restoration there, as Alaska was not one of the states involved in the lawsuit regarding state-level programs," said Tuthill.

While the court ruling offered some temporary relief for Tuthill and thousands of others, the funding remains uncertain in states that were not part of the lawsuit. For now, Tuthill is working in Greenbelt for the summer, looking at university in France and weighing his next steps, unsure if AmeriCorps will be part of them again.

What’s Happening at Greenbelt Park? Service Cuts Spark Concern

by Anna Bedford-Dillow and Diya Shah

Despite national cuts to Parks Service staff and budget, Greenbelt Park is open and operational, continuing to offer trails, playgrounds, picnic areas and a year-round 172-site campground. The park, considered a “hidden jewel” within the Capital Beltway, is still welcoming visitors even as concerns grow nationwide about how federal workforce reductions and spending cuts may affect national parks.

Twenty-four Percent Staff Cut
A statement from the National Park Service Office of Communications (NPS/OC) to the News Review this spring said seasonal workers were still being hired for the National Parks but this month the National Parks Conservation Association (NPCA) reports that parks have been seeing record-breaking numbers of visitors while dealing with “unprecedented staffing shortages.” In a July 3 press release the NPCA said, “Since the Trump administration took office, the National Park Service (NPS) has lost 24 percent of its permanent staff, a staggering reduction that has left parks across the country scrambling to operate with bare-bones crews. The park staff who remain are being asked to do more with less, and it’s simply not sustainable.” Staff at Greenbelt Park told the News Review they couldn’t comment on whether or not there have been staffing cuts impacting them.

On July 8, Jasmine Shanti, communications and community engagement officer with the National Park Service, National Capital Region, told the News Review, “National Capital Parks – East has hired seasonal staff to help us keep delivering great visitor experiences at Greenbelt Park. We don’t comment on individual staffing decisions or internal personnel actions, but we can share that Greenbelt Park remains open and staffed with a mix of permanent employees and seasonal personnel. We’re focused on making sure everyone who comes to Greenbelt Park has the chance to explore and connect with this incredible place. The park continues to welcome visitors, maintain essential operations and offer a high level of public engagement. Visitors can continue to expect meaningful and memorable experiences at Greenbelt Park.” On Tuesday, July 8, the Supreme Court ruled that the Trump administration may resume the reorganization and reductions in force at federal agencies, including at NPS.

Funding Cuts
Meanwhile, President Trump’s recent Big Beautiful Bill rescinds $267 million in Inflation Reduction Act dollars that were intended for National Parks staffing. On Thursday, July 3, Trump signed an Executive Order calling for noncitizen visitors to be charged more to visit the parks, looking to raise revenue for parks from a new source.

The entrance to Greenbelt Park

Greenbelt Park
Greenbelt Park, and others nearby, have no fees to visit. You’d have to go further afield, to Fort McHenry or Great Falls, to find a park that charges a fee and sells America the Beautiful parks and recreational passes, a Park Ranger told the News Review. Greenbelt Park does charge a campground cost, which is $20 a night. There are two temporary closure alerts in effect at the park. The south parking lot of Greenbelt Park closed to vehicles on May 9 while a bollard that prevents vehicles from driving down the trail is repaired. It’s scheduled to reopen October 1. In addition, two restrooms at Greenbelt Park – the Holly Picnic Area Restrooms and Laurel Picnic Area Restrooms – are currently closed, though the picnic areas remain open. Those two bathrooms, in the north end of Greenbelt Park, are affected by a problem with the sewer line that drains both. They are scheduled to be closed through November 15, which was announced along with closures at three more National Capital Parks – East locations. The announcement from NPS said the closure of these restrooms is to protect public health and safety and will allow maintenance staff to attempt repairs during the summer. “Significant alteration in the public use pattern” is not expected, according to NPS. Greenbelt’s bathroom repairs are in the contracting stage now. Meanwhile, the Sweetgum picnic area still has a working restroom, there’s also a comfort station in the park and the half a dozen bathrooms in the campgrounds are open. Greenbelt residents can still enjoy the trails that range from 0.8 miles (the Blueberry Trail) to 5.3 miles (the Perimeter Trail), along with the recreational facilities and year-round camping. Diya Shah is a student at the Philip Merrill College of Journalism writing for the Greenbelt News Review.

of this office’s response earlier this month, all responsive records had not yet been provided for review. Since then, the responsive record regarding the compensation paid to Mr. House has been provided,” wrote Robinson. The News Review sought a breakdown of the severance payment but while PGCPs shared the amount of the payout, Robinson wrote that the “record itself is not subject to disclosure pursuant to the personnel record exemption, the individual person’s finances exemption, and sociological information exemption.” The $877,578.70 sum is comprised of two years’ salary, payment for unused accrued leave and contributions to the former Superintendent’s tax-sheltered retirement account, Robinson told the News Review. “The value of benefits being maintained are not reflected in the amount stated in the letter,” she said.

A class to introduce students to Artificial Intelligence (AI) was organized at the Springhill Lake Clubhouse in partnership with BCAUSEICAN (becauseican.net), a Greenbelt-based nonprofit organization whose mission is to prevent socioeconomic disparities by equipping communities in need with STEM (Science, Technology, Engineering and Mathematics) education. The class was supported by a grant from the Advisory Committee on Education, with students recruited through Deji Ayoku of CARES. Ron Nicholson, a founding member of BCAUSEICAN, learned that students exposed to coding and the latest application development are able to improve their critical thinking, logic and problem-solving skills. Students also gain greater self-confidence and computer expertise, he says. In an effort to bring those benefits to Greenbelt students, after-school STEM classes began at Greenbelt Middle School in January 2024 (see the November 9, 2023, issue). Asia Gore is director of programs for BCAUSEICAN and the liaison for all schools and organizations they partner with. She is responsible for ensuring See AI CLASS, page 8 that everything is organized properly and the curriculum ready. The AI instruction summer session at Springhill Lake aims to reach other age groups and provide opportunities to learn more about AI. The month-long session began June 24 and ended last week.

Curriculum

The students learned the foundations of AI and security challenges around AI. They also learned to recognize AI when they encounter it in daily life and about the environmental issues associated with AI data centers. The plan is to expand the curriculum and then hopefully by next year, students will learn more about the environmental factors. They really want students to have the right exposure because a lot of youth lack access to AI technology, according to Gore. The idea is that the more technological knowledge they acquire, the more hands-on portion of AI they can use, she stated. For example, they will be able to do coding, use it when writing their papers, organize outings to various places, use it to verify research or anything that they need to do.

Ten students were in this class. The instructors were Mamush Mesfin and Ajani Williams. Students received a certificate of completion at the end of the program.

Student Impressions

Asher Chuks decided to enroll in the class about AI because the world is moving into it day by day. The learning experience has been good. Josiah Chuks took this class, he said, “because the world today is becoming increasingly taken over by AI. In 10 years, AI is going to control most of the technology not only in America but like everywhere, so I just wanted to take a class and learn about it.”

Daniel Olanipekun said that he wanted to learn more about tech and “something that can help my future and add to my resumé.”

Lilian Kacou confessed that his dad forced him to attend the class. Then in class he discovered how AI enhances internet use. He decided that it’s good to learn about AI and coding too. Kacou is glad that his dad got him to take the class because it exposed him to something new and important.

The students said they were looking forward to their July 24 certification ceremony.

BCAUSEICAN will be continuing after school AI and Python coding classes this fall at Greenbelt Middle School for about eight weeks. Then they will partner with a new middle school group, Gore stated.

on June 30, 1951. Bernice and Sid, who both graduated from McGill, moved from Montreal to Syracuse, N.Y., to pursue graduate degrees at Syracuse University. After Sid received his Ph.D. he was recruited by NASA, and they moved from Syracuse to Greenbelt. In Greenbelt, Bernice juggled child-rearing with her own work and continued her education. In 1980 she was awarded a doctorate in math education from the University of Maryland. During their many years in Greenbelt both Bernice and Sid were significant members of the News Review.

A highly innovative and effective math teacher, as well as a longtime advocate for students’ pragmatic understanding of mathematical concepts, Kastner authored Space Mathematics: Math Problems Based on Space Science (1985, 2012), Space Mathematics: A Resource for Secondary School Teachers (1987) and The Role of Language in Teaching Children Math (2019). The latter book, written when she was in her 80s, was a labor of love and the outcome of her longstanding concern that pedagogical neglect of the inherent ambiguities of language presented unnecessary barriers for student comprehension and achievement.

Bernice served in the mathematics departments of Montgomery College (Gaithersburg), Towson State University (Baltimore) and Simon Fraser University (Vancouver, B.C.). While in Vancouver, she assisted her brother Myer, who was in declining health. She became his “hands” in order to help him complete his memoir, entitled Lucky Hazards: My Life in Physics (ISSS press, 2014). Bernice had many passions and talents, including listening to classical music, singing in the Horizon House choir, cooking, sewing, knitting and volunteering at various organizations. She was a master knitter and for several years led a knitting group at Horizon House, jokingly called The Knitwits.

She was an avid reader; her bookshelf was full with books on the history and philosophy of mathematics and science, neuroscience and related topics. A lifelong learner, she was fascinated with the topic of learning itself, a curiosity and passion that underlay her effectiveness and popularity in the classroom.

Those close to Bernice knew she could develop a narrative and deliver a punch line. In addition, she was a wonderful listener, and within her presence one sensed a true healer. She is survived by three children: Judith A. Skillman, Ruth E. Kastner and Joel H. Kastner as well as seven grandchildren and six great-grandchildren. We will dearly miss Bernice’s lively and intelligent mind, her laughter, bear hugs, eternal optimism and unstinting kindness.

Road Rage Assault

On July 22 at 5:43 p.m. near Breezewood Drive and Springhill Lane, a woman flagged down officers at Beltway Plaza and advised that she and another woman exchanged words while driving past each other. Several children and adults were present in the home at the time. A family member drove him to the hospital, and no one present knew how it happened. The young man is in critical but stable condition.

Vandalism/gunshot

On July 21 at 3:06 a.m. near 5809 Cherrywood Lane, a resident reported a loud sound. Officers found a broken sliding glass door with a bullet hole in the glass, a 9mm spent shell casing on the sidewalk directly outside and a hole in the ceiling.

Circus Act and Musical Performances on Friday

The Circus Camp will join Creative Kids Camp (CKC) for a full day of shows on Friday, August 1. At 10 a.m. and 2:15 p.m. enjoy CKC's production of Memory Quest in Central Park, an original musical written and directed by Chris Cherry, Greenbelt Recreation's performing arts coordinator. A group of cousins explore the famous park, hoping to retrieve memories for their grandmother, who has become frail and forgetful. The young explorers visit their grandmother's favorite places in the park, including the Carousel, the Bethesda Fountain, Belvedere Castle, the Chess and Checkers House and the Conservatory Water, with additional stops at the Metropolitan Museum of Art and the outdoor Delacorte Theater, where they see actors rehearse for a performance of Shakespeare Under the Stars.

At 1 p.m. see the Circus Camp's production of Under the Big Top. Under the direction of Greg May, former Ringling Bros. and Barnum & Bailey circus performer, circus campers will present a showcase of their circus skills, including juggling, stilt walking, unicycle, tightrope, tumbling, clown gags and more. All performances will take place in the Community Center gym. For free tickets, visit the Community Center business office or call 301-397-2208. Tickets will be available starting July 29.

City of Greenbelt arts programs are supported in part by the Maryland State Arts Council. For more information about Greenbelt arts programs, follow @greenbeltrecreationarts on Instagram, or at Greenbelt Recreation ARTS on Facebook.

Miner bees are a very common 'ground bee,' genus Andrena. Unless the distinctive yellow stripes of yellow jackets are visible, these bees are harmless, says Evans. Bumble bees also nest in the ground, and are slightly larger and create holes twice the size of miner bee holes. These might be more prone to sting if stepped on, he says, but even that is rare. Bumble bees usually make their nests in more out of the way places, unlike the disturbed grassy areas miner bees might choose. "If there are tens of holes it won't be wasps or bumbles," said Evans, "those would be miner bees or sometimes sweat bees." Sweat bees nest in the ground or sometimes in rotting wood and are also typically not aggressive, only stinging in self-defense.

Over the weekend, Evans found miner bees on the lake peninsula. They were busily pulling pebbles from their nest. Suzanne Batra, Greenbelter and retired USDA bee expert, called them "working mothers," Evans recalls. "They build the homes, clean the tunnels then collect pollen for the eggs of offspring they will never meet," he explained. "Those boys and girls will mate next July, the boys die then and the females start tunneling."

These seasonal ground bees are "non-stinging almost as a rule," says Evans, "and will be quiet again in two weeks."

The path between the Community Center and the playground, areas currently being used by the city's Kinder Camp, was roped off on Friday, July 25, reportedly due to bees or wasps in the area.

Leaky Pipes at GHI Offices Soak Henry’s Hollow Gardens

by Deanna Dawson

Residents of the Greenbelt Homes, Inc. (GHI) housing co-operative have been getting alerts from GHI management throughout the summer about water main breaks around the community. This time, however, the leaky pipes are right at GHI’s office building on Hamilton Place. Water from a break that happened on the afternoon of Saturday, July 26, had by evening already flooded the sidewalk in front of the office and was beginning to flow toward the Henry’s Hollow community garden field across the street. Although GHI was alerted to the problem on Saturday no work was done on the weekend to address it.

Monday morning saw a bustle of activity at the site, as GHI workers and contractors sought to locate the leak(s). Just last week GHI had dug up pipes directly in front of the building to repair a leak. When asked by this reporter if the new leak resulted from that work, a worker from the utility contractor Humphrey & Sons said that it wasn’t directly related but that when water is repeatedly turned off and back on, as happened during last week’s work, the water pressure changes can lead to new leaks.

Meanwhile, on Monday, the garden field was getting wetter and wetter. Although the water mostly flowed down the central garden path, it seeped into gardens on either side of the path and some plots had standing water. Water also emerged in the forested strip between the gardens and 34 Court Ridge Road, presumably outflow from the storm-water drain on the exit driveway from the GHI compound, which then flowed into and along the west side of the garden field.

GHI General Manager James Claggett Jr. said on Monday morning that the specific location of the leak had not been determined, but workers successfully located the valve that enabled them to turn off the water, stopping the runoff to the garden field. Claggett said he hoped the work could be completed later Monday or on Tuesday, but an update sent to GHI members late Monday afternoon said the repair work would continue through mid-day on Thursday, July 31.

A WSSC Water representative, sent to evaluate the leak on Sunday evening, claimed that fixing it would not be WSSC’s responsibility. Claggett, though, said it was yet to be determined whether GHI or WSSC are responsible for fixing the problem. Although the GHI administrative office remains open during this crisis, there is no in-person access to the office by members until further notice.

Water from the leaky GHI pipes has been seeping into some gardens in Henry's Hollow.

On the mornings of Monday, July 28 and Tuesday, July 29 the News Review office was bustling with creative kids. The Creative Kids Camp (CKC) is one of Greenbelt’s summer camps run by the city. This summer the campers are putting on Chris Cherry’s play Memory Quest in Central Park, the story of cousins collecting memories for their grandmother who has become forgetful.

Though current events spring to mind when one thinks about news, the campers learned that there are lots of Greenbelt memories to be found in the News Review’s archives. Some found themselves: winning a swim competition, performing in a play or holding a fused bead stand. One camper even found her birth announcement! Other campers looked for their addresses and the memories of their homes. One shared the news of the first Greenbelt-born baby and several found stories and photos of their parents and looked up their camp counselors, too.

In 2015 CKC focused on literary arts and created their own newspaper – the front page, containing a camp controversy about whether a hot dog was a sandwich, was printed in the July 23, 2015, issue that the current campers dug up. Then there were raised eyebrows when one camper asked what became of the Trader Joe’s that was reported to be taking over the Co-op Grocery Store some years ago – then they noticed that the date of that front page story was April 1, 2020. April Fool! Then there was more fun, looking for other issues that fell on April 1 over the last 88 years.

The campers also got to handle and try to make rubbings of the paper’s old engraved metal plates that were used to print images before such things were digital. And of course they learned the importance of precedent – how something established in the past can be important to the future. Some were amazed to learn the Greenbelt News Review had a libel case against it that went all the way to the Supreme Court in 1970, where we won and set an important precedent for freedom of the press. Last year that case was cited by a small paper in Utah facing a defamation case, which they also won (see the September 11, 2024, issue).

The News Review was delighted to host some of Greenbelt’s youth who were so excited to learn the memories preserved in our archives. We look forward to recording their stories, too.

Come to the CKC campers’ performance of Memory Quest in Central Park at 10 a.m. and 2:15 p.m. on Friday, August 1 and Friday, August 15 at the Community Center. For free tickets, visit the Community Center business office or call 301-397-2208.

Impact Art Meets Summer Campers in Public Sculpture

by Nicole DeWald

On July 28, Creative Kids Campers were joined by some special guests in their art classes. Mosaic artists Ali Mirsky and CG Duffy, of Baltimore-based Impact Art, spent the day with the campers glazing ceramic tiles for incorporation into a Greenbelt public art project. Impact Art is creating a sculpture of a cartwheeling figure that will be installed at the entrance to the Braden Athletic Complex behind the Youth Center as part of a major renovation. The ceramic pieces will be embedded in the surface of the sculpture. Camp YOGO (Youth on the Go) will also be contributing to this project.

“We had some great conversations and were happy to spend a day with the campers,” Mirsky commented. “The campers knew instantly that the sculpture was doing a cartwheel ... They got excited when we told them where it was going and how tall it was going to be [about 7’].” Altogether, the campers glazed about 3,500 tiles over the course of the day. “The most pieces that one camper glazed was around 100 ... which was a great source of pride for the camper.” Their energy and teamwork are key to the success of the project, which will require an estimated total of 15,000 tiles.

Members of the broader community are invited to participate in free workshops in which the tiles will be combined on a flexible backing material for later incorporation into the sculpture. Advance sign-up is encouraged, at sugeni.us/VBCo. Use the tabs at the top to select a date: the Artful Afternoon workshops on Sunday, August 3 are for all ages, and the morning workshop on Wednesday, August 6 is specially for seniors.

The Braden Complex renovation, including the sculpture commission, is funded by the American Rescue Plan Act. City of Greenbelt Arts Programs are also supported in part by the Maryland State Arts Council and the Maryland National-Capital Park and Planning Commission.
