Council Moves on Cellphone Coverage and Traffic Calming

by Larry Beyna

Map showing the speeds at or below which 85 percent of motorists drove at different locations in Greenbelt. Fifteen percent of motorists drove faster. The average number of vehicles daily ranged from the mid-200s on Lakeside Drive to nearly 1,500 on Ridge Road. In all cases, the posted speed limit was 25 mph.

At the December 8 Greenbelt City Council meeting, Mayor Emmett Jordan opened the discussion by noting resident concerns about poor cellphone coverage in parts of the city. In response to those concerns, he announced that he would request a January 5 worksession on the topic (which was later approved by council). See the bottom of this page for a story about the charter amendment required for unionization of Public Works employees and other actions taken at the meeting.

Fiscal Issues Lead to Pilot SAYT Program: Part Two

by Erica Johns

This article covers the city waste collection budget deficit and the planned use of SAYT revenue.

A deficit in the solid waste collection account occurred in every fiscal year since 2019, except 2020, rising to a $279,635 projected deficit for Fiscal Year (FY) 2026. This month City Manager Josué Salmerón told the News Review the deficits were caused by increased costs for delivering service, including personnel, truck maintenance, repair and fuel, and landfill trash “tipping” fees. He said the city’s annual $280 fee paid by households receiving city waste collection service, unchanged since FY 2016, didn’t reflect the cost of providing that quality of service. In budget discussions in 2023, then-councilmember Judith Davis suggested increasing the waste collection fee, as did Councilmember Kristen Weaver in 2024.

Salmerón assumed his position in late 2023 and was unable to speak to events before his arrival. He told the News Review the deficit greatly increased beginning in FY 2024, after council’s 2023 decision to increase city employee compensation, which combined with 2025 and 2026 county landfill trash “tipping” fee increases, forced addressing the deficit now.

City Leadership Turnover

The News Review determined that the deficits also coincided with much turnover in the city manager and Public Works director positions and the pandemic. In January 2017, longtime city manager Mike McLaughlin retired, succeeded by Nicole Ard. Longtime assistant city manager David Moran retired in March 2021, succeeded by Timothy George. When Ard left the city manager position in December 2021, George served as Acting City Manager until Salmerón was appointed city manager in September 2023. On Monday, December 15, members of Maryland’s congressional delegation met with NASA officials and stakeholders to discuss Goddard’s workforce and missions. “The NASA Goddard story is part of a larger story where the Trump administration has really eaten away at American leadership in many areas, including when it comes to space and innovation and exploration,” said Sen. Chris Van Hollen (D), following the meeting. “One of the areas they’re cutting is space science, and if you think about it, you can’t have a space program if you don’t have the space science,” said Van Hollen. “The big takeaway is that the Trump administration is really eating away at our competitiveness around the world. They are ceding ground to China and our adversaries and we are pushing back here with everything we’ve got.”

Goddard Closures

Asked about Goddard building closures, Van Hollen said, “We’re all going to monitor the building closures very carefully to ensure there’s no loss of actual capacity.” He said some buildings were empty and some consolidation needed to happen but “it’s been haphazard, it’s not been done in consultation with the employees, it’s not been done in a smart way so we’re going to continue to monitor that effort.” He said the delegation is focused on projects at Goddard and hoping to even accelerate funding for some. Rep. Steny Hoyer (D) added that the plan being executed “predated this administration,” referring to the 2019 20-year Master Plan Goddard leaders have said they are following. It’s a claim disputed by employees who spoke with the News Review (see the September 23 issue.) A key objection is that the Master Plan called for modernization and construction

Unionization for Public Works First Reading Approved by Council

by Larry Beyna

At its December 8 regular meeting, the Greenbelt City Council covered three major items: a city charter amendment allowing Public Works staff to unionize, review and approval of a major traffic calming study and a future worksession to address residents’ concerns with cellphone service in parts of Greenbelt. This story covers unionization, with cell service and traffic calming reported separately (see the top of this page). Nine additional actions are recorded at the end of this report.

Charter Amendment

To allow Public Works employees to establish a union, an amendment to the city charter is required. Council was unanimous that this first step toward ratification of a charter amendment establishing collective bargaining rights and permitting the associated unionization should be taken, but had to decide between two options: 1) collective bargaining rights for only “eligible Public Works employees” or 2) those rights for a broader class, i.e. “certain eligible non-classified, non-managerial and non-professional city employees.”

Support for Unionization

During the meeting, the general sentiment from several residents and union organizers who spoke was in favor of granting

Letters to the Editor

A Week of Gratitude

Last week reminded us why community truly matters.

On behalf of The SPACE, I am overflowing with gratitude after our Souper Friendsgiving event, where nearly 100 people came together to celebrate friendship, togetherness, good food and shared humanity. From the laughter, to the meals, to the conversations, this was community at its best. A heartfelt thank you to our incredible partners and sponsors: Playtime Project, From Scratch Fundraising and Greenbelt CORES, as well as every volunteer, donor and neighbor who gave their time, gifts, energy and resources. Because of people like you, this work continues to grow and thrive.

We're also proud to share that The SPACE Free Art For All is now an official American Job Center partner. We celebrated our grand opening on Thursday, December 4, with the presence of our senator, delegates and city council as we continue to connect the dots between creativity, skills-based training, workforce development and opportunity for our community members in need. We're excited for what's ahead as we look toward 2026 and the programs coming right here to Greenbelt.

On top of all that, it was a joy to be part of Sparkle Mart and Winter Wonderland as we create together, share and show off what we do every day. Thank you to everyone who stopped by to make art with us, support the organization and share kind words about what The SPACE means to you. Those reminders matter more than you know.

We also want to celebrate the Pathways School pop-up shop, where local high school students sold items they created through our Artrepreneurship program. They took ideas from imagination

Hamnet

From Academy Award-winning writer/director Chloé Zhao, the film tells the powerful story of love and loss that inspired the creation of Shakespeare's timeless masterpiece, Hamlet. The critics' consensus, according to Rotten Tomatoes: "Breaking hearts and mending them in one fell swoop, Hamnet speculates on the inspiration behind Shakespeare's masterpiece with palpable emotional force thanks to Jessie Buckley and Paul Mescal's astonishing performances."

Marty Supreme

Marty Mauser (Timothée Chalamet), a young man with a dream no one respects, goes to hell and back in pursuit of greatness.

Elf

Buddy (Will Ferrell) was accidentally transported to the North Pole as a toddler and raised to adulthood among Santa's elves. Unable to shake the feeling that he doesn't fit in, the adult Buddy travels to New York, in full elf uniform, in search of his real father. As it happens, this is Walter Hobbs (James Caan), a cynical businessman. After a DNA test proves this, Walter reluctantly attempts to start a relationship with the childlike Buddy with increasingly chaotic results.

When Harry Met Sally ...

In 1977, college graduates Harry Burns (Billy Crystal) and Sally Albright (Meg Ryan) share a contentious car ride from Chicago to New York, during which they argue about whether men and women can ever truly be strictly platonic friends. Ten years later, Harry and Sally meet again at a bookstore, and in the company of their respective best friends, Jess (Bruno Kirby) and Marie (Carrie Fisher), attempt to stay friends without sex becoming an issue between them.

Sleepless in Seattle

After the death of his wife, Sam Baldwin (Tom Hanks) moves to Seattle with his son, Jonah (Ross Malinger). When Jonah calls in to a talk-radio program to find a new wife for his father, Sam grudgingly gets on the line to discuss his feelings. Annie Reed (Meg Ryan), a reporter in Baltimore, hears Sam speak and falls for him, even though she is engaged. Unsure where it will lead, she writes Sam a letter asking him to meet her at the Empire State Building on Valentine's Day.

Misery

After a serious car crash, novelist Paul Sheldon (James Caan) is rescued by former nurse Annie Wilkes (Kathy Bates), who claims to be his biggest fan. Annie brings him to her remote cabin to recover, where her obsession takes a dark turn when she discovers Sheldon is killing off her favorite character from his novels. As Sheldon devises plans for escape, Annie grows increasingly controlling, even violent, as she forces the author to shape his writing to suit her twisted fantasies.

A Few Good Men

Lt. Daniel Kaffee (Tom Cruise) is a military lawyer defending two U.S. Marines charged with killing a fellow Marine at the Guantanamo Bay Naval Base in Cuba. Although Kaffee is known for seeking plea bargains, a fellow lawyer, Lt. Cdr. JoAnne Galloway (Demi Moore), convinces him that the accused marines were most likely carrying out an order from a commanding officer. Kaffee takes a risk by calling Col. Nathan R. Jessep (Jack Nicholson) to the stand in an effort to uncover the conspiracy.

Mishkan Torah Welcomes New Cantor Yael Fischman

by Derson Gilson

On Sunday, December 14, Mishkan Torah hosted a family-friendly Hanukkah celebration for kids and adults of all ages, with a Hanukkah storytime, a candle-lighting ceremony, music, latkes, doughnuts and more. The special occasion was also the installation of new Cantor Yael Fischman.

Fischman has been involved with the congregation for many years, directing the education programs and working closely with families. This Hanukkah celebration was her first time serving as the congregation's cantor for a holiday service.

At Mishkan Torah the cantor is more than a musical leader. Fischman steps into the role long held by Phil Greenfield, who served in that position for 44 years. Greenfield described the cantor as "the person who brings knowledge from the past into the future and keeps it updated," blending traditional chants with modern songs to connect people with their heritage while moving forward.

The cantor is also a teacher and guide, Greenfield explained. "The cantor teaches all members of the congregation," he said, making it possible for anyone with the proper skills to lead services. Cantors work closely with rabbis to guide the congregation, support the community and direct religious school programs that nurture the next generation of Jewish adults.

For Greenfield, the most meaningful part of being a cantor has been the personal connections. "Even after doing it for so many years, there are still really special prayers that get the tingle," he said. Watching children grow into young adults and celebrating milestones like bar and bat mitzvahs has created lasting memories. Working with children inspired intergenerational services that allow families to participate together in meaningful ways.

Fischman plans to continue and expand these programs, focusing on interfaith understanding and connection. "I want them to be happy and proud of the fact that they have Jewish heritage, but also happy and proud of whatever other heritage they have," she said.

The cantor's role symbolizes continuity, education and spiritual guidance. Through song and teaching, the cantor bridges tradition and the evolving life of the congregation.

Derson Gilson is a University of Maryland student at the Philip Merrill College of Journalism writing for the Greenbelt News Review.

Congratulations to Mishkan Torah's new cantor, Yael Fischman. She was installed at a celebration on December 14.

The News Review wishes a very happy Hanukkah, a very merry Christmas and happy winter solstice to our readers.

In Memoriam To My Dad Haven McKinney on His Birthday

My dad died peacefully this past March. He would have been 83 on December 17. I want to share a few things about him.

My dad and mom had both been divorced. He moved to Greenbelt where at 29 years old he met and married my mom, who had five kids to his one. He legally adopted all five of us. Think about a 29-year-old doing that.

His own dad had taught him carpentry and he immediately filled our house with his works. He built an outdoor picnic table and benches long enough for our family of eight. This was in the days where there was no Home Depot or Lowe's so he went to a lumber yard, a hardware store and a paint store. He then happily grilled dinners for us in the summertime.

He built us an indoor table as well because, again, family of eight. He built a buffet cabinet that went from one end of our dining room to the other. He built us bunkbeds. He built a vanity with mirrors for the girls and a three-way mirror for mom. I could go on and on.

In his life my dad had some really cool jobs too. Actually too many to mention, but he was a cameraman and a sound tech. He got to work with Pat Benatar, who he said was so kind and friendly. He worked on the Walter Cronkite Chronicles and got to go out on his boat with him. Walter actually had the crew to his house for dinner! When American Idol was in the area my dad did the sound for the show. He worked on the movie Fist as a sound person as well as countless documentaries and some commercials. He got an Addy award for one.

One of his favorite works ever was doing the video for the Slickee Boys' When I Go to the Beach. He made it a fun comical video. It was 1983 and my dad had experience with special effects so he put the Slickee Boys on a surfboard in a quick part at the end. It's funny and it was new. The video placed second in MTV's Basement Tapes. The video was written up in Rolling Stone magazine where they called my dad

"Video Wiz Haven McKinney." We kept that framed on the wall for decades.

I am forever grateful that my dad and my sister came into our lives and became part of our family. Happy Birthday in Heaven, Dad.

Love from Ginger Brown

Haven McKinney, of Greenbelt, died peacefully at his home on March 18, 2025. See his obituary in the April 10 issue.

A Neutral Color, Please

As some readers or residents may know, the WSSC Standpipe Rehabilitation Project (AKA city water tower) has commenced at the corner of Lastner Lane and Ridge Road, and the property that once stood at 241 Lastner Lane has been demolished. The city council recently released a community survey soliciting feedback on the future color scheme of the standpipe, and we are writing as Greenbelt residents who live closest to the tower and see it daily.

The water tower exists as essential infrastructure, and shouldn't be treated as a billboard or landmark competing for attention. Its current neutral light sky blue tone serves a deliberate and responsible purpose: it blends naturally into the surrounding landscape and sky, minimizing visual intrusion for those who live with it every day. For residents whose homes and backyards face the tower, this restraint matters, not as a matter of taste, but of daily quality of life. The trees and house that once covered the surrounding area are now gone, making the standpipe even more visible from our yards, windows and street.

Before a final decision is made at the next council meeting on January 12, we ask that our community consider the most neutral color scheme when casting their vote, leaving the standpipe as the silent giant that's existed for 90 years, innocuous in nature.

SAYT and Capital One
If you want to buy a Max Trash sticker online, the WasteZero website only accepts Visa and MasterCard. By agreement with the company that processes payments for them, QualPay, does not accept Discover. When my Capital One Mastercard got close to its expiration date, they sent me a Discover card with the same PIN.

Here we're dealing with a requirement for city services and I tried to think of how one can handle it.

1) Show up in person at the Municipal Building Finance Window, Monday through Friday, 8 a.m. to 4:30 p.m. Pay by check. Those with jobs that require you to report to the worksite will have to take time off to do this. Do banks charge fees for check processing? If there's a way to mail checks, it's not listed at the SAYT page for Greenbelt.

2) Start an account at a bank that uses Visa or Mastercard, and remember to put more money in once or twice a year. Banks may have minimum deposits for you to get a card. Consumer reporters warn about having multiple credit cards and the risk of increased debt, which affects your credit score, so you would have to manage that risk.

3) Start an account at a bank that uses Visa or Mastercard and transfer everything to it from Capital One. Closing out your Capital

One account means you have to contact anybody sending you things by direct deposit and send them to the new account, as well as logging in on every site where you have automatic payments to change those. If you have an outstanding loan with Capital One, I don't know what to tell you.

Those are the ideas I came up with in 24 hours. Some of you may have other or better ideas.

City Website Inaccuracy

I am writing to call attention to an inaccuracy on the City of Greenbelt's official website regarding Buddy Attick Park. The site currently states that parking permits are required to use the park's lot. In reality, no such permits have been required for many years according to the Department of Planning and Community Development, and visitors continue to park freely without issue. This outdated information may discourage new residents and visitors from enjoying one of Greenbelt's most popular community spaces. I urge the city to update the website to reflect current practice so that the public receives clear and accurate guidance.

STATEMENT FROM GREENBELT CITY COUNCIL ON NEW WAVE OF HATEFUL FLYERS
December 17, 2025

Dear Greenbelt Residents,

The Greenbelt City Council is aware of new reports of hateful and intimidating stickers posted in several locations around the city. This activity follows similar incidents involving flyers earlier this fall.

We condemn these actions in the strongest possible terms. Materials that promote fear, intimidation, or division—particularly those targeting immigrant and Latino members of our community—are unacceptable and do not reflect Greenbelt's values.

These flyers are intended to create division and dehumanize our neighbors. They do not represent the values that define Greenbelt. Our city has a longstanding commitment to fairness, compassion, and inclusion. Every Greenbelt resident - regardless of immigration status, national origin, race, ethnicity, disability, gender identity, religious belief, sexual orientation, or family status - is a valued and respected member of our community.

Greenbelt remains committed to being a welcoming city. We stand firmly against discrimination, harassment, and attempts to make any member of our community feel unsafe or unwelcome. Acts that target or threaten individuals based on who they are, have no place here.

To all who call Greenbelt home: You belong. You matter. We will continue working together to ensure that Greenbelt remains a community where all residents feel safe and are treated with dignity and respect.

Sincerely,
The Greenbelt City Council

Greenbelt Nonprofit Favor’s Table Offers Food, Clothes, Skills, Hope

by Derson Gilson

On Saturday, December 13, Favor’s Table held a financial literacy class in the tall building beside McDonald’s on Greenbelt Road. The class was for adults who had never attended it before and also offered participants bags of food, clothes, bras and shoes. The Greenbelt-based nonprofit is working to combat food insecurity while also helping residents build long-term stability through education and skill building.

Favor’s Table was founded in 2020 by Kehinde Chol, who goes by K, in response to growing need during the Covid-19 pandemic. Originally from Nigeria, Chol said the organization began as a small outreach effort delivering food to families, seniors and individuals facing hardship.

“There was a lot of food insecurity during the pandemic,” Chol said. “So, it started as an outreach where I deliver food to families and seniors and people that are less privileged.”

Since then, Favor’s Table has expanded into a multiservice program offering food distribution, clothing, household items, diapers and hygiene kits. The organization also provides ESL classes, computer literacy training, job readiness assistance and weekend financial literacy workshops

Funding remains one of the organization’s biggest challenges. Chol said some limited funding was received from the City of Greenbelt earlier this year, but much of the operation is supported through personal funds and in-kind donations such as food and clothing.

The program serves a diverse population operating at various distribution sites throughout the DMV area. According to Chol, most participants are Hispanic, along with Black Americans, white residents and refugees from Afghanistan. Families travel from across the DMV region to access services.

“It’s not just about food,” Chol said. “I need to also empower people. I need to teach them how to fish.”

One participant, Islam, said the organization has made a significant difference for his family. He highlighted the availability of free food and clothing for children as especially helpful.

“They help people,” Islam said. “They give food and clothes for kids.”

Chol said the goal of Favor’s Table is to address hunger while also equipping people with skills that reduce long-term dependence on government benefits or food pantries.

“We’re fighting hunger in every zip code,” she said. “People see us as a last source of hope.”

Community members interested in supporting Favor’s Table through volunteering or donations can call Chol at 202-468-2049 or visit favorstable.com for more information.

U.S. Bill of Rights Day Was Observed on December 15

by Joan Estenson

At a time when our rights as laid out in the Bill of Rights seem to be disappearing, it feels especially important to celebrate Bill of Rights Day, observed on December 15 in the United States.

President Franklin D. Roosevelt issued a proclamation that dedicated December 15, 1941, as Bill of Rights Day in honor of the Constitution and to celebrate the 150th anniversary of ratification of the first 10 amendments. The first Bill of Rights Day took place just eight days after the attack on Pearl Harbor and America’s entry into World War II.

President Harry Truman issued another proclamation five years later after Congress requested to observe Bill of Rights Day again, a year after the end of World War II. In 1952, President Truman proclaimed the Bill of Rights Day to be observed every year.

The Bill of Rights codifies the theory of natural rights, which holds that humans are granted certain freedoms and liberties by God and that the state should not have the power to infringe upon those rights. It incorporates the basic rights every human being should have, rights that should be inherent to all human beings, regardless of race, sex, nationality, ethnicity, language, religion or any other status, and includes freedom of speech, freedom of religion, freedom of the press, the right to protest and equal protection under the law.

The Bill of Rights is displayed in the Rotunda of the National Archives Building in Washington, D.C., as a reminder to all Americans of their constitutional freedoms.

Reducing Food Waste Is Holiday Gift to the Community, Planet

by Tom Taylor

With the holidays upon us and plans underway for gatherings and meals with family and friends, Greenbelters have an opportunity to offer a gift to the community and the planet by reducing food waste in their holiday meals.

ReFed, a nonprofit organization dedicated to food waste reduction, estimated that on Thanksgiving Day 2024 alone, 320 million pounds of food would be wasted. This is equal to $550 million worth of uneaten food discarded and to 267 million meals that could have been served to people in need.

ReFed also reports wasted food has significant negative impact on the environment and natural resources. Analysis of 2023 data revealed that discarded food created 230 metric tons of greenhouse gases, the equivalent of 54 million cars and 18 percent of registered vehicles in the United States.

Production of this surplus food also meant wasted use of 16.2 trillion gallons of water (more than the total freshwater use of California and Idaho combined) and 140 million acres of U.S. cropland (equivalent to the combined size of California and New York State).

Food waste is the largest single component of everyday trash sent to the landfill. Nationwide, food thrown away is 24 percent of landfill municipal solid waste, according to a 2023 joint report by the EPA, USDA and FDA. Discarded food waste comprises 22 percent of residential waste in the Prince George's County landfill, according to the most recent waste composition study (2022).

Actions are available for Greenbelt residents to tackle this food waste problem. ReFed recommends the following steps to reduce food waste:

- Maximize use of leftovers by sending guests home with surplus food, planning ahead to have ingredients on hand for your favorite leftover meal and clearing freezer space for food that still remains after a couple of days.
- Adopt meal preparation changes to save money and reduce waste. Such changes include using leftovers more in general, being more aware of using fresh foods before they go bad, buying more frozen foods, using only what is needed for a meal and reducing nonessential items.
- Donate surplus nonperishable food to food banks, pantries and distribution programs. While such programs may not accept leftovers, one can donate nonperishable surplus items such as canned and packaged goods and shelf-stable ingredients.

- Keep wasted food out of the landfill by composting. If there is still surplus food after the above steps, the City of Greenbelt offers three composting options to avoid throwing food into the landfill:
 - Curbside food scrap pickup for $10 a month through Compost Crew, the city's contractor for the program. Register at compostcrew.com/greenbelt.
 - Free food scrap drop-off at the Recycling Center at Buddy Attick Park. Learn details at <https://tinyurl.com/3n7j45uu>.
 - Backyard composting bins are available at a discount through Public Works. Call 301-474-8004.

For holiday giving, Greenbelters may consider a gift certificate for the curbside pickup program for Greenbelt friends or neighbors. Gift certificates may be purchased at compostcrew.com/greenbelt.

The holidays offer all these ways to provide a gift of food waste reduction to the city, to the planet and to individual neighbors and friends.

City of Greenbelt Trash Collection Changes in January 2026

by John Lippert

Residents receiving city trash collection must decide to purchase either city-approved bags or a Max Trash sticker. What other changes are happening?

Skipping Collection

What if residents don't want their trash collected that week?

Single-family home residents will continue to take trash cans to curbs for pickup, and not take it to the curb when they don't want it picked up.

Greenbelt Homes, Inc. (GHI) residents who do not wish to have their trash picked up should keep their trash can in their utility closet/enclosure. Trash collectors will not go into trash enclosures or utility closets to access trash unless there is an official disability exception. This change in collection procedure allows residents to decide whether to set out trash each week, and will clearly indicate when trash is ready for pickup. This change also reflects trash collectors' long-standing request for more efficient and time-saving collection.

GHI residents wishing to have trash collected should remove trash and recycling containers from trash enclosures or utility closets on the day of collection or the night before. Containers should be placed in a visible and accessible location on their unit's service side with recycling bins. There is no need to place containers far from enclosures. The important point is that containers are outside the enclosure and are easily accessible and visible to collectors. After collection, residents should return containers to trash closets or enclosures. To make it easier to move receptacles, residents may consider purchasing a smaller, easier to maneuver trash bin.

A letter from Public Works to GHI residents explaining the collection procedure change, and the complete GHI rule (6.2.1.1) regarding waste collection, can be found under "GHI Change of Rules" on the SAYT Program website (greenbeltnmd.gov/SAYT).

Call for Bulk Trash and Yard Waste

Single-family households must call Public Works to schedule bulk trash and yard waste pickups, which GHI households already do.

Trash Cans

Storage and handling of trash by Greenbelt homeowners receiving city trash service is controlled by city ordinance. GHI has more stringent requirements than the city, for example, limiting trash containers to 32 gallons.

City ordinances and GHI regulations require trash be placed into trash cans with tight-fitting lids and handles for lifting. This was not previously enforced and some GHI residents place trash bags directly in utility closets/enclosures. Beginning in 2026, households must use trash cans or will be cited.

Enforcement

Starting in January, if residents put out commercial trash bags without a Max Trash sticker on their trashcan, trash collectors will leave a warning explaining what the resident needs to do. If the resident does not do it correctly the second week, trash collectors will leave another notice and will not pick up the trash. After that, fines will be issued for noncompliance.

John Lippert is chair, Greenbelt Advisory Committee on Environmental Sustainability (Green ACES)/Green Team.

Jim Sterling retired, succeeded by Willis Shafer in June 2022, who left the position in December 2023. Assistant Director Brian Kim served as Interim Director until being appointed Director in early 2025.

Use of SAYT Revenue

The new $240 base fee and SAYT bag and Max Trash sticker revenue will contribute to all waste collection costs, including personnel, county tipping and recycling fees, yard waste and bulk trash service, and truck operations, said Salmerón.

The SAYT bag and Max Trash sticker prices represent estimated trash tipping fees for the bag or Max Trash volume, according to messaging from city staff and council's Greenbelt Advisory Committee on Environmental Sustainability (Green ACES). However, Salmerón told the News Review that does not mean bag and sticker revenue will fund only tipping fees. Rather that revenue will contribute to all components of the waste collection budget and reducing its deficit, because generating more trash increases not only tipping fees, but also personnel effort and costs for truck maintenance and fuel. The same personnel and equipment that collect household trash also collect household recycling and yard waste, collect trash and recycling from city parks, playgrounds and buildings, and from city events throughout the year. The revenue will also fund collecting bulk trash and appliances.

How Greenbelt Costs Compare

Several 2025 council worksessions and the August 7 SAYT town hall compared solid waste collection fees between Greenbelt and other jurisdictions: $280 for Greenbelt's previous annual fee, $298 in Anne Arundel County, $356.32 in Prince George's Beltway Plaza Hardware will carry only medium bags while assessing demand.

County, $503 in Rockville and $549.59 in Montgomery County. Greenbelt's SAYT pilot will set a $240 base fee for all city-served households, plus each household's costs for SAYT bags and/or Max Trash stickers. Salmerón told the News Review that many Greenbelt household SAYT costs, or even the approximately $400 flat fee considered for every household before choosing the SAYT pilot, would be lower than some nearby jurisdictions that provide less service than Greenbelt.

Fiscal Responsibility

Salmerón says it's difficult to predict how well the pilot will address the deficit, given variables including how many households will select SAYT bags or Max Trash stickers, and how much waste households will avoid or divert to recycling, composting or other options. He emphasized that 2026 is a pilot. Revenue and resident feedback will be evaluated as the city determines whether to continue the program, or raise fees for all households regardless of their trash volume.

Salmerón said many homeowners appreciate the quality and low cost of Greenbelt waste collection services. He said Green ACES saw the deficit as an opportunity to explore better waste management services and allocate its cost proportionally to users. As city manager, Salmerón said he must address a service whose cost is unsustainable by current rates and is being subsidized by the general fund and city taxpayers who don't receive the service. His role and responsibility is to deliver the services residents and council want while ensuring user fees reflect the true cost of those services, he said.

collective bargaining rights for all city employees, but some stated that if that is not possible now, then at least for Public Works employees. Additional input from residents urged council to proceed without delay; one resident stated that over the past few months he has interviewed hundreds of voters and unionization is “wildly popular” in Greenbelt.

Introducing the agenda issue, Councilmember Jenni Pompei said, “My preference would be for the all-employees charter amendment. I think it’s easier for us now to open up bargaining to anyone who’s interested. That way we don’t have to come back and continually amend the charter anytime any members of our city staff would like to organize.”

Greenbelt Far Behind

Also supporting the all-employees amendment, Councilmember Frankie Fritz invoked Article 23 of the 1948 Universal Declaration of Human Rights, which states that “Everyone ... has the right to form and join trade unions.” He argued that Greenbelt is “far behind” and has been very slow in granting this basic human right for its employees, other than the sworn officers of the Police Department.

Mayor Emmett Jordan and a few other councilmembers counselled moving more slowly on an all-employees charter amendment because of the need for more clarity in the language currently before them, including defining the types of eligible employees, addressing overlap among types of employees in city departments and so on. Councilmember Kristen Weaver suggested that council strike a “balance between being appropriately speedy (as in the case of the Public Works recent request for bargaining rights), but also not moving too quickly if there is some consideration that might warrant a worksession on the framework for the process of unionization for the rest of the city.”

Resolution Adoption

Eventually, Councilmember Silke Pope moved to adopt the resolution to introduce the first reading of the charter amendment and Weaver seconded the motion. Only Fritz voted against it because he felt council should be moving quickly toward an all-employees charter amendment, not just for Public Works.

Other Actions

Mayor Emmett Jordan issued a proclamation declaring December 10 as Human Rights Day in Greenbelt and expressed the city’s continued commitment to dignity, equity and the protection of human rights for all residents. Council took the following actions: 1) approved the Greenbelt Park and Recreation Advisory Board’s recommendation to initiate planning for a dog park at Northway Fields; 2) approved a letter to Prince George’s County Public Schools (PGCPS) promoting collaboration between GPCPS and Greenbelt on community engagement efforts; 3) authorized the city manager to contract with Charles P. Johnson & Associates, Inc. to provide survey services for the city; 4) re-appointed James Drake to serve another term on Greenbelt’s Advisory Planning Board; 5) introduced and gave a first reading of a proposed ordinance to amend Greenbelt’s Code to authorize regulation of plug-in parking within the city’s corporate limits; 6) gave a second reading of, and adopted, a resolution authorizing the city manager to implement Electric Vehicle (EV) charging fees and operating procedures for EV charging stations at the Municipal Building; 7) voted to pay Greenbelt’s annual dues to the Prince George’s County Municipal Association but also to send a letter to the association outlining the concerns of several councilmembers regarding how the association manages its funds; 8) decided councilmember appointments for serving in 2026 on the boards and committees of the Metropolitan Washington Council of Governments; and 9) authorized the city manager to execute two contracts, one with Innovative Pyrotechnic Concepts, LLC, for the 2026 Independence Day Fireworks Display and the other for the renewal of the natural gas supply for city facilities.

At the end of the televised meeting, council moved into a closed session.

Cathie Meetre assisted with this report.

Councilmember Jenni Pompei said, “It’s important that residents hear from council that we recognize that this is a problem and we’re dedicated to moving forward in a way that solves the problem ... We’re going to empower the city manager to do everything he can to see how we can bring more providers and better service.”

Councilmember Kristin Weaver added that it’s also an issue of cellphone towers and wondered if perhaps shorter/smaller towers and other new tech devices could be considered. In one example of alternatives to tall cellphone towers, City Manager Josué Salmerón described New Carrollton’s move to allow small cellphone towers to be attached to lighting poles, which provide not only good coverage but also revenue for the city. Jordan ended the discussion by expressing his expectation of a “lively discussion” among residents and council at the worksession on January 5.

Traffic Calming Study

Assistant Director of Planning Jaime Fearer summarized for council and residents a recently completed 500-page report on speeding conditions and proposed measures to address them on five roadways in Greenbelt’s center city area. The roadways include Ridge Road from Lastner Lane to Westway, Lakeside Drive from Lakecrest Drive to Crescent Road, Lastner Lane from Ridge Road to Crescent Road, Greenhill Road from Crescent Road to Research Road and Hillside Road from Crescent Road to Research Road.

The study team included Fearer, Director of Planning and Community Development Terri Hruby and Greenman-Pederson, Inc., design consultants. The study began in the fall of 2023 with very detailed data collection on vehicle speeds and volumes on the five subject roadways. The team presented a draft report to Greenbelt’s Advisory Planning Board (APB) on October 16, 2024, held a community/public meeting on October 29, 2024, and presented its findings and recommendations at a council worksession on November 20, 2024. Based on comments received, the team revised its report and submitted its final report to the APB this October and to council in this meeting. A graphic adapted from the report shows some of the results (see page 1).

Calming Alternatives

The study provides an overview of design strategies and traffic calming treatments that were and were not considered and why. Design strategies among the team’s final recommendations include reductions in lane widths, rectangular rapid flashing beacons (i.e., pedestrian-activated devices at crosswalks that use bright, rapid-flashing yellow LED lights to alert drivers that someone is crossing), continental crosswalks (i.e., longitudinal stripes designating where to walk across the road), green pavement for bike lanes at intersections, corner radii and curb extensions, departure-side bus stops, midblock crosswalks, hardened centerlines and medians, pinch-points and chokers (i.e., road sections that narrow, creating bottlenecks that force traffic to slow down or stop), raised crosswalks and shared lane markings or sharrows (i.e., pavement markings indicating a travel lane shared by motorists and bicyclists).

The study suggests short- and long-term countermeasures at 22 locations to reduce vehicular speeds and potential collisions, and additional improvements to enhance pedestrian and cyclist “connectivity” (i.e., seamless, safe and accessible networks of sidewalks, paths and bike lanes that link people to destinations). Each of the 22 locations is assigned low, medium or high priority based on vehicle volumes, speeds and collisions. The short- and long-term recommendations and accompanying cost estimates are conceptual, and implementation will require additional engineering consultation.

In one of the questions from councilmembers and residents, resident Michael Hartman asked if the study has considered the various challenges facing persons with disabilities. In response, Fearer said that several ADA accessibility adjustments have been considered – for example, wider raised crosswalks that do not require a step up from the sidewalk – and more will be considered during implementation. After she concluded her presentation, council voted unanimously for a January 5 worksession.

of new buildings in addition to closings and demolitions, and was to occur over years, not months.

Loss of Human Capital

Americans are losing scientific opportunity and expertise as people leave the U.S. to work for competitors elsewhere in the world, said Van Hollen and others. "If you look at Goddard, they were one of the victims early on of Elon Musk coming in with a chainsaw. And they were offered these forks in the road and early buyouts and the result was about a 35 percent cut in the Goddard workforce," said Van Hollen. The Goddard workforce of about 10,000 civil servants and contractors has fallen to around 6,600, he said. Sen. Angela Alsobrooks (D) called the cuts "indiscriminate" and a "smash and grab," alleging "they don't even understand what they have damaged and destroyed."

Alsobrooks stressed that the individuals being cut had 20 years' experience on average, and 45 percent of those lost were engineers, so while work is done to defend and restore funding, the expertise is not easy to replace. Hoyer said the administration had attempted to cut trillions of dollars from the budget and perhaps a million federal employees, but did so "not with a scalpel, not with knowledge of the consequences of their actions but with a chainsaw and a focus only on numbers."

Rep. Glenn Ivey (D) noted NASA's loss of experienced workers was accompanied by a hiring freeze preventing recruitment of young talent. "We don't need another Sputnik moment," said Ivey. "We need to make sure that we do everything we can to hang on to that human capital, that human talent, the genius that has made NASA the envy of the world. These are patriotic people doing great work. We need to make sure we give them the opportunity to continue to do that because the U.S. needs it, and frankly, the world needs it," he said.

Fighting Funding Cuts

Overall, the Trump administration proposed cutting NASA's budget by 24 percent, to the lowest level since 1961. However, most of those cuts are in the Science Mission Directorate where the president's budget proposes a 47 percent cut.

Van Hollen said the Maryland delegation is fighting Trump's proposed cut to the Space Science budget. He reported that the Senate's Commerce, Justice, Science and Related Agencies (CJS) Subcommittee "rejected entirely those cuts," saying they instead increased their science investment to support Goddard.

Hoyer noted "the Senate, under Republican control, did not accept those cuts," and he further celebrated a House proposal to reduce the 47 percent cut to 16 percent. He warned against continued loss of talent to Europe and Asia. "Let us hope that the American people will say to Congress, 'Do not disinvest in science; that is the future,'" said Hoyer.

Van Hollen outlined Goddard's importance to the state and the region. He noted the Eastern Shore's Wallops Space Flight Facility is part of Goddard and that Johns Hopkins' Applied Physics Laboratory (APL) works heavily with Goddard, so its future is also affected by this fight. He noted Goddard's Nancy Roman Space Telescope is ahead of schedule and under budget. "The Trump administration was going to cancel that mission," claimed Van Hollen. "That's back on track," he said, "and we're working to get other major missions on track and in some cases accelerated."

Rep. Kweisi Mfume (D) said the Maryland delegation is issuing "a clarion call to our colleagues in the House and Senate to understand that the U.S.A. is on the threshold of losing its dominance in the area of space science and technology." "The work that goes on at [Goddard] and [APL] is work that cannot be produced overnight, and if we lose that dominance we will find ourselves playing catch-up to the rest of the world," said Mfume.

Rep. April Delaney (D), who sits on the House Science Space Technology Committee, warned the "cuts" are going to cost more in terms of impact to the economy and nation.

Praise for Goddard

Hoyer called Goddard an extraordinary asset to Maryland, the U.S. and the global community which has relied on Goddard and NASA "for all sorts of different reasons, including national security, including agricultural production, including saving ourselves from extraordinary weather events ..."

Jared Isaacman's (Re)Nomination

The nomination of Jared Isaacman as NASA Administrator proceeded this month with committee approval and a second

Senate hearing, with confirmation expected soon. Isaacman was first nominated in December 2024 but, after committee approval in April, Trump withdrew his nomination, due to what he called a "thorough review of prior associations." Van Hollen said Monday that Isaacman has a "positive vision of the space program, including a recognition that you can't have a space program without fundamental research, the space science, so we're on the same page." Van Hollen did acknowledge concern over a leaked document authored by Isaacman that "talked about poaching some of the assets from places like Goddard and transferring them to other sites in the country." Van Hollen speculated that it was leaked by someone who didn't want Isaacman confirmed and said Isaacman told him he is not interested in pursuing the ideas in that document. "My view is 'show me,'" said Van Hollen. However, "he at least said that he understood the Goddard mission and how important it is," Van Hollen added.

Fourth Annual Krampusnacht: Scarols, Dancing, Mischief

by Derson Gilson

On Saturday, December 13, Roosevelt Center came alive with music, costumes and holiday cheer during Greenbelt's fourth annual Krampusnacht, hosted by the community street band Greenbelt Honk! Situation. Roughly 100 attendees danced, watched performances and posed with costumed winter creatures on a chilly December evening.

Inspired by the Alpine folklore figure Krampus, the event blended playful mischief with holiday tradition. Greenbelt Honk! Situation performed lively holiday "scarols," weaving through the crowd rather than remaining on a stage, while the Witches of the Green Shire added theatrical flair with a dance performance. Attendees were encouraged to dress in costume and bring new, unwrapped toys for Toys for Tots.

Honk! founder Dan Gillotte said the goal was simple: "This would just be quiet and no one would be here. Instead, we had a party."

The band's open, inclusive approach also gives musicians

a chance to try something new. William, a recent member who typically plays classical oboe, said the experience has been both fun and educational. "It's a very welcoming community and [has] people of all skill levels. They're happy to help you learn. We bring the music to people, rather than having them come to us," he said.

Looking ahead, Greenbelt Honk! Situation plans more community events, including a solstice lantern parade from the Firefly Sanctuary to Roosevelt Center (approximately 0.8 miles) this Saturday, December 20.

The band continues to seek new members and audiences, performing locally and at festivals throughout the region. For more information on future performances or joining the band, visit greenbelthonk.org or follow the Greenbelt Honk! Situation on Facebook.

Greenbelt's New Deal Nut

On December 13 and 14 the 2025 Fall Performance Club put on a spectacular Greenbelt-themed adaptation of the Nutcracker, The New Deal Nut. The performances were directed and choreographed by Angella Foster and Kelly McLaughlin, with additional choreography by Gabriela D'Andrea and Lisa Pellittiere, and sponsored in part by the Maryland State Arts Council and the Maryland-National Capital Park and Planning Commission. The production included scenes from Greenbelt's past in the late 1930s and future in 2025. Familiar settings were the library, Co-op bakery, pool, cinema and the Greenbelt News Review. Young dancers ranging from kindergartners to high schoolers performed ballet and tap routines, solos and ensembles.
