Election 2025

Answers to Question 2

The News Review, as it does for every city council election, asked the candidates to respond in writing to questions. Answers are limited to 150 words. If an answer exceeds the limit, the answer is cut off at that point. Responses are published in various orders to avoid favoring candidates. Here are the answers we received to our second question.

Question 2: Given current economic challenges facing city residents and facing the city, how would you change what the city spends its resources on?

Bill Orleans

As much as the next guy, I like a pretty landscape. (Just how much of public works' budget is directed to pruning the flowering shrubbery outside the Municipal Building and elsewhere?) Public safety is certainly a concern. No one should fear mugging by a bully wanting their coat, cash or car. Likewise, no one should fear mugging by bullies wanting their home. We should invest less in the latest capital-intensive policing technologies, frequently surveillance technologies, and more in car, bike and foot patrol, and more in processes availing residents' recourse when their right to continue living in their apartment, condo, house is challenged by managements or boards-of-directors. Council had an opportunity to utilize Greenbelt's ARPA funding to establish a fund, supplemented in successive

BARC Presence a Key Factor In Site Selection for Greenbelt

Goats in a field on the Beltsville Agricultural Research Center in 1919. The milk from these goats was sent to Children's Hospital in Washington, D.C. Land purchased in 1935 for the Greenbelt Project allowed BARC to expand.

Greenbelt and the Beltsville Agricultural Research Center (BARC) are inextricably linked. It's no coincidence that they are neighbors. The presence of BARC was a key factor in the selection in 1935 of a site for the new town. The prospect was first raised on a visit to BARC in February 1935 by Rexford Tugwell, then Undersecretary of Agriculture (and soon to become chief of the Resettlement Administration), John Lansill, whom Tugwell appointed to direct the Division of Suburban Resettlement which oversaw the national Greenbelt Town Program, and Wallace Richards, who became the coordinator of the Greenbelt project (originally known as the Berwyn project or Maryland Special Project No. 1). According to a February 1938 U.S. Department of Agriculture (USDA) report – Summary Description of the Greenbelt Project at Greenbelt, Prince George's County, Maryland, USDA Farm Security Administration, Division of Suburban Resettlement (held in the Greenbelt collection

Candidates for City Council Answer Questions at Forum

by Pat Scully

All 10 candidates for the seven seats on the Greenbelt City Council appeared at a forum on the evening of Thursday, October 9, to make their views known on a variety of issues facing the city. Hosted by the News Review and Greenbelt Access Television (GATE), and moderated by Dave Zahren, the forum attracted a crowd of about 60 observers to the Firehouse and was livestreamed via Zoom, as well as recorded by GATE.

The candidates faced three rounds of questions from a list of six prepared by the News Review staff, who had solicited community suggestions. In the first two rounds, groups of three or four candidates were asked questions. In the third round, all candidates, in random order, answered a question of their choice that they had not already been asked. Those third-round answers are incorporated into the discussion of each question below.

Question One: Most Important Accomplishment

Frankie Fritz, Amy Knesel and Emmett Jordan were asked what was their most important accomplishment or that of council

Council Hears Wayfinding Plan; Some Signs May Cost up to $30K

by Ashna Balroop

On September 17, Greenbelt City Council held a worksession to discuss a draft of the city's new wayfinding plan that aims to use directional, place-identifying and welcoming signs to create a cohesive city identity.

The city's Assistant Director of Planning, Jaime Fearer, shared a presentation of the final draft plan, which she said staff had been actively working on for 18 months. A community survey was carried out from December 2023 to January 2024, which yielded 179 responses, according to Fearer. A draft outline was previously presented to council (see page 6 of the January 2, 2025, issue). Fearer described the current presentation as the final draft report, and she expected to take any final comments back to groups and consultants before bringing the plan back to council for approval. The strategic wayfinding plan is authored by the Maryland-National Capital Park and Planning Commission and the Prince George's County Planning Department. The City of Greenbelt applied to the county planning department's Planning Assistance to Municipalities and Communities Program in December 2021 to fund a strategic wayfinding plan for the

Questions Posed to Candidates

Question 3: What particular expertise do you bring to council and in what specific ways would you use it to advance your priorities? Please give concrete examples.

Candidates are asked to submit their answers, limited to 150 words, to the News Review by 6 p.m. on Monday, October 20, by email to editor@greenbeltnewsreview.com.

Correction

In the October 9 issue, the photos of ERHS soccer players on page 19 were misnamed. Number 7, in the photo by herself, is senior Leilah Eggleston. Number 10, racing down the field ahead of a pack, is junior Ariana Cruz, flanked by her teammate senior Karina Reyes Carranza, number 13.

Letters to the Editor

GHI Recent Evictions

As a GHI member for the last 19 years, I never saw a member of the cooperative being evicted. Now, in a two-month time, I know of two recent evictions near me. Both members who were evicted were devastated. The second member evicted was my neighbor, a senior citizen who has lived in her unit for over 30 years.

This member is in denial, and her story is heartbreaking. Unfortunately, due to her eviction and life circumstances, we found her last weekend sitting on her porch and sleeping in the yard with the clothes on her back, a purse and no cell phone. Her unit is for sale and the estate is being handled by GHI and distant family members. Because the GHI office is closed on weekends, my neighbors and I did all that we could for her to keep her fed, warm and safe.

The Greenbelt City Police exhausted their resources and tried to get her off the street, but to no avail. I'm sharing this sad reality that members of the GHI cooperative are being evicted during a government shutdown, furloughs and hard times. How evictions are decided and handled is discussed in GHI Board of Directors closed meetings. Members are unaware until a neighbor's life and belongings are thrown out in the street, or in my neighbor's case, her unit placed on the market. I understand why these types of cases are handled in closed meetings, but I question if it's necessary to throw out a member.

I urge my fellow neighbors and the GHI membership to attend the GHI Board open meetings. There is no oversight of GHI operations except an annual audit. I ask the Greenbelt City Council to establish and review

Orwell 2+2=5

From Academy Award-nominated and BAFTA-winning director, Raoul Peck (I Am Not Your Negro), this definitive feature-length documentary on visionary author George Orwell was made with the exclusive cooperation of the Orwell Estate. "Who controls the past controls the future: who controls the present controls the past," wrote Orwell in his novel, 1984. Today, the "newspeak" of authoritarian rule is alive and well and in unexpected places, from the rise of AI chatbots to the Russian propaganda machine, from the marketing webs of commercial metaverses to the political banning of books in the southern United States. Peck's film uses George Orwell's life, work and legacy as a maverick iconoclastic writer to jam the signals of the algorithms gone rogue which, in the name of personal freedom, threaten to close our minds to a greater possibility.

One Battle After Another

Bob is a washed-up revolutionary who lives in a state of stoned paranoia, surviving off-grid with his spirited and self-reliant daughter, Willa. When his evil nemesis resurfaces and Willa goes missing, the former radical scrambles to find her as both father and daughter battle the consequences of their pasts. Said critic David Klion of the New Republic, "Somehow, a slacker epic decades in the making turns out to be exactly the movie for right now."

The First Wives Club

Despondent over the marriage of her ex-husband to a younger woman, a middle-aged divorcée plunges to her death from her penthouse. At the woman's funeral, her former college friends (Bette Midler, Goldie Hawn, Diane Keaton) reunite for the first time in nearly 30 years. When the three discover the reason for their friend's suicide, they realize that all of their ex-husbands have taken them for granted – and deciding it's time for revenge, they make a pact to get back at their exes.

Annie Hall

Comedian Alvy Singer (Woody Allen) examines the rise and fall of his relationship with struggling nightclub singer Annie Hall (Diane Keaton). Speaking directly to the audience in front of a bare background, Singer reflects briefly on his childhood and his early adult years before settling in to tell the story of how he and Annie met, fell in love and struggled with the obstacles of modern romance, mixing surreal fantasy sequences with small moments of emotional drama.

Something's Gotta Give

When aging womanizer Harry Sanborn (Jack Nicholson) and his young girlfriend, Marin (Amanda Peet), arrive at her family's beach house in the Hamptons, they find that her mother, dramatist Erica Barry (Diane Keaton), also plans to stay for the weekend. Erica is scandalized by the relationship and Harry's sexist ways. But when Harry has a heart attack, and a doctor (Keanu Reeves) prescribes bed rest at the Barry home, Harry finds himself falling for Erica – who, for once, may be out of his league.

Letters Policy During City Elections

The News Review reserves the right not to publish any letter submitted. Letters are considered accepted when published. All letters must include the letter writer's name, physical address and telephone number. Only the name will be published; the News Review will consider withholding the name upon request. All letters are subject to editing for reasons of space, libel, privacy, taste, copyright and clarity. In an election year, the News Review will not print a letter raising a new issue the week prior to election day, when no other party would have a chance to respond.

Russell Wilbur

Russell M. Wilbur

Russell M. Wilbur ("Rusty"), age 69, died at home on August 18, 2025 of complications related to hypertensive cardiovascular disease. He was a longtime resident of Greenbelt.

Rusty was born in Santa Clara, Calif., in 1956. During his childhood, his family lived in 13 different places, including Keflavik, Iceland, as his father served in the Navy. Rusty attended the University of Rochester and graduated magna cum laude from the University of Maryland with a bachelor's degree in history. He worked in banking, technical writing, customer service and volunteered as a GED tutor. Rusty was an avid bowler, loved sports and possessed an encyclopedic knowledge of baseball. Rusty strove to be of use to others. Many in his community benefited from his generosity and care.

Rusty was preceded in death by his mother and father, Althea and Harley Wilbur. He is survived by his daughter, Carly Elizabeth Wilbur of Denver, Colo.; sisters Kimberly Wilbur of Roseburg, Ore., and Gwenan Wilbur of Chicago, Ill.; nieces Miranda, Sasha and Emily Wood as well as many loving cousins and friends.

Donations in Rusty's honor may be made to:

Our Neighbors

We are saddened by the death of cyclist Lisa Martin of Riverdale who was killed in a hit-and-run accident while riding her bike within the Beltsville Agricultural Research Center. She was the president of Route One Velo, a cycling club and racing team. Our condolences to her family and friends.

Our condolences also to the family and friends of Russell "Rusty" Wilbur, a longtime resident of Greenbelt and graduate of University of Maryland who died on August 18. He loved sports, especially baseball.

Congratulations to Kaylie Taylor, an Eleanor Roosevelt High School senior, who received both the top scholar award, given to the contestant with the highest GPA, and the community service award, for her essay about her community service work, at the Miss College Park Scholarship Pageant on September 28.

Beware of Boxes
Leo Jones with Jacqui Walpole, Worship Associate
Human beings frequently make assumptions and judgments about others, categorizing them into groups. The consequences of these actions can be severe. Over millennia, these methods have been refined and continue to be widespread today. People of the Heart, who are compassionate, must actively resist the impulse to make quick assumptions and judgments that create division between "us" and "them." On Sunday, October 19th, we will explore the reasons behind why we put each other in boxes and discuss how we can change this behavior.

in the last term. Kristen Weaver, Danielle McKinney and Jenni Pompei also chose to answer this question in the third round.

Fritz cited two accomplishments: implementation of all-resident voting and endorsement of the general order on immigration, noting that barely one in six voters voted in the last municipal election, stressing that everyone needs to be at the table. Fritz praised council for prioritizing protection of immigrants in the face of “a fascist regime.”

Knesel agreed with Fritz on the importance of all-resident voting, stressing that she learned to listen to many voices and that councilmembers can only support the community if they have input from residents.

Jordan found the building of external relationships, and working together were vital. “Greenbelt is not an island,” he said. For example, completing the deal to acquire the armory involved talking to the head of the Maryland National Guard.

Weaver found the single most important accomplishment was the allocation of American Rescue Plan Act (ARPA) funds. Instead of one or two big projects, council sought ideas from the community and applied the skills, knowledge and expertise of the community in creative projects. She mentioned child care and business vouchers, support for reparations, community and the Buddy Attick Master Plan. McKinney echoed Knesel on the importance of new members of council learning the issues and connecting with the community to make informed decisions within a planning framework and seconded Weaver on the disbursement of ARPA funding, including tackling food insecurity. Pompei, who had worked on the ballot initiative for all-resident voting, also found this most important. She also emphasized the standing order that city police have no role in immigration enforcement.

Question Two: Use of the Armory Site

Four candidates were asked how the city should use the armory site and how to pay for that use: Pompei, McKinney, Kevin “Coach K” Lockhart and Silke Pope. Pompei, McKinney and Pope all mentioned that the three concept plans developed with community input each had good elements but none was perfect. They all noted the opportunities of this large, gateway site; perhaps low-income housing in partnership with nonprofit housing organizations, said Pompei. Perhaps partnering with the county and state to be a small business incubator, said McKinney. Maybe a little bit from each concept plan, Pope said.

Lockhart said that for him the armory was a sacred place as he had served there for three years as a member of the National Guard. He would like to see “something for our children,” a place where they could learn how to meet the next stage in life. “Not every kid goes to college,” so perhaps the armory could become a place where they could learn plumbing, other trades or general life skills.

Question Three: The Environment

What municipal actions could be taken to protect the environment, in light of declining federal support, was the third question

Bill Orleans said the city should ally with governmental and nongovernmental organizations advancing climate concerns. He also stated that many private companies remove trash and recycling from the city and thought the city should take it over, to reduce the number of trucks affecting the environment.

Rodney Roberts wants to “Think big and act big” and seek National Park status for Beltsville Agricultural Research Center and the Patuxent Wildlife Refuge, along with any Goddard federal land. It represents enormous green space and important habitat; it’s vital to provide kids access to nature, said Roberts. He would work with groups such as the National Park Trust on this big cause.

Weaver noted steps council is already taking for environmental sustainability, such as the electrification of the city fleet, installation of electrical vehicle charging stations and the efforts to reduce trash with the pay-as-you-throw plan. She would like to see grants for the solarization of city buildings, local air quality monitoring and individual actions that could magnify across the city.

Question Four: Affordability

McKinney, Orleans and Knesel were asked what actions they would propose to increase the nonresidential tax rate and keep Greenbelt affordable. Fritz and Jordan also chose to answer this question. McKinney and Orleans both addressed the commercial tax rate and how the city should work with the state on reducing tax abatements for businesses. Knesel, noting the empty high-rise office buildings once occupied by NASA contractors, argued for motivating developers to make those spaces more attractive as incubator spaces for small businesses and start-up companies that could help provide jobs to residents.

Fritz, combining an answer to this question with questions about the armory site and unemployment, envisions Greenbelt as a cultural powerhouse if the city enhances transportation options for local job access, including better routes and more frequent runs of Green Line trains, WMATA buses, MARC and Amtrak. Development of the armory site as a job incubator would depend on a transportation justice strategy.

Jordan acknowledged the challenging times and said it is crucial for the city to stabilize businesses here and build on our strengths, such as the city’s economic development staff. He mentioned “the medical mile” of health care practices along Hanoover Parkway and the possibility of bringing in more.

Question Five: Violent Crime

Weaver, Pompei, Fritz and Jordan were asked what specific actions the city could take to deter violent crime, with Roberts, Lockhart, Pope and Knesel also weighing in on this topic in light of the devastating murders the weekend before. The community policing model earned praise from many, who, at the same time, acknowledged that it is not enough. Ways must be found to reach young people who are at risk, with after-school resources (Weaver); more money for youth and social services (Pompi); more open space funds to build a park in Greenbelt West (Roberts); more patrols, more officers, more funding (Pope) and getting guns out of the hands of kids (Jordan).

Lockhart, who coaches at the Springhill Lake Recreation Center, found this a particularly emotional issue, urging that the police engage more with the community on foot and bike patrols, not just drive-by policing. He suggested a Police Athletic League where officers could serve as mentors and coaches so the kids would learn to trust the police and not fear them.

Fritz and Knesel both talked about the effects of economic disparity and the lack of affordable housing on crimes in Greenbelt’s different neighborhoods. Fritz emphasized racial disparity in neighborhoods and talked about the needs of children as parents work multiple jobs and longer hours to avoid evictions and that social services come only after the harm has been done. Knesel, who noted that she and many members of the community were participating in the HUG WALK when the 14-year-old was shot and killed nearby, said the lack of neighborhood stability with frequent evictions and rental turnovers inhibits community members from looking after each other.

Question Six: Job Loss

The final question, asked of Pope, Lockhart and Roberts and also answered by Orleans, concerned how to support residents who have recently lost their jobs and how to pay for those strategies. All four stressed the need for citizens to take care of each other, particularly in light of the government shutdown and other federal job losses affecting the city. Pope and Orleans focused on food, with city food distribution, the interfaith food pantry and, as Orleans suggested, mutual aid societies hosting meals in the city gym, Springhill Lake Recreation Center and perhaps the Firehouse. Lockhart and Roberts urged all residents to reach out and help each other – if you have a job that needs to be done, hire someone local to do it. People need to help each other, they said.

Closing Statements

In their 90-second closing statements candidates each stressed their key themes.

Pompi said that in these unprecedented times, Greenbelt needs leaders with the moral courage to take stands and get things done, such as the standing order against police enforcement on immigration and commitment to the city’s JEDI (Justice, Equity, Diversity, Inclusion) goals.

Roberts stressed his 34 years of accomplishments on council but noted that it was a result of the people he has worked with over the years on council and in

Bridging Neighborhoods

Building Community

I hope you will re-elect me to City Council to continue to be a voice to help bridge neighborhoods and to build community across all Greenbelt. As a city, we need to:

- Plan for the City’s future in a time of economic uncertainty, and support residents in the face of challenges from federal turmoil and overreach
- Promote environmental sustainability and resilience in the face of climate change
- Proactively pursue equity, fair practices, and justice in city policies
- Expand and improve parks and recreation opportunities, as well as bicycle and pedestrian accessibility, across the city

RANKED CHOICE VOTING MARYLAND

My Point of View

Importance of Local Newspapers

by Lois Rosado

Last week PBS showed a remarkable story about the loss of local community and large nationwide newspapers, and discussions were held about the implications of that reality in preserving democratic principles. The fact that both large and small newspapers are being taken over by hedge fund magnates, firing investigative journalists and advancing propagandist-type information means that balanced reporting no longer exists.

The First Amendment of the Constitution protects Freedom of the Press in order to prevent tyranny, misinformation and dictatorship from developing in the United States.

When local papers close, information about city, state and federal government decisions is no longer available – especially to those who live in rural communities. With the closure of public radio stations in many of these areas as a result of government defunding, there is even less opportunity to learn what is happening that can impact everyday life. In such climates, misinformation can run rampant and cause divisiveness within a community.

Facts and evidence are being sacrificed for hearsay and idolatry. In order to find information based on evidence, one has to comb through many different types of media, including what is left in print.

We, in Greenbelt, have been fortunate for the continued coverage by the Greenbelt News Review to be able to read what issues and decisions are being contemplated at the local, state and federal government levels that will affect our county and the City of Greenbelt especially.

Our local paper needs our support and also needs more writers from East and West Greenbelt to share neighbor stories to help inform all residents about local happenings. Become a champion of the Greenbelt News Review, get involved.

Let's keep the Greenbelt News Review alive and viable for years to come. Let's not lose our local paper!

Utopia Festival: A Cinematic Delight for Viewers, Filmmakers

by Joshica Kiah Craig

The Utopia Film Festival is held each October. Last year's was nothing short of a remarkable experience – easily one of the best film festivals I've ever attended.

The lineup was diverse, thought-provoking and a testament to the power of storytelling in its many forms. The festival kicked off with a reception and awards ceremony with dinner, a professional photographer for a "red carpet" moment and gift bags filled with Utopia Film Festival swag. They presented awards in several categories and screened some of the films. During the festival an impressive array of films spanning genres and cultures were shown, offering something for every type of cinephile. From compelling documentaries to heartwarming indie dramas, the selection was carefully curated to both entertain and inspire. My documentary Black Hair Love, an exploration of the rise of women-owned businesses centered around Black hair, left a lasting impact on the audience. The film's celebration of identity, diversity and entrepreneurship was perfectly aligned with the festival's theme of inclusivity and empowerment.

One of several venues, the historic Greenbelt Cinema added a touch of nostalgia and charm to the festival experience. Its intimate setting fostered a sense of community among attendees, making it easy to engage in conversations with fellow film enthusiasts and filmmakers alike. The theater's staff was welcoming and attentive, ensuring that every aspect of the event ran smoothly. Inside, the theater was clean and modern and the popcorn was delicious.

The communication was excellent and the engaging post-screening Q&A sessions were well curated, providing invaluable insights into the filmmaking process and allowing the audience to delve deeper into the themes presented on screen. It was a unique opportunity to hear directly from the filmmakers and gain a better understanding of the stories behind the films.

The Utopia Film Festival not only showcased outstanding films but also fostered a spirit of collaboration and dialogue among creatives and audiences. It was a celebration of cinematic artistry that left attendees feeling inspired and enriched. For anyone who appreciates the transformative power of film, the Utopia Film Festival is a must-attend event. I eagerly anticipate what this year's festival will bring and am grateful for the opportunity to be a part of such an extraordinary celebration of film.

Filmmaker Joshica Kiah Craig is a graduate of Eleanor Roosevelt High School.

The Utopia Film Festival returns October 18-20, transforming the city into a hub for independent film and creative conversation. Screenings will take place at the Greenbelt Cinema, New Deal Café and Greenbelt 835 Firehouse, showcasing bold documentaries, visionary shorts and inspiring features from around the world. The festival's mission is to highlight stories that spark imagination and social change: from environmental justice to community resilience. Highlights include filmmaker Q&As and local artist showcases. Explore the full lineup at greenbeltaccessstv.org/utopia-film-festival.

PGCMLS Partner Spotlight: Unselfish Acts of Kindness

The Prince George's County Memorial Library System (PGCMLS) is proud to partner with an array of organizations that do important work within Prince George's County. For this Library Check-In, the spotlight is on Random Unselfish Acts of Kindness (RUAK), a Greenbelt organization whose founder, Robert Goldberg-Strassler, was recently recognized as Greenbelt's 2025 Outstanding Citizen.

RUAK was founded in 2017 to foster community connections in Greenbelt. One pillar of RUAK's work is the Uplift Literacy program, which is designed to facilitate greater access to early childhood literacy for Greenbelt families, largely through a monthly dual-language Pre-K Story Hour with the Greenbelt Library that brings library storytime services directly into the community. At these programs, kids get free books, snacks and access to fun activities like scavenger hunts and active play in the gym.

"For me, it's so important that it was us neighbors who made this happen," says Jennifer Dudley, president of the Greenbelt Rotary and a founding RUAK volunteer. "And then to see the impact this opportunity has on these families, to see the kids just shine when they pick out their books – it's become a part of our routine to watch these families grow. That's the beautiful thing about the library: it connects us to learning, and to each other."

This article was drawn from a PGCMLS Partner Spotlight announcement.

An August 2025 scene on the Beltsville Agricultural Research Center, looking north toward Powder Mill Road and Building 200 from Sheep Road at the National Archives in College Park) – there was land adjacent to BARC that had become “seriously run-down” but was “scenically attractive” and suitable for construction of a complete community. The site offered “economy in building costs,” and there was a “plentiful supply of relief labor” available in the area and urgently in need of employment. Selection of the site offered both an opportunity to expand the land base of the research center and to provide housing accommodation for its staff. The report stated: “Greenbelt is an important feature in the development of the National Agricultural Research Center, which, it is expected, will eventually become the largest Agricultural Research Center in the world.” Of course, proximity to Washington, D.C., was also a consideration in selection of the site for Greenbelt, although Tugwell and Lansill had concerns that the site was too close to Washington scrutiny; Richards saw that as a minor disadvantage compared to the unique opportunity of establishing a “housing lab” in conjunction with the agricultural research center.

By mid-March of 1935, acquisition of land for the Greenbelt project was underway, guided by the basic objective for the Greenbelt Town Program “to obtain a large tract of land, and thus avoid the complications ordinarily due to diverse ownerships.” Most of the land was optioned by the Land Utilization Division of the Federal Emergency Relief Administration and the Subsistence Homestead Division of the U.S. Department of the Interior (DOI), with the newly created Resettlement Administration inheriting that land and adding to it. Nearly 12,200 acres had been purchased by September 1935 of which only about 4,000 acres was to be devoted to the Greenbelt Project. The remaining roughly 8,200 acres were turned over to BARC, which had already grown to roughly 5,500 acres since its establishment in 1910, when USDA purchased the 475-acre Walnut Grange property. The land transferred was “for the use of the Bureau of Animal Industry, Bureau of Dairy Industry, Experimental Forestry, Plant Industry, Biological Survey and Soil Conservation.”

An early outcome was use of 2,670 acres to create the Patuxent Research Refuge (now under DOI), which President Franklin Roosevelt established through executive order in 1936. Over the past 90 years, other federal agencies have built facilities on land acquired under the auspices of the Greenbelt Project and given to BARC, including NASA, the Food and Drug Administration, Secret Service and State Department. These land transfers brought BARC down to its current size of approximately 6,500 acres.

Additional information on Greenbelt’s origins and early history can be found online or in books available in the Greenbelt Library’s Tugwell Room, including The New Deal in the Suburbs: A History of the Greenbelt Town Program, 1935-1954 by J.L. SIGNS continued from page 1 city. Following approval in May 2022, the project kicked off in January 2023.

“I just want to remind folks these are conceptual; anything that comes from this will have to go into further design, which will be an implementation cost,” said Fearer at the start of the presentation.

Types of Signs

The plan aims to improve navigation for residents and visitors, and enhance Greenbelt’s sense of place. It includes gateway signs, like the one on Southway, directional signs for cars, bikes and pedestrians and informational signage. The city plans to also include banners, trail markers, informational kiosks and directories. Currently, signs exist in the city, but vary in quality, the way information is presented, ownership and material, said Fearer at the meeting.

Costs

The signs can be expensive, and one sign that welcomes visitors to Greenbelt can cost up to $30,000. The recent gateway sign on Southway was funded by a $50,000 grant with approximately $30,000 in matching money from the city. However, “it is important to note that a significant portion of the costs weren’t related to the cast stone sign itself, but rather to the demolition and reconstruction of the sitting wall at that location,” Fearer noted.

The draft plan calls for the addition of five new gateway signs, as well as other forms of signage throughout the city. Looking at a table of costs that ranged as high as $30,000 for a gateway sign and $2,000 to $4,000 for a vehicular directional sign, Jordan asked if they were aggregate costs or for individual signs and was told the latter, and he jokingly asked if they could make them hollow.

In addition to the cost of the signs, the installation costs are estimated to run an additional 35 to 50 percent of the materials cost, lighting to be another $1,500 to $5,000 and the design, permitting and engineering fees to be 10 to 20 percent of the total project cost. Councilmember Silke Pope asked if installation could be done in-house rather than contracted out and Fearer responded that it might be possible for some of the banners, for example, but they didn’t yet know to that level of detail.

AAB Recommendation

Amanda Larsen of the Arts Advisory Board (AAB) said that their board recommends that a graphic designer be hired to go beyond the concept stage and give consideration to the architecture of Greenbelt while also considering the clarity of the signs. Larsen also noted that the AAB was interested in bringing more visibility to the arts in Greenbelt, and to venues such as the Cinema.

Scaling Back

Jordan urged staff to research alternative materials and suggested materials like carbon fiber and

Renderings of informational signage

epoxy resin. “There are a lot of different materials that have been developed ... that are just as durable as concrete ... that could be used that are a lot lighter and would last a significant amount of time,” Jordan said.

Councilmember Kristen Weaver also recognized the project’s cost and stressed the importance of intentional spending. Greenbelt doesn’t just have to worry about the upfront costs of these signs, but also the long-term maintenance and replacement schedule, said Weaver. “We need to be careful to think about all of the costs in our decisions,” Weaver said. “There’s the cost of ... does this sign have more maintenance in the future?

Can it be done in-house, or is it someone else that has to take care of it?”

Councilmember Rodney Roberts questioned the necessity of numerous signs, given that people use the GPS systems in their cars and on their phones nowadays to get to their destinations. “Maybe we don’t need to put in a couple million dollars’ worth of signs,” he said.

Phased Implementation

Asked about the total costs of the project, Fearer told the News Review: “The plan doesn’t outline a total cost estimate in part because final costs will vary depending on multiple factors, including materials, installation, site preparation, signage complexity, regulatory requirements, design and consulting fees, project management and labor costs and maintenance. The city also anticipates implementing the proposed wayfinding in a phased manner, as outlined in the plan. Each sign type can be designed and installed independently based on funding availability and city priorities, and if funding becomes available for specific elements, those can be installed as stand-alone projects while still conforming to the overall wayfinding plan.”

Funding

“The city does not currently have funding earmarked for implementation of the wayfinding plan,” Fearer told the News Review. “As mentioned in the plan, the city will explore a number of funding opportunities, including federal, state, local and philanthropic grants.”

Potential sources of funding for this project, as cited in the draft, include federal monies and grants such as the Department of Transportation’s Transportation Alternatives Program, Maryland Heritage Areas Authority Grants, the Maryland Department of Housing and Community Development’s Community Legacy Program and the Federal Highway Administration’s Recreation Trails Program. There is also the possibility of funding from Prince George’s County Regional Development Authority and public-private partnerships, according to the presentation at the worksession. The final draft of the plan is expected to be completed in February 2026, according to a previous city council work session agenda.

years' budgets, which would provide degrees of assistance beyond the end of Covid's emergency rental and foreclosure assistance. It should have done so.

Emmett V. Jordan

Given the current economic uncertainty, I will prioritize investments in our residents and local economy. Partnering with the county and state for career resources is important. By investing in retraining and upskilling programs for displaced federal workers, youth and older adults, we help residents remain in Greenbelt. Supporting grassroots efforts and fostering innovation will drive stability, creativity and growth.

We may need to revisit support programs that aided our community during the pandemic: food distribution, emergency mortgage and rental assistance, counseling and family services.

To strengthen our economy, Greenbelt must work with organizations like Prince George's Chamber of Commerce and Greenbelt Business Alliance to build on local strengths and address weaknesses.

Redirecting undesignated funds toward workforce development and deferring capital improvement projects may be necessary to achieve these goals. A balanced, forward-thinking approach ensures no one is left behind, positioning Greenbelt as a resilient city of opportunity for all.

Amy Knesel

The power and strength of Greenbelt has always been its people. I believe our city's spending should prioritize people-first programs that keep our community strong and stable. That doesn't mean neglecting deferred maintenance – putting off repairs only makes them more costly later – but it does mean being strategic. We should continue pursuing grants and outside funding to free up city resources, and invest in small, local businesses so more office space is filled, business tax revenue grows and residents have good jobs close to home.

We must also stay mindful about housing, doing everything we can to help people stay in their homes. When residents are forced out, we lose more than neighbors – we lose community. The stronger and more connected we are, the better our city functions. When residents are engaged and supported, everyone, including our staff, benefits.

Danielle P. McKinney

Greenbelt's $40.1 million budget should reflect both fiscal responsibility and the values that make our community strong. Nearly 75 percent of the budget already supports essential services – public safety, housing stability, health programs and food access – that protect residents and preserve our quality of life.

As costs rise and state and federal funding decline, we must make every dollar count. That means using remaining ARPA funds through 2026 to support infrastructure, phasing capital projects, leveraging community partnerships, automating systems and sunseting programs that no longer meet community needs. Greenbelt should prioritize implementing its Economic Development Strategy and maintaining initiatives with measurable community impact and sustainability.

I will continue to champion partnerships, grants, food access and workforce development initiatives – like apprenticeships and job transition programs – that strengthen residents' stability and our local economy. Balancing efficiency with compassion should protect the Greenbelt we cherish while preparing for a vibrant, inclusive, resilient future.

Jenni Pompei

To address current economic challenges, the City Council should prioritize funding our vital social services, including counseling, food distribution and emergency rental aid. In addition, we should strategically invest in workforce development for residents and economic development to strengthen Greenbelt's job market. Maintaining the city's vibrant public parks and community amenities also will be important to help residents maintain quality of life.

To maintain and increase the social services out-of-work residents may require, the city will need to defer some expensive capital projects and replacement spending on items such as fleet vehicles and other equipment. Greenbelt also will need to explore new grant opportunities to boost revenue and consider increasing collaborations with neighboring municipalities to split costs on shared services.

It also will be essential for council to be transparent about the city's budget forecast and planning and work to engage the community on formulating solutions.

Rodney M. Roberts

We need to stop wasting money on things we don't need! Examples: A $16,000 truck engine; replacement of a $270,000 loader that had nothing wrong with it; $700,000 for a trash truck that we did not need; replacement of a $150,000 rollback tow truck that needed only minor repairs.

We have a budget request of $500,000 to replace the outhouse at the Lake Park, that in my estimation needs less than $5,000 in what should be routine maintenance.

There's a push for a new municipal building for many millions of dollars because we need more office space, while at the same time we want to tear down a beautiful, structurally sound building that would more than meet our needs (the Armory).

We rely more and more on contractors and consultants. Instead, let's invest in our people with education/training so we can do more ourselves for less!

Greenbelt Farmers Market

Silke I. Pope

We must be financially prudent and strategic in allocating the city's resources. A careful review of all programs and spending should be done to determine which are most effective and which need to be realigned to reflect our current financial situation. Priority should be placed on investing in services that provide the greatest value and benefit to our residents.

Looking ahead we must plan for long-term stability by diversifying our revenue sources. Relying primarily on property taxes is not sustainable. It is important for us to find creative ways to grow our city's revenues without increasing the tax burden on residents.

Pursuing grant opportunities is essential. The redevelopment of the Greenbelt Armory site presents an opportunity to strengthen our local economy and expand our tax base. Thoughtful planning and wise financial management can ensure that Greenbelt remains fiscally strong, resilient and well-prepared for the future.

Kristen L.K. Weaver

Instead of one disruptive change, Greenbelt is best served by finding small efficiencies to make the necessary savings. Recent examples include: implementing electronic financial systems; bringing online Greenbelt's solar farm; and uncovering Pepco overcharges for streetlights. Switching to LED streetlights would save even more. I also support Save As You Throw unit-based pricing for trash, in part, because it could reduce the city's landfill fees by 40 percent based on reduced trash generation. Small economies added together allow us to maintain vital city services as costs rise.

Council also needs to continue advocating to the county for increased tax differentials. Greenbelt provides certain services, such as police and public works, that are also provided by the county. Greenbelt citizens should not be taxed twice – once by the city and once by the county – for these services. Increased tax differentials lower residents' county taxes in recognition of this.

Kevin "Coach K" Lockhart

Given the economic challenges in Greenbelt, the city council should shift its spending priorities to directly support residents by expanding existing programs focused on affordable housing, job training and community services. Public engagement should be a critical part of this process, allowing residents to advocate for changes and provide input during the budget cycle.

Here are some ideas that are already in place but may not be widely known among residents, especially in the West side of Greenbelt (Franklin Park):

- Expand direct financial and social support: Develop programs that provide immediate and tangible relief to residents facing economic hardships.
- Create emergency assistance funds.
- Support food assistance programs.
- Increase funding for Greenbelt CARES.
- More police engagement in the West side.

Frankie Santos Fritz

As recent tragedies show, public safety will continue to be a core concern. Shootings and violence impact our quality of life and feelings of safety, and evidence-based investments in prevention and deterrence, especially for youth, must be considered alongside measures for timely accountability for violence.

We need to center economic development, including phone service improvements, and enhance transportation to diversify our economy and be an enticing home for new residents.

The city should do more to engage residents in existing community-driven mutual aid and organizing efforts. For example, supporting and partnering with neighborhood and tenant organizations to educate residents about rights and responsibilities under the law can increase the effectiveness of our complaint-based enforcement staffing.

Finally we should regularly review and track the effectiveness of the various city consultants and contractors, and look at ways to cooperatively procure external services with neighboring jurisdictions and agencies to find savings.

City Notes

The Greenbelt Assistance in Living program's Health Fair at the Community Center had 20 providers; about 75 residents attended and 46 received flu shots.

Annexation Comments

Ron Benjamin's October 9 letter about the potential annexation of Beltsville Agriculture Station land raises an interesting point.

If his reading of the Maryland Code is correct, an annexation of Beltsville Agricultural Station land would allow the county and the City of Greenbelt to authorize development of the land because there had been no sale. It is unfortunately true that real estate interests are one of the largest funding sources for all local political campaigns. So any annexation could be a backdoor for development.

We should, of course, keep an eye on the actions of neighboring jurisdictions who may want to either annex the land or help Greenbelt preserve its present use. But until the federal government make moves to dispose of the land, I believe it is unnecessary to spend money preparing for an annexation.

I was not aware that the WMATA Greenbelt repair and storage yard was on Beltsville land. This raises interesting questions about the long-term future of the Beltsville land north of the repair yard, which is about the right distance north of the Greenbelt Station to warrant a new WMATA station and high-density, mixed-use development. Having known a number of very successful and wealthy developers in the past, I can tell you that the potential for that site has probably not gone unnoticed.

Indoor Pool Rejoicing

Oh joy! Oh bliss! Oh relief for aching muscles and bones! Oh community! The indoor pool is open again.

I am writing to recognize, and thank, the steadfast staff at the Greenbelt Aquatic & Fitness Center (GAFC), the Public Works staff and all the other behind-the-scenes planners and do-ers who made the repair and reopening of the indoor pool on the projected date possible.

Shout-outs to Stephen Parks and Cynthia Brown of GAFC for being on the frontline of meeting the needs of the wide variety of regular users of the indoor pool. They created a respectful and inclusive schedule, while maintaining a competent and sunny outlook during (what must have been) a frustrating project on such a large scale.

Many thanks to the amazing team of front desk staff, fitness instructors, lifeguards and pool managers, who kept the passholders and guests as comfortable as possible during the not-so-warm, hot and then not-so-hot weather this spring, summer and fall. These fine city employees deal with a lot of guff and roll with it.

I know I am not alone in my gratitude.

public. He said he had the desire to continue to get things done.

Knesel stated that the community's strength comes from the connections that are forged. Noting that she was appointed to council after Ric Gordon's death, she wants to continue his legacy and believes in her ability to meet the challenges the city faces.

Fritz attempted to cover a number of issues, including supporting federal workers, working toward a union for city employees, enhancing transportation to better connect the city and protecting the rights of immigrants and the LGBTQ community. "Your vote is your voice," he said.

Orleans urged greater voter turnout, but warned, "Your vote is not your voice. Your voice is your voice." He called on people to vote but also get involved. They should attend city council meetings, said Orleans, noting that, rather than paying the eternal vigilance that is the price of liberty, Greenbelt residents are "not even casually attentive."

Lockhart, as he had done throughout the night, stressed that "The main thing is the kids, the children." Greenbelt residents need to work with them and help be part of the solution.

Jordan noted his 15 years of experience on council, helping to block maglev and weather Covid. He said affordability is his number one priority to find ways to keep people in their homes.

Weaver, McKinney and Pope all applauded Greenbelt's cooperative ethos and spirit of volunteerism. Weaver stressed that she is organized and compassionate and wants to work with council to set policy after feedback from the community. McKinney called herself a facilitator who works to connect the diverse community and find creative and imaginative ways to support them. Pope talked about her long commitment to public safety and neighborhood improvement from the time she lived in Springhill Lake (now Franklin Park).

Incident Summary

Greenbelt Police reported one death; two domestic incidents, one involving assault; and two mental health diversions.

Armed Teen Arrested

On October 12 at 3:54 p.m. near 6088 Greenbelt Road, a security officer witnessed a group of three teens wearing all black aggressively confronting another teenaged boy. The lone teen pulled out a handgun in self-defense, causing the group to back away and leave. Police located the teen and found the handgun in his waistband. He was arrested and taken to Greenbelt Police station.

Assault with Arrest

On October 8 at 1:02 p.m. near 6000 Greenbelt Road, mall security restrained a man who assaulted an employee; police arrested him.

Break-in

On October 9 at 1:55 p.m. near 9012 Breezewood Terrace, a storage room containing cleaning supplies was broken into and supplies were tossed around, but nothing was reported missing.

Threats

On October 6 at 10:14 a.m. near 6000 Greenbelt Road, a man entered a store and created a disturbance, saying he was going to shoot up the store.

On October 7 at 10:34 a.m. near 9150 Edmonston Road, a resident made threats to the leasing office via their AI portal; officers tried to make contact with the resident.

Fraud

On October 6 near 5999 Springhill Drive, a customer discovered that one of her utility accounts was linked to someone else; she contacted the utility company to resolve the issue.

On October 6 near 7513 Greenbelt Road, a woman lost her wallet and credit cards; she froze her accounts, and someone unsuccessfully tried to use her cards to purchase items.

On October 9 near 230 Lastner Lane, fraudulent activity appeared on a credit card account.

Theft and Shoplifting

On October 6 at 1:52 p.m. near 6100 Greenbelt Road, a woman was caught shoplifting and was cited, banned and released; at 6:41 p.m. near 5908 Cherrywood Terrace, someone moving out of an apartment had several items stolen.

On October 7 at 3:43 p.m. near 6100 Greenbelt Road, a store's loss prevention staff detained a shoplifter who was previously banned; police released him with a criminal citation.

On October 8 at 12:23 p.m. near 5910 Greenbelt Road, two people stole several items.

On October 10 at 1:56 p.m. near 6100 Greenbelt Road, a woman stole several items and was stopped, banned and issued a criminal citation.

On October 11 at 4:54 p.m. near 6100 Greenbelt Road, two people stole several items and fled in a vehicle.

On October 12 at 3:17 p.m. near 6100 Greenbelt Road, a boy stole miscellaneous items; all the items were returned, and he was released to his parent.

Vandalism

Cyclist Killed in Hit-And-Run In BARC; Shaking Community

On Wednesday, October 8, cyclist Lisa Martin was killed in a hit-and-run incident while riding her bike within the Beltsville Agricultural Research Center (BARC). Martin, 50, of Riverdale, was president of Route One Velo, a cycling club and racing team. An announcement from Route One Velo said, "Lisa was more than a teammate: she was a friend and guide for our adventures on two wheels and through life. All who rode with her felt her guidance."

Martin was director of data and engagement strategies at the laborers' union LIUNA. She leaves behind her husband, children, mother, stepfather and numerous friends, including those of a shaken local cycling community.

The investigation into the hit-and-run is thought by local police departments to be handled by U.S. Park Police. Speaking to the News Review on Monday, U.S. Park Police directed us to email their records department for further information but advised us that the government is closed.

Services will be held Saturday, October 18 at the Boston St. Fort Funeral Home, 5801 Cleveland Avenue, Riverdale. Visitation is at 10 a.m. with service to follow. A graveside service will be at 2 p.m. at George Washington Cemetery in Adelphi.

Crisis Hotline's New Number is 988

The National Suicide Prevention Lifeline dialing code has changed, effective July 16. The new three-digit dialing code is 988 and it's available for phone calls and text messages.

The former Lifeline phone number (1-800-273-8255) will continue to be accessible.

Calls and text messages are confidential and free.

"No matter what problems you're dealing with, whether or not you're thinking about suicide, if you need someone to lean on for emotional support, call the Lifeline," the 988 Suicide & Crisis Lifeline says on its website at samhsa.gov/find-help/988.

Re-Elect SILKE POPE TO GREENBELT CITY COUNCIL

ECONOMIC SUSTAINABILITY AND STABILITY - I will support the growth of Greenbelt's small businesses and explore new tax-based income opportunities for city residents.

GREENBELT COMMUNITY - I will continue to support a wide variety of programs for our seniors, family and youth. Our community thrives when we invest in people - through arts, culture and environmental programs that keeps Greenbelt creative, caring and environmentally proactive.

PUBLIC SAFETY - I will keep working to ensure that our Greenbelt Police Department has the resources it needs to stay strong, responsive and community-oriented. Public safety is a shared effort and I will continue urging the county to return the Greenbelt Volunteer Fire Department and Rescue Squad to full staffing levels, ensuring our residents receive the protection and emergency response they deserve.

I Would Appreciate Your Vote on November 4th

By Authority of: C. Backstrom, Treasurer

Raiders Navigate Eagles, Elements En route to Senior Night Victory

by Patrick Gleason

While the intensifying mist heightened a chill reminiscent of late autumn, the High Point Eagles appeared poised to spoil the Eleanor Roosevelt girls soccer Senior Night celebration. As the first half carried on, the Raiders not only hadn't scored, but had conceded two near Eagle goals on a night unbecoming of a celebration at that point. But sophomore Emery Gregory infused her team with energy heading into the break; after the Raiders ran a short corner kick play, the fullback ripped a shot from the edge of the 18-yard box toward the near post. The 1-0 lead eased the evening's dampness.

And in the second half, senior Autumn Freeman was more ubiquitous than the precipitation. Less than 20 seconds in, she had infiltrated the High Point defense and found the back of the net. Within five minutes of the second half, the Raiders had scored two more goals and pushed their lead to 4-0, with Freeman scoring again, followed by classmate Sofia Zuniga. Later, junior Ariana Cruz added another Raider tally – following her impressive hat trick performance against DuVal on October 9 – before forward Karina Reyes Carranza assisted Freeman for yet another goal, securing her third hat trick of the season. And as the Raiders dominated possession for the remainder of the game, securing keepers Zeala Tantoh and Lien Gareri a combined clean sheet, Freeman added the icing for the ensuing Senior Night celebration. With less than five minutes remaining, Freeman looked up in space 25 yards from goal and didn't hesitate. Her lofted shot rose through the luminous rainfall before dropping under the crossbar with little room to spare.

Junior Varsity

The junior varsity squad started the evening with a 6-0 triumph over High Point. Freshman Ayanna Steele started the scoring for the Raiders by touching a ball past the Eagle keeper before adding a finishing touch to the back of the net. However, it was junior Joyce Kengne who scored the goal of the afternoon by using her chest to redirect a Raider corner into the back of the net. Roosevelt never looked back in a dominant victory that started the celebratory evening for the 10-member varsity senior class. The Raiders acknowledged the contributions of seniors Zeala Tantoh, Iris Gaycken, Addison Green, Karina Reyes Carranza, Yadira Reyes Carranza, Leilah Eggleston, Claudia van der Have, Sofia Zuniga, Esther Obisesan and Autumn Freeman. And with the two victories notched, the rain fittingly ended at the conclusion of the varsity game, commencing a celebratory atmosphere despite the efforts of the Eagles and the elements.

ERHS Music Department Fall Fruit Fundraiser

Greenbelt's Fall Fest Offers Fun Activities — and Pumpkins

by Nick Hall NH

Greenbelt's Fall Fest took place on Saturday, October 11. More than 100 people showed up at Schrom Hills Park to participate in the various activities. There were face painting, cornhole, boom lift rides, badminton, inflatable bubble ball racing, a food truck and several information and game booths.

Goodies and fliers were handed out by many organizations, including the Greenbelt Chess Club, Greenbelt Book Club and various youth clubs. There were poetry, voting information, athletic trophies and live music. A steady stream of people played each other in chess, including the mayor and several city council candidates. The hayride seemed popular as well, since there was nearly always a line.

The main event of the day, however, was the pumpkin carving for the upcoming Pumpkin Walks. The Greenbelt Forest Preserve has hosted the Greenbelt Pumpkin Festival since 1988 "as a way to get Greenbelters out into the North Woods and build appreciation for this wonderful local resource." Festival organizers received help in the form of both donations and volunteers who helped transport a truckload of pumpkins from the Greenbelt Co-op to Schrom Hills Park. Thanks to their help, visitors were able to start cutting, gutting and carving the stack of pumpkins. The Schrom Hills Pumpkin Walk was later that day.

If you missed it, you will have a few more chances to participate in the Greenbelt Pumpkin Festival events. There will be carving on Friday, October 17, at Roosevelt Center with a Pumpkin Walk through the Forest Preserve on Saturday, October 18, as well as a final carving and Trunk or Treat behind Beltway Plaza on Friday, October 24.

2025 Pumpkin Festival Under Way; Two Weekends Remain

by Stacy Stewart

The Greenbelt Pumpkin Festival is a delightful tradition made possible by the generosity and participation of Greenbelters. It is funded entirely by donations and run by volunteers. This year's first event was part of the city's Fall Fest at Schrom Hills Park on Saturday, October 11. Carving tools, candles and 150 pumpkins were provided for participants to carve into jack-o-lanterns, which were then placed on the center path in the park for a glowing Pumpkin Walk that evening.

The Old Greenbelt Pumpkin Walk is a tradition that began in 1988 as part of a larger effort to preserve the North Woods from development. In 2018, the festival was expanded to include events in Greenbelt East and Greenbelt West.

There are two more weekends of pumpkin events to come: carving in Roosevelt Center from 4 to 8:30 p.m. on Friday, October 17; a pumpkin walk in the North Woods (corner of Ridge and Northway) on Saturday, October 18 from 6 to 9 p.m.; and carving at Trunk or Treat behind Beltway Plaza on Friday, October 24 from 5 to 7 p.m. For more details about the events or information on how to support the Pumpkin Festival by volunteering or donating, Facebook members can check out facebook.com/GreenbeltPumpkinFestival.
