Intern Laura Charleston Describes White House Correspondents' Dinner

by Anna Bedford-Dillow

On Saturday, April 25, Greenbelt News Review Intern Laura Charleston was among those at this year's White House Correspondents' Dinner. Charleston, who will graduate next month with a Bachelor of Arts in journalism from the Philip Merrill College of Journalism at the University of Maryland, was there to be recognized as a recipient of the Frank Cormier Scholarship. Unfortunately, she was unable to be recognized or receive her certificate because an alleged assassination attempt disrupted the annual event. Here, in an eyewitness account, she shares her experience

Ukrainian Parliamentarians Tour Greenbelt with Rebuilding in Mind

Members of Ukraine's Parliament meet with Attorney Eli Rosenbaum, retired US Department of Justice Counselor for War Crimes Accountability and US-Ukraine Foundation Project Director Oksana Sukhina over lunch at the Cedars of Lebanon. Pictured clockwise: Members of Ukraine Parliament Iryna Nykorak, Oksana Dmytriieva, Anna Purtova and Valerii Bozhyk with Oksana Sukhina, Greenbelter and Conference Interpreter and Translator Peter Voitsekhovskiy (standing), and Eli Rosenbaum.

On Thursday, April 23, five members of the Ukrainian Parliament arrived in Greenbelt to look at our town, meet with our mayor and with three other City Council members. The delegation was looking for models for redevelopment in their own cities.

They were very impressed by Greenbelt's well-designed town center, our sense of community, walkability and especially our green spaces and surrounding forest. "Soon the war will be over and some cities are completely destroyed [down] to the ground," explained Dr. Anna Purtova, deputy chair of the Parliament's Budget Committee and chair of the Subcommittee on State Investment Projects. Rebuilding after so much destruction, reinventing their system of local government, healthcare systems, education and sister city possibilities were the main discussion topics for the delegation.

Different Systems

There are huge differences between our systems of local government. A town the size of Greenbelt in Ukraine would have 31 or 32 volunteer council

Election 2026

Introducing District 4 Candidates On County Issues, Data Centers

by Stephen Lotz

The District 4 seat on the Prince George's County Council has drawn three Democratic candidates. Incumbent Tim Adams, who was appointed in February after Ingrid Watson stepped down to head the Prince George's County Economic Development Corporation, is facing challengers Juliet Agocha and Euniesha Davis.

Tim Adams

Adams is the current county council member for District 4. He previously served as the mayor of Bowie since 2019, where he was the city's first Black mayor. He stepped down from his position as mayor in February to be appointed to county council. In 2024 Adams ran for an at-large county council seat in a special election but lost to Jolene Ivey in the primary. In 2022 Adams ran for state comptroller and in 2018 he ran for Maryland State Senate District 23, losing both races in the Democratic primaries.

Adams is the founder of Systems Application & Technologies, Inc., a Maryland-based defense contractor. He has served on multiple regional boards and commissions. Adams holds a bachelor's degree from Xavier University of Louisiana and an MBA from the University of New Orleans. His answer to our first question has been edited to fit the word limit.

Council Hears from Recreation Directors at Budget Worksession

by Lesley Kash

Part 1 of 2

This report on the Recreation Department budget is divided into two parts. This week's Part 1 is on participants, budget increases and capital projects, potential wage increases, inclusion of non-Greenbelt participants and uses of the Community Center and other venues. Part 2 will include commercial and utility tax rates, Greenbelt Museum issues, the Tugwell Room and lighting for tennis and volleyball courts.

At the April 22 budget worksession, Councilmembers Amy Knesel, Danielle McKinney, Jenni Pompei, Emmett Jordan, Kristen Weaver and Frankie Fritz and City Manager Josué Salmerón met with senior recreation staff about the Fiscal Year (FY) 2027 recreation budget.

Mayor Jordan welcomed Recreation Director Greg Varda; Anne

Oudemans, assistant director of Recreation Programs; Andrew Phelan, assistant director of Recreation Operations and Facilities; and Greenbelt Museum Director Megan Searing Young.

Varda described Recreation's nine sub-budgets: Administration, Arts, Aquatic/Fitness, Museum, Therapeutic Recreation, Community Center, Recreation Centers, Recreation Programs and Special Events. Proposed expenditures are slightly under $9 million (around $2 million for Parks, managed by Public Works) with revenue of slightly over $2 million.

The FY 2027 budget includes a 2 percent cost of living increase, partial funding of Learn 2 Earn and expanded Arts offerings in Greenbelt West. Planned capital projects include ballfield improvements, Greenbelt Station and Buddy Attick Park amenities and preparations for the Springhill Lake Recreation Center (SLRC) addition.

Challenges include minimum wage increases from $15.00 to $15.30, susceptible to county increases each year, complicating planning. Also, according to the Maryland State Retirement and Pension System, after 500 hours per year workers may be entitled to Maryland or city benefits. Summer camp staff can work 300 to 400 hours and could exceed 500 by working during the school year.

Jordan observed that with more employees than other city departments, Recreation's budget

PORCH Volunteers: Thanks for Your Work

To those who help with Greenbelt PORCH and St. Hugh Food Pantry:

Because of your commitment, showing up consistently and caring deeply about your neighbors, families have reliable access to food and local pantries are better supported. What may feel like a simple act of volunteering becomes something much larger: a network of neighbors helping neighbors, rooted in generosity and trust.

Thank you for the time, energy and heart you bring to this work.

You are the reason PORCH Communities thrive, and we are grateful for all that you make possible.

Our shared commitment to community-powered hunger relief will be invaluable as Greenbelt PORCH continues to grow and deepen its impact.

Greenbelt PORCH is continuing its program to collect food in the month of May. See Community Events for the schedule.

Corrections

In last week's issue the upcoming volunteer events with Reflection Park should have noted they will take place at their property in Silver Spring, not Greenbelt. Greenbelter Natalie Bailey is leading a native plant flower garden and meadow planting event on May 2 and an invasive species removal session on May 16 at Reflection Park in Silver Spring. More information is available at reflectionpark.org/events.

Lorne

From Morgan Neville - Academy Award-winning filmmaker of 20 Feet from Stardom and Won't You Be My Neighbor? - comes Lorne, an unprecedented, behind-the-scenes glimpse at Saturday Night Live creator Lorne Michaels, the man who built the man who built the inimitable empire of comedy, shaping television and culture for generations. The documentary features exclusive footage, archival treasures and candid interviews with the show's most iconic cast members and writers including Tina Fey, Maya Rudolph, John Mulaney, Andy Samberg, Conan O'Brien, Chris Rock and many more.

Michael

This biopic is the cinematic portrayal of the life and legacy of one of the most influential artists the world has ever known. The film tells the story of Michael Jackson's life beyond the music, tracing his journey from the discovery of his extraordinary talent as the lead of the Jackson Five, to the visionary artist whose creative ambition fueled a relentless pursuit to become the biggest entertainer in the world. Highlighting both his life off-stage and some of the most iconic performances from his early solo career, the film gives audiences a front row seat to Michael Jackson as never before. This is where his story begins.

The Natural

On the way to a tryout with the Chicago Cubs, young baseball phenom Roy Hobbs (Robert Redford) is shot by the unstable Harriet Bird (Barbara Hershey). After 16 years, Hobbs returns to pro baseball as a rookie for the last-place New York Knights. Despite early arguments with his manager, Pop Fisher (Wilford Brimley), Hobbs becomes one of the best players in the league, and the Knights start winning. But this upsets the Judge (Robert Prosky), their owner, who wants Hobbs to lose games, not win.

Greenbelt Community Church Welcomes Rev. Aubra Love

by Amy Hansen

On Sunday, April 26, clergy and friends from around the country gathered to welcome and celebrate the Pastoral Installation of the Rev. Aubra Love as the new Senior Pastor of the Greenbelt Community Church.

The Pastoral Installation service was held in the sanctuary, with a reception in the church social hall. Invited guest preacher, the Rev. Amanda Hendler-Voss, First Congregational United Church of Christ, Washington, D.C., delivered a rousing sermon. The Rev. The service was a celebration of prayers, music and sacred dance, followed by a meal in the social hall. This worship service welcomed guests and support letters from St. Hugh of Grenoble, the Greenbelt Interfaith Leadership Association and the Greenbelt Baha'i Community, among others. Worship Leaders from Greenbelt Community Church were Tina Alston, Jan Derry, Mark Granfors-Hunt, Keith Johnson, Karen Jones, Rick Ransom and Dawn Revely.

Find More Peace Through Meditation

Ever wonder what it would be like to be encouraged to relax and slow down? Ever ponder how meditation might contribute to your health and well-being?

Katrina Boverman, a longtime meditation instructor with the SAGE program, and the Mishkan Torah Synagogue Sisterhood have quietly offered Summer Guided Meditation classes for the past 11 years. Although the synagogue itself is a wonderful peaceful setting welcoming to all, meditation will again be offered via Zoom to attend from the comfort of your own home.

Attendees have reported quieting of their bodies, minds and spirits, a deepening of inner stillness and a better ability to reconnect with themselves. They have described feeling more peaceful, serene, relaxed, mindful and present, both during and between the classes. Common experiences outside of the class for participants have been to have greater ease falling asleep and more patience during challenging times.

Classes via Zoom begin Monday, June 1 from 3:45 to 4:45 p.m., for seven sessions, held every other Monday through August 24. There is no charge; donations are welcome.

7-month-old Blu was recently surrendered to the shelter when his owner could no longer care for him. While Blu initially had some nerves adjusting to the shelter, he has become a sweet love bug full of puppy kisses and zoomies. When he's not smothering you in affection, Blu loves to play with tennis balls and go on walks. He does great on the leash and is non-reactive – he just wants to say hi to everyone he sees (plus, his former owner said he really loves other dogs).

Golden Age Club Members Celebrate At Annual Luncheon

by Mary Moien

Greenbelt Golden Age members celebrated their anniversary at a luncheon on April 15. It was a chance to meet and greet in a relaxed atmosphere with a lovely catered luncheon at the Holiday Inn in College Park. Pat DeShields did a wonderful job organizing the luncheon.

Greenbelt's own TGIF band provided the entertainment, featuring oldies and goodies with lots of singing along from those at the tables. The Golden Agers' own Barbara Stevens is the lead vocalist.

Greenbelt Mayor Pro Tem Kristen Weaver provided a welcome from the council, in the absence of the mayor who was on travel.

Greenbelt Concert Band Brings An Afternoon of Disney Magic

by Li'l Dan Celdran

The Greenbelt Concert Band (GCB) brought a touch of magic to the Community Center on Saturday, April 18 with its annual lively A Day with Disney & Instrument Garden event.

Beginning at 3 p.m., the free concert invited audiences of all ages to enjoy a fun-filled time of familiar Disney favorites. Attendees were encouraged to dress as their favorite Disney characters, while band members joined in the spirit with Disney-inspired headbands and accessories. The event reflects the band's ongoing mission to inspire, entertain and engage the community through accessible live music.

Thanks to a grant from the Greenbelt Community Foundation, percussion instruments and colorful dancing scarves were available for audience participation. Students from the National Honor Society at Eleanor Roosevelt High School (ERHS) assisted with setup and breakdown, distributed instruments and scarves and led children in a joyful march to The Mickey Mouse March, waving scarves, shaking shakers and tapping rhythm sticks.

The program continued with selections from The Incredibles, followed by an interactive moment led by Director and Conductor Joan Rackey, who invited children to the microphone to share their favorite dinosaurs before the band performed music from Jurassic Park. Instrument sections were showcased during Disney Around the Bandroom, followed by Up, Chitty Chitty Bang Bang, Disney at the Movies and Great Movie Marches. The concert concluded with children of all ages marching around the gym in celebration.

Families and music lovers filled the venue, enjoying the nostalgic and upbeat atmosphere. A highlight of the day was the Instrument Garden held after the performance where children had the opportunity to meet the musicians, explore and try instruments up close sparking curiosity and a love for music.

Special thanks go to the Greenbelt Community Foundation for supporting our project Engaging Young Audiences Through Music Participation, the City of Greenbelt, ERHS National Honor Society students and Greenbelt Access Television for filming the performance.

Founded in 1937, the Greenbelt Concert Band remains a cultural staple in our community, offering free concerts throughout the year, and creating welcoming and engaging musical experiences for all. Saturday's event was an example of the band's commitment to community engagement, blending performance and hands-on learning into an afternoon that was fun, interactive and memorable for all.

May Day Celebrates Bread and Roses. So Does the GLDF Cipriano Award

by Lisa Stand

May 1 marks the first of two days in the year that celebrate working people and victories for labor rights. Labor Day, of course, is the second. Both holidays center working people in our society. Both highlight our collective need to have a full, meaningful life after the work day and the work week end. Eight hours off, for people "to do as they will," as the slogan goes. May 1 was chosen as a traditional spring holiday long celebrated by agricultural laborers in much of the world. In the U.S., Labor Day is the U.S. national holiday set about halfway between Memorial Day and Thanksgiving.

The familiar phrase bread and roses also elevates working people in society as well as the economy and suggests that workers deserve the benefits of both. Bread and roses was the slogan chanted in 1912 when women in Lawrence, Mass., marched for better wages and conditions in textile factories. Bread and roses, as the poem by James Oppenheim goes, signify that the women were striking by Greenbelt artists of all ages. There is no one theme of the show, and subjects range from Greenbelt sights and scenery to favorite pets, pop figures and dramatic landscapes. This year, as last year, will also feature music played by ensembles of the Greenbelt Community Orchestra.

In addition, the show bestows the Cipriano Award, which recognizes and displays one stand-out entry that portrays people working. The award memorializes one of Greenbelt's best friends, "Pop" Cipriano, who at one time worked as a carpenter for the City of Greenbelt.

Last year, the winning entry was The Roofers, a painting that captures a moment of dignity and value in people at work in an iconic Greenbelt neighborhood. Dave Campbell, who painted The Roofers, is often seen around Old Greenbelt with his camera, looking for subjects that appeal to him. He says, "Making a project of painting a picture of people working was a challenge to try something I hadn't done before. I enjoyed the opportunity to paint an image that honors people making their honest living or otherwise using their time to serve through their work." Receiving the Cipriano was a special honor, he says, and adds that the award has boosted his confidence as an artist.

against both literal starvation and starvation of the heart. The words affirm that "art and love and beauty" must also be part of workers' efforts to improve our lives.

These days, the Greenbelt Labor Day Festival celebrates art and beauty through the annual community art show. The show displays artwork of all sizes, shapes and media, created

Her artistic process evolved to fit the compact space of her GHI "cottage," demonstrating adaptability and creativity. Her creations draw inspiration from the natural world, everyday items and the dynamic relationships between colors and textures found in her environment. Murray-Kraft's passion for trying out different materials and techniques keeps her art vibrant and ever-changing.

one of the most diverse communities in the region, and with that diversity comes a responsibility to ensure equity in how resources are distributed and accessed. We cannot ignore the fear and distrust caused by increased ICE activity. Many families are living with uncertainty and are hesitant to seek help, report crimes or access essential services. That's why I support measures like CB-5-2026 through CB-8-2026, which strengthen privacy protections, limit local involvement in federal immigration enforcement, and ensure County resources are focused on serving residents not creating fear.

The county needs smart equitable development. For too long, we have seen major economic opportunities pass us by, while residents demand good-paying jobs, transit-oriented growth and a stronger commercial tax base. For example, bringing the FBI headquarters to Greenbelt would be transformative: creating jobs, improving infrastructure, and signaling that the county is ready to compete for major federal investment.

What is your stance on data centers?

As a business leader in tech and the former Mayor of Bowie, I recognize that Maryland is at a crossroads. While data centers offer economic potential, we cannot allow innovation to become a mask for environmental neglect or social inequity. True progress isn't measured by server racks, it's measured by the health of our neighborhoods. We must ensure that minority communities are not disproportionately burdened by industrial noise and diesel emissions. These residents deserve a seat at the table. Furthermore, we must protect our families from the hidden tax of rising utility rates. It is fundamentally unfair to ask Maryland ratepayers to subsidize the massive infrastructure required by multi-billion-dollar corporations.

She previously worked at College Board and Accenture Federal Services and founded a technology company serving small businesses. What are two important issues facing Prince George's county?

"The first is the high cost of living and housing affordability. While our county is full of opportunity, wages have not always kept pace with costs.

I have partnered with a local nonprofit to support monthly in-home grocery deliveries for our seniors. During the 2025 government shutdown, we helped feed 200 District 4 residents.

We face an aging housing stock and not enough affordable, accessible housing options for families, seniors and young adults who want to remain in the communities they love. When elected, I will focus on expanding housing near transit, preserving existing homes, and ensuring that working people can afford to live in the communities they help sustain without high taxes.

The second is transportation and community safety. Residents deserve safe streets, reliable transit and shorter, more predictable commutes. Our seniors deserve to get to their appointments safely, and our children deserve clean recreational parks. Transportation is not just about infrastructure — it is about connecting people to jobs, schools, healthcare and opportunity in a safe way."

What is your stance on data centers?

"Data centers can play a role in economic growth, but they must be developed responsibly and with the residents at the center. I support development that strengthens our tax base and creates opportunity, but not at the expense of our residents' quality of life. Any project must be evaluated through the lens of real community impact and long-term sustainability.

I have heard directly from many residents, and the majority are not in support of the data center. I will take a careful, evidence-based approach to every proposal — reviewing impacts on energy costs, water usage, noise, environmental health and long-term community effects. Based on the data publicly available and the concerns residents shared with me, my current position is not to support data center development, and I will continue to stay rooted in community voices and prioritize the needs of my constituents. Any data center in the county must meet strong standards for energy use, water impact, health impact, noise mitigation and environmental responsibility, and it must provide tangible benefits back to the community."

Euniesha Davis

Davis is the director of National Programs for AARP and the former head of the Prince George's County Office of Community Relations. She has more than 15 years of experience in government and nonprofit leadership, including roles at United Way and The Links. Davis holds a bachelor's degree from Indiana University of Pennsylvania and two master's degrees from the University of Maryland Global Campus and the University of Baltimore.

What are two important issues facing Prince George's County?

"Government must balance affordability with economic development for the county to move forward. District 4 is uniquely positioned, anchored by Greenbelt and Bowie — two well-resourced municipalities with strong administrative capacity. By directing public investment through these cities, we can efficiently support community-driven economic development strategies already tailored to local needs.

At the same time, rising costs are pushing longtime residents — especially seniors — out of the communities they helped build. We must establish clear guardrails so growth does not come at the expense of affordability. That means supporting aging in place, protecting working families, and avoiding new fees that burden residents.

Smart solutions that I support include allowing accessory dwelling units, encouraging grayfield redevelopment, strengthening the Right of First Refusal program, preserving access to care for the uninsured, setting fair wage standards, and cutting unnecessary red tape that slows small business growth."

What is your stance on data centers?

"Prince George's County is already home to several data centers, but the voice of the people is clear: no new data center should be authorized without clear, tangible protections and benefits for existing communities. The concern at hand is the unchecked proliferation of so-called hyperscale data centers, which sought to be built skirting existing environmental review, potentially causing harm to existing and future communities. Demonstrably, the harm caused by such developments has been real across the country and residents are correct to express vigilance and continue to push back. Prince Georgians deserve a voice at the table. Prince Georgians don't want to live 100 feet away from a four-story tall, gray, continuously humming box. They shouldn't have to. Prince Georgians don't want to pay to energize unwarranted digital surveillance and inane Grok queries. They shouldn't have to."

PGCPS Wins National Award: Improving Indoor Air Quality

Prince George's County Public Schools (PGCPS) has earned the National Grand Prize in the 2026 Magna Awards for its work in improving indoor air quality and reducing greenhouse gas emissions. Sponsored by the National School Boards Association (NSBA), the award recognizes PGCPS as the top school system in the nation with over 20,000 students to successfully integrate environmental health into student achievement goals.

The award highlights the district's Indoor Air Quality (IAQ) management plan. "Recognizing the direct link between a healthy school environment and student well-being, the district prioritizes support of healthy IAQ through its dedicated Environmental Office," said NSBA in its announcement of the award to PGCPS. "The plan will help the district meet the goals of creating healthy indoor environments for staff and students," said NSBA. These efforts are a central pillar of the PGCPS Climate Change Action Plan, an initiative established in 2021 to transition the district toward a sustainable, low-carbon future, said PGCPS.

"Our Climate Action Plan is a moral obligation to the 'whole child.' By prioritizing air quality and sustainability, we are removing barriers to wellness and ensuring our facilities support the academic excellence our community deserves," said Interim Superintendent Dr. Shawn Joseph.

The Sustainability and Resilience Office of PGCPS has institutionalized air quality monitoring and emission-reduction strategies.

The Magna Awards have recognized exemplary school district programs for more than three decades. The 2026 program specifically focused on districts that demonstrated measurable progress in environmental health and carbon footprint reduction.

District leaders will present their award-winning strategies at the NSBA Annual Conference and Exposition, held April 10 to 12 in San Antonio, Texas. PGCPS also is featured in the April issue of the American School Board Journal (nsba.org/resources/asbj/asbj-april-2026/april-2026-magna-awards).

members, compared to our seven who receive a small stipend. Only their mayor receives any pay. Yet, despite having other jobs, they spend up to 70 percent of their time on council matters, explained Iryna Nykorak, who was elected to Parliament as a candidate for the European Solidarity Party and previously served as a member of Kyiv City Council. State budget pays teacher salaries but the city can supplement pay for teachers and doctors, they explained, as they discussed education. "It's difficult but people still wake up in the morning and have to go to school, to take children to kindergarten," said Purtova of educational planning efforts. They also have no local police force; all are under federal control. These are holdover systems from Soviet days they want to correct.

One member of Parliament told the News Review they also have a federalized press in Ukraine during this period of martial law. She expressed hope that freedom of the press could be encouraged after the war.

Another of the visiting parliamentary members remarked on our Community Center bas reliefs which struck him as communistic. We had to assure him that was just artistry, and the visitors appreciated the message of our Constitution's preamble.

The visit was hosted by the Greenbelt Refugee Aid Committee, which is active in Ukraine supporting families who have lost their homes and belongings and with assisting various orphanages.

A Sister City?

When asked could a Greenbelt-like city be built in Ukraine, Purtova, said "yes, definitely". She then went on to elaborate, as follows:

"This week, I had the honor of visiting Greenbelt, Maryland, in my capacity as a Member of the Parliament of Ukraine. During my time here, I was deeply impressed by the city's unique history and its innovative approach to community life. I saw many practical solutions that could be invaluable for the recovery of my country. This visit has inspired me to advocate for a sister-city partnership between Greenbelt and a city in the Kyiv region. My goal is to build a bridge between our nations so that our youth can see the vast opportunities the world has to offer and gain the knowledge necessary to build a modern, thriving Ukraine."

Purtova says Greenbelt is a uniquely well-positioned choice for a partnership. "Greenbelt is more than just a suburb of Washington, D.C.; it was born from a vision of resilience during the Great Depression. For a city in the Kyiv region currently undergoing reconstruction, Greenbelt's legacy as a "city for the people" focused on urban sustainability and social cooperation is an invaluable model," said Purtova. "Additionally, its proximity to the U.S. capital and the NASA Goddard Space Flight Center creates a unique gateway for academic and technological exchange." They also expressed interest in cultural exchange.

Pillars for Rebuilding

Purtova identified three key pillars that could inform rebuilding in the Ukraine. They include Sustainable Urban Planning: Implementing Greenbelt's "garden city" principles, such as separating pedestrian paths from traffic. Education and Science: Establishing STEM exchange programs for youth - "I want our students to learn from the best, and having NASA in Greenbelt's backyard provides a world-class opportunity for that," said Purtova; and Community Resilience: Adopting Greenbelt's historical practices of cooperative living and social support to help our people heal and rebuild their lives after the war. "We are looking for an intellectual partnership. Greenbelt is a living example of how smart, human-centric planning can create a safe environment even with limited resources. By bringing these ideas to the Kyiv region, we aren't just rebuilding buildings; we are building a higher quality of life," said Purtova. "My main hope is for our youth. After everything they have endured, they deserve to see the world's possibilities. This partnership is about giving them the chance to learn, to grow and to bring the best global practices back home. It is a bridge between our shared resilience and a bright, organized future."

Are Advisory Sessions Effective? Students and Teachers Comment

by Riley Galloway

An ERHS teacher leads an advisory session.

This school year, Prince George's County Public Schools (PGCPS) implemented a new system mandating bi-weekly advisory periods across all high schools. The policy aims to foster a more connected and positive community, while also educating students on important subjects. So far, sessions at Eleanor Roosevelt High School (ERHS) have covered a variety of topics, including dual (high school and college) enrollment, anti-bullying, quarter one reflections and information on hunger and homelessness.

However, initial student opinions on these sessions have been overwhelmingly negative. Many students feel these sessions are ineffective and think there could be a better use of this designated time.

For students, the main complaint is repetition and a lack of realistic value. Tahara Camara, an ERHS senior, expresses her frustration: "Advisory hasn't really benefited me that much, because it's repetitive topics that we go over in the code of conduct assemblies, and it has gotten to a point where it just starts to bore a lot of the kids." Camara suggests that this time should be used to implement topics on essential life skills. She feels it is crucial to teach students more about "how to budget, manage credit scores or explain finance vocabulary like interest, as these are topics many students leave high school not having any knowledge on." She highlights that she has seen no significant improvement within the ERHS environment since advisory began.

Senior Glory Audu bluntly calls the sessions "a waste of classroom time." She points out successful models that take place at other schools, such as Charles Herbert Flowers High School's Power Hour as a more beneficial alternative. "Power Hour provides students a period of rest, reflection and catching up on missing work." Audu argues that implementing sessions like these at ERHS that allow for "extra studying time" could reduce stress and decrease the number of students skipping class because they feel unprepared for an upcoming test or deadline. She adds that since advisory began, the ERHS community has experienced "zero change" and suggests a possible decline with an increase in fights and "rowdy" student behavior.

On the other hand, some faculty believe advisory periods have the potential to be valuable with student engagement and a more inclusive curriculum.

Kendrick Trader, a history teacher at ERHS, feels that advisory can be beneficial to students, but argues that students are not taking it seriously. He believes appreciation would increase by "having topics that they care about." Trader proposes adding more content on useful topics like college preparation, financial literacy, storytelling and entrepreneurship advice. Regarding financial literacy, he emphasizes that students could "learn about ways to grow money through investments, stocks, bonds and real estate," addressing their current lack of education on such important topics. He also highlights the ERHS community creativity, noting that "allowing students the opportunity to tell their stories in artistic ways is always a good thing."

When asked about Audu's suggestion of a Power Hour session, Trader agrees. He stresses the importance of mental health days and the importance of "reset and refresh" days as school can be extremely demanding on both students and teachers.

PGCPS's intent to create a stronger, more positive community is on the right track. However, the current execution appears to be missing the mark and leading to widespread student disapproval. It is clear that students and teachers share a common vision for a more useful advisory time that would engage the students while providing them with beneficial support.

If PGCPS integrated student and teacher feedback directly into the curriculum design it could avoid wasted time. Gathering opinions on session content is the most direct path to increasing effectiveness, participation and achieving the goal of building a stronger, more engaged student body.

ourselves and talking. You could tell who was VIP by the suits wearing a serious face surrounding them, their bodyguards." President Trump was seated to the far left of the stage table while Laura was at the third table from the stage, on the right-hand side. Her seat was some distance from the president but not far from the stage, she says.

The guests were allowed to enter the dining room at around 7 p.m., Laura recalls. An hour and a half later, the gunshots went off.

The Aftermath

Footage of the room shared by news organizations shows Vice President Vance and President Trump being evacuated from the stage. Other guests were instructed to take shelter. "If you did not have any Secret Service or bodyguards tending to you, you were told to get down," says Laura. "They began evacuating politicians and celebrities immediately." In a room full of journalists, approximately 30 to 40 minutes after hearing shots, at what Laura estimates was around 9 p.m., an increasing number of reporters felt comfortable moving around; they "began recording, photographing and interviewing people or calling their editors," recalls Laura.

Laura's first call was to her younger brother to let him know she was all right. Later, she called her mother, not sure how much was being reported about the event already and not wanting her to panic.

Around 9 p.m., Weijia Jiang, president of the White House Correspondents' Association (WHCA), informed the guests that both a shooter and the president had been evacuated. A few minutes later, she announced President Trump wished to return and the dinner would resume. They were instructed to return to their tables, says Laura, but a final announcement, around 9:50

THE FRANK CORMIER SCHOLARSHIP

The scholarship is named for the late correspondent for the Associated Press who also served as president of the WHCA. It is an annual award of $5,000 given to each of four students at the Philip Merrill College of Journalism.

Laura Charleston featured in the White House Correspondents' Dinner program.

p.m., stated that, for security reasons, the event was canceled.

Reporting the Event

After the panic had subsided University of Maryland Dean of Journalism Rafael Lorente, who was also in the room, approached Laura and asked if she wanted to help with reporting the event. "Of course, I agreed," said Laura. She interviewed three reporters from Politico and two from Reuters. "Christi Parsons, director of Capital News Service (CNS) D.C. Bureau, was there to guide me and the other UMD students (also scholarship recipients) who were reporting. We had an article out by 12 a.m. Sunday morning," says Laura. The article Laura co-authored was published by CNS Maryland and can be found at tinyurl.com/yh57698s.

Security

Asked about the security at the event, Laura described it as disappointing. The shooter was a guest at the hotel, but even if he hadn't been, Laura still believes he would have had multiple opportunities to enter. Though there were D.C. Police patrol officers blocking traffic around the event, when Laura entered the area, she was simply asked if she was attending the event or not, or if she was a guest at the hotel. There was no request for ID and no pat-down, she says. A few times, people who were neither guests of the hotel nor the event passed her and were stopped and questioned. In front of the hotel, she had to produce her paper invitation for the dinner. "Again, no ID check or form of security check of my bag or pat-down," she recalls. "If you were a guest, your name was on a paper spreadsheet." Once inside the hotel, guests of the Correspondents' Dinner were escorted downstairs. There were guards everywhere, says Laura, but still no ID check and no bag check.

"It wasn't until 7 p.m. when we were moved into the reception area that I had to walk through a metal detector, and my bag was checked. TSA and other security members were completing this. It was the only professional security check the entire night, and this was only one floor above the dining room where we would be eating." This was the area where the gunman was apprehended, says Laura, two flights of stairs away from the dining room. "Two flights of stairs and he could've fired toward the room where we were all seated," she reflects.

Eventful Evening

It was an eventful evening, even though she never received her certificate. Did she ever get to eat that evening, we asked. "I had a small salad - Spring Pea and Burrata Salad with bread. That is all. I hadn't eaten anything that day and was looking forward to dinner," she said. It would have been lobster.

Though President Trump stated on Saturday he wants the dinner rescheduled within 30 days, Laura hasn't heard anything official from the WHCA yet about her scholarship certificate or when she might receive it, or if there'll be another opportunity to celebrate with a lobster dinner.

Glenn Ivey Visits Meals On Wheels, Delivering in Greenbelt

by Karen Yoho

U.S. Representative Glenn Ivey (D-Md.) visited Meals on Wheels of College Park (MOWCP) on Monday, April 6 to see how the organization provides nutritious meals and vital safety checks to county residents.

“Great to spend the morning with Meals on Wheels of College Park in Greenbelt delivering meals and connecting with seniors in our community,” said Ivey. “This work is about more than food, it’s about care, connection and making sure our neighbors can continue living safely at their own home.”

Formed in 1974 to feed a small number of elderly and homebound people in College Park, the group now provides meal delivery to 150 seniors and people with disabilities five days a week. MOWCP serves adjoining cities and towns in Prince George’s County, including Greenbelt, Adelphi, Berwyn Heights, Hyattsville, Beltsville and Riverdale Park. “Clients receive a hot nutritious lunch/dinner, plus healthy options for breakfast, a light lunch or dinner meal and one half-gallon of milk (weekly),” explained Lisa Ealley, MOWCP president. “More importantly, in addition to ensuring nutritional needs, our caring volunteers perform a wellness check and provide a social link to the isolation they may face.”

Rep. Glenn Ivey meets with Meals on Wheels of College Park (MOWCP) president Lisa Ealley and volunteer Lee Fuerst at the MOWCP facility.

MOWCP volunteers serve in a wide variety of roles, from food preparation and meal packaging to delivering food to homes and managing the deliveries to ensure dietary requirements are met for those on restricted diets. Volunteers are always needed to fill in for an assortment of tasks and schedules are also varied, from monthly and weekly assignments to daily shifts. Those who would like to volunteer for the program or want more information can visit mealsonwheelsofcollegepark.org. “Every piece of our operation relies on volunteers. From sticking labels on bags to picking up donated food from farms and restaurants,” said Ealley. MOWCP is seeking the donation of a van or small truck to make these pickups easier.

“As we approach National Volunteer Week, April 19-25, we want to thank those who serve as volunteers, donate to MOWCP or refer clients to us,” added Ealley. “With their support, we can be a lifeline to those neighbors who are food insecure.”

Police Offer Guardian Program To Protect At-risk Children

Officer Graham presents at Springhill Lake Elementary School’s Special Education Festival on April 26.

On Sunday, April 26, Officer Kendall Graham attended the Special Education Festival at Springhill Lake Elementary School. Graham shared information about the Greenbelt Guardian Program, a proactive initiative designed to help protect children who may be at risk of wandering or may need additional support when interacting with first responders.

The Greenbelt Guardian Program is a voluntary registry that allows families to share important information about their child ahead of time, “so if an emergency ever occurs, officers can respond faster, communicate more effectively and ensure safer outcomes.”

For more information or to join the registry visit greenbeltdm.gov/guardian.

Doctors Medical Center Breaks Ground on Women’s Pavilion

Luminis Health celebrated the official groundbreaking of a new Women’s Health Pavilion at Luminis Health Doctors Community Medical Center (LHDCMC). The 67,000-square-foot pavilion will include inpatient obstetric care, such as labor, delivery and postpartum services, along with expanded specialty care offerings to support patients before, during and after pregnancy.

The three-story, state-of-the-art facility will include private labor and delivery rooms, dedicated C-section operating rooms, midwife supported birthing suites, postpartum and nursery units, Level II Special Care Nursery, future shell space for expanding women’s services and a rooftop helipad with direct access to the Emergency Department.

Prince George’s County is home to nearly one million residents, yet 8 in 10 women leave the county to deliver their babies due to limited access to obstetrical care. Black women in the region also face disproportionately high maternal mortality rates, approximately 50 percent higher than the national average.

Construction is underway, with expanded women’s health services scheduled to launch in late 2028. Once fully operational, LHDCMC expects to deliver approximately 2,000 babies each year.

The project also features major upgrades to core clinical and support areas of the hospital, including modernized operating rooms, interventional radiology, sterile processing, redesigned Emergency Department, expanded laboratory and food and nutrition spaces, and major utility and infrastructure improvements.

International Flavor, Family Focus Will Drive Beltway Plaza's Future

by Laura Charleston

Beltway Plaza is doubling down on small, culturally diverse businesses and family-friendly entertainment as part of a long-term strategy to keep the mall relevant in a changing retail landscape. With new international dining options and community-centered attractions underway, management and tenants say the mall's future depends on maintaining its identity as a local, welcoming hub.

For more than two decades, Quantum Companies has shaped Beltway Plaza into what Vice President of Operations Kenny Wine describes as a community-first shopping center built on small businesses and cultural variety. "We have almost primarily small businesses," Wine said. "There's over 20 languages spoken by our tenants, which suggests there's also probably that many languages of customers that visit them."

Independent Businesses

That focus is central to how management decides which businesses to bring in. Rather than relying on national chains, Beltway Plaza emphasizes independently owned shops and restaurants that reflect the diversity of the surrounding community.

The strategy extends to food, a major pillar of the mall's redevelopment efforts. A new food court, currently under construction, will introduce Indian, Jamaican, Thai and Colombian restaurants, expanding the plaza's current international offerings. If all goes according to plan, it will be complete in June.

Engaging People

Wine said the goal is not just variety, but engagement. "We want to get people to try all the great, delicious food options that exist here that you might not think about," Wine said.

To encourage that, management is planning initiatives such as a "food passport" program, where visitors can sample dishes from different restaurants and earn rewards, and a larger international food festival, aimed at drawing visitors from across the region and offering samples to customers hesitant to try something new. "The goal is to get people to try food that they might be intimidated by," Wine said, noting that offering small samples can make new cultural experiences more approachable.

Nihit Cafe and Juice Bar owner Raja Kumar said the mall's diversity and community feel have sustained his business for more than 25 years.

cold-pressed juices, ensuring customers get the important nutrition they need. "These days, people [are] health conscious," Kumar said. "People can just swing by and get their protein shakes or fruit salad or some natural juices, or pure natural energy." Proximity to Planet Fitness and a steady stream of regular customers help sustain the business, while the mall's accessibility, just off I-495, continues to attract visitors.

Coming Attractions

Beyond food, Beltway Plaza is investing heavily in family-oriented attractions to broaden its appeal. Plans include a trampoline park, a dance studio, a taekwondo facility and a future recreation center in partnership with the city. As part of that effort, the mall has secured a special exception from local zoning authorities to allow for a child care facility. "The community needs child care," Wine said, adding that the goal is to provide an affordable and accessible option for families. The approval allows Beltway Plaza to expand its community services with organizations like Playtime Project, which is establishing a permanent presence to provide social services and engagement. "We want to be very family-friendly," Wine said. "I want people doing constructive things with the mall."

Unique Identity

Despite competition from larger, more modern shopping centers, Beltway Plaza's identity is its advantage. "It's very community driven, and it's unlike anything anyone's really seen," Wine said.

As construction continues on reflects personnel costs. Varda said with 23 full-time employees, Recreation is fully staffed with no plans to add positions in FY 2027. However, with six employees having 25 to 30 years of service, transitions must be anticipated.

Recognition Groups, Others

McKinney asked how much space and time are used by recognition groups. Varda said that 2,143 hours of free space were used, with a value of $67,000, and rental income can be missed because the spaces are unavailable. Varda added that all available space in city facilities is filled by recognition groups, community organizations, department programs and rentals. He surveyed the spaces and schedules before the meeting, and confirmed every place, indoor and outdoor, was completely packed.

Nonresident Participants

Pompi noted that 38 percent of summer campers are nonresidents, so more funding should come from county Park and Planning. Varda said the programs need nonresidents so he is proud that many come to Greenbelt.

Weaver asked if nonresident percentages have changed. Oudemans said program growth has been consistent, but may not continue given time and space limitations. While virtually all programs have nonresident participants, some fill with residents before nonresident registration opens; expanded accommodation depends on time and space available. She praised council's motivation for more county funding for programs but also emphasized nonresident use of Greenbelt's parks.

Jordan noted flat revenues and asked, given Greenbelt's fantastic programs, if fees should be raised for nonresidents. Varda answered that summer camp fees are generally kept at a 15 percent spread between residents and nonresidents. Nonresidents have choices, and the county and other municipalities charge less. To stay competitive is threading a needle: unfilled spaces represent lost revenue. Oudemans added that programming in Greenbelt West is subsidized to serve that community. In fact, free programming has increased throughout Greenbelt to serve everyone, including those with less disposable income.

SLRC Increase

McKinney, noting more programming at SLRC and seeing an increase projected for FY 2027, asked for specific numbers and targets. Oudemans referred to Active Aging and preschool programs. SLRC started opening at 10 a.m. on weekdays, convenient for active aging and preschoolers. SLRC's vibrant after-school program now includes art instruction three times a week.

Greenbelt East Programs

Jordan asked about programs at Schrom Hills Park and Oudemans referred to her report on that facility, where small buildings limit indoor programming. Popular offerings include Summer Teen Extreme, raku ceramics and Fall Fest. Community groups like CHEARS, The SPACE, Boys and Girls Club, Little League, Greenbelt Baseball, Greenbelt Soccer and RUAK use the park. The renovated ball field features community open play and reserved games, with city Park Rangers providing supervision, and more activities would be possible with more funding. Salmeron praised Recreation's well-prepared plan, regretting funding was not available in the budget.

Weaver asked for possibilities, if more funding were found. For Schrom Hills, Varda estimated $26,000 for staff, monitoring and open hours in the recreation room. For augmenting Learn 2 Earn, Oudemans estimated $32,000 to $36,000. Seeking other Greenbelt East venues, Oudemans reported visiting HOAs and management at various developments, saying their focus solely on their own residents made collaboration

Officers Receive Commendation In Arrest of Armed Man at Metro

At approximately 11:30 p.m. on Thursday, March 5, Greenbelt Police officers responded to the Greenbelt Metro Station after receiving a report of an armed individual observed on security cameras waving a handgun (see the March 12 issue). Communication specialists provided timely and accurate updates, allowing officers to coordinate an effective response.

Upon arrival, the officers executed a tactical approach. When the suspect refused commands and reached toward his waistband, officers deployed a Taser, safely gaining compliance. The suspect was taken into custody, and a handgun was recovered from his person. Additionally, a second individual was arrested on an outstanding warrant.

This incident highlights excellent teamwork, communication and sound decision-making in a potentially life-threatening situation, said Bowers. The officers' restraint and effective use of less-lethal force ensured a safe resolution.

Officers Receive Appreciation For Apprehending Juvenile, Gun

On Monday, April 20, Chief Richard Bowers awarded several officers with a Letter of Appreciation for their efforts during a saturation detail in the Franklin Park area. While on patrol, the officers observed a group of juveniles known for their prior involvement in violent crimes, including armed robberies.

As the officers approached, the group fled on foot. The officers pursued one individual and noted indicators suggesting that the suspect might be armed. They maintained communication, allowing assisting units to respond effectively.

The juvenile was apprehended, and based on the officers' observations, a perimeter was established for a thorough search by the K9 unit, which ultimately resulted in the recovery of a concealed handgun.

The proactive efforts and coordinated actions of the officers led to the removal of an illegally possessed firearm and the detention of a violent juvenile, likely preventing further crimes. Their professionalism and dedication reflect great credit upon themselves and the Greenbelt Police Department, said Bowers.

Community Center

Jordan praised the activity screen in the Community Center, asking if that information could appear on the city's website. Varda explained that different software would inhibit a seamless connection. However, the public information officer is investigating linking calendars, cancellations and registrations. Customers with a recreation account, Salmerón added, can log on and see the calendar.

Jordan asked about the commercial kitchen. Varda said rentals are promoted, but there are challenges. County licensing and permitting discourages many potential renters and (as Phelan noted) burdens small business owners. Also caterers sometimes need early morning access outside operating hours, though accommodation might be possible.

Pompi suggested that Greenbelt might help with permitting and Salmerón said he was working on this with the county. An upcoming food handling class in the kitchen is nearly full, facilitating the first step of permitting.

Other Programs

McKinney expressed appreciation for the successful workforce development program for Greenbelt residents.

Jordan asked about ADA and accessibility improvements, especially at the Aquatic & Fitness Center. Phelan described requested adjustments to fitness equipment, a water wheelchair and a lift for the outdoor pool. All recreation buildings and projects are monitored for compliance, Varda said, describing accessibility elements of the Braden Field upgrade. Salmerón added that elevator repairs are proceeding as funding becomes available. Inclusion staff and new technologies meet individual needs.

the new food court and additional entertainment spaces, both management and tenants say the mall's success will depend on preserving that sense of familiarity while continuing to evolve. For Kumar, that balance is what keeps customers coming back, not just to shop, but to stay.

"You don't feel like you're going shopping," Kumar said. "You are here to shop and ... have a little bit of a good time."

Patuxent Refuge Holds May Activities

The featured art at the John Hollingsworth Art Gallery will be a photo exhibition from May 1 through 30 by Nishanth Sunny, an associate professor at the University of Maryland. The theme of the exhibition is Nature's Wonders - Let's Preserve Them!

Prints from the exhibit are available for purchase. They will be available for pickup from the gift shop starting June 3. All of the proceeds go to benefit the mission of the Friends of Patuxent.

During the exhibition the following activities for kids between 4 and 12 years of age are planned at the Patuxent National Wildlife Visitor Center, 10901 Scarlet Tanager Loop.

Saturday, May 9, 11 a.m. to noon: Dennis Hartnett, Patuxent volunteer, will lead an interactive program titled Wolves and Other Predators.

Saturday, May 16, 11 a.m. to noon: Barrie Hershkovitz, Patuxent volunteer, will lead an interactive program titled Monarch Butterflies and their Magical Migration.

Saturday, May 23, 11 a.m. to noon: Diana Ogilvie, Patuxent volunteer, will lead an interactive nature walk highlighting common species of interest and their interactions with the nature around them.

Patuxent Refuge Shop Needs Volunteers

Friends of Patuxent's Wildlife Images Bookstore & Nature Shop in the refuge Visitor Center seeks to welcome new volunteers. All shop profits benefit this national wildlife refuge, but the shop can't run without enough volunteers.

Retirees, at-home adults with school-age children, homeschoolers and others with schedule-accommodation needs will be welcomed to this friendly and educational place. While most volunteers help in the shop from 9:30 a.m. to 4 p.m. one day per week on a Wednesday, Thursday, Friday or Saturday, the shop manager can work with volunteers to accommodate fewer hours' service in a day.

Primary tasks are to run the digital cash register (training provided) and make change for customers' cash purchases. Especially valued are reliability, flexibility and willingness to learn.

Adults and youth aged 16-17 with a parent/guardian who will co-volunteer, inquire soon. Two adults who would like to volunteer together would also be welcome.

To learn more about this fun and interesting service opportunity experience, email shop manager Ann Carlson at wibookstore@friendsofpatuxent.org or call 301-497-5771 Wednesday through Saturday between 10 a.m. and 3:30 p.m.

ERHS Students Compete at VEX World Robotics Championship

by Owen Kelley

On April 21 to 24, five students from Eleanor Roosevelt High School (ERHS) - John Kelley, Antony Lin, Loriel Nickel, Meghana Noojipady and Violet Ridge - were in St. Louis, Mo., to compete in the 2026 VEX robotics high school World Championship. Among the 868 robots who qualified to compete at this event, the ERHS robot, known as robot 53E, was the only one built by Prince George's County students.

Leading up to this event, over 6,800 high school teams had competed in local VEX tournaments this school year.

At the world championship, ERHS competed in 12 two-minute matches that each featured four robots on a 12-foot-square playing field. Each year, VEX announces a new challenge, and this year's challenge required the robots to pick up cubes and slide them into four goals. A robot may push an opponent or remove their cubes from goals.

The panoramic photo shows the scale of the event. Behind the bleachers are pit areas for repairing robots. The ERHS students spent hours visiting other teams' pits to exchange ideas, to pick up souvenirs like stickers with a team's name on them, and to sign posters or flags.

In one of their 12 matches, ERHS was allied with a team from Benghazi, Libya, when they tried, unsuccessfully, to defeat an alliance from Ireland and Canada.

On the last day, teams from Nebraska and Washington state became this year's world champions, but the high-energy event served another purpose too. It was like a comic convention, except with dueling robots. The hope of qualifying to attend the World Championship inspires teams everywhere to work hard on their robots and do their best at local competitions.

The team's head coach is Karen Bogoski, an engineering teacher at ERHS. The team is supported by the Neal Peter Memorial Fund, the Maryland Department of Education and donations from the community.

Celebrating a Decade of Korean Culture at Eleanor Roosevelt H.S.

by Bob Huh

Ten years ago, in 2016, a new tradition began at Eleanor Roosevelt High School (ERHS), one that would grow into one of the most vibrant cultural celebrations on campus. The Eleanor Roosevelt KoRean (ERKR) Showcase, dedicated to highlighting the richness of Korean language and culture, has officially reached its 10th anniversary. This milestone marks a decade of student talent, community building and cultural appreciation.

Humble Beginnings

The story of ERKR began in September 2015 with the creation of the school's Korean Club. Founded by ESOL teacher Bob Huh, the club aimed to spark interest in Korean culture through four core pillars: Taekwondo, language learning, K-pop dance and traditional folk arts. What began with an expectation of about 10 students quickly exceeded all predictions: more than 30 students signed up right away. This overwhelming interest laid the foundation for what would become a lasting tradition.

That same momentum led to today's historic milestone. In 2016, ERHS became the first public high school in Maryland to offer Korean as a language elective. What started as an after-school club evolved into a formal academic program, allowing students to earn language credit while exploring Korean history, culture and society. The program also helped establish the Korean Honor Society (KHS), further strengthening cultural awareness within the school community.

Diverse Talent

Over the years, the ERKR Showcase has grown into a dynamic production that blends traditional heritage with modern pop culture. This year's anniversary event, held on Thursday, March 26, featured a wide range of performances and exhibits:

- Modern Beats: High-energy K-pop dance and singing performances

- Timeless Traditions: Cultural performances such as the Fan Dance, Nanta and Taekwondo demonstrations

- Creative Expressions: A student art showcase featuring Korean-inspired works

- Student-led Drama: Original plays written and performed by Korean 1 and 2 students, highlighting their developing language skills.

Beyond the Stage

More than just a performance, the ERKR Showcase reflects the inclusive spirit of ERHS. Through the Korean Club and KHS, students have helped create a welcoming environment while promoting a deeper understanding of Korean culture within the diverse Raider community. As the curtain falls on another successful year, the 10th anniversary stands as a powerful reminder of the students' dedication and the lasting impact of cultural exchange at ERHS.

Reflecting on the past decade, Huh emphasizes that ERKR is also a platform for student growth. "Students don't just learn how to perform," he explains. "They develop essential leadership, organizational and communication skills while working with peers, schools and community partners."

Producing an event that draws more than 300 audience members each year requires the coordinated effort of nearly 100 student performers and volunteers. Through this experience, students gain valuable skills in teamwork and project management - skills that extend far beyond high school. For many students, ERKR becomes a defining moment. "Some students have never had an experience like this, especially after the disruptions caused by the Covid-19 pandemic," Huh notes. "Many say it's their favorite memory at ERHS."

A Community Effort

Huh also emphasizes that this milestone would not have been possible without the strong support of the ERHS community. He extends special thanks to: Building Supervisor Mr. Dent and his crew, along with Auditorium Technician Mr. Smith, for ensuring the event runs smoothly; Principal Portia Barnes and the administrative team for their continued support of cultural diversity; and teachers, staff and Air Force JROTC cadets for their invaluable contributions.

As ERKR enters its second decade, the future looks bright. With continued student passion and community support, the showcase will remain a powerful space for cultural connection, creativity and leadership at ERHS.

Members of the Eleanor Roosevelt Korean (ERKR) Club demonstrated their growing Korean language skills in the high school's annual ERKR Showcase on March 26. The students delivered a traditional and a modern play, Nanta drumming, a fan dance, taekwondo, and K-pop dance and singing performances.
