Profile of a Hometown Officer: Officer Roberson, Greenbelter

by Laura Charleston

When the Greenbelt Police Department's Criminal Investigative Unit was awarded a Unit Citation for its work on major violent crime cases (see May 7 issue), Master Police Officer Carl Roberson was among those recognized. It's an honor that, for him, reflects both professional achievement and a personal commitment to the city he has long called home.

Roberson has spent nearly a decade serving the same community where he grew up.

"I'm a Greenbelter," he said. "This is my home. I love Greenbelt."

The unit's work contributed to a broader decline in crime across the city. According to monthly crime reports, the total number of offenses in Greenbelt is down 30 percent compared with the previous year.

For Roberson, however, the job is about more than statistics. His connection to Greenbelt runs deep. His family settled in the area after immigrating from Guyana, and he has lived in the city since early childhood. He attended local schools, including Eleanor Roosevelt High School, and still spends much of his time

Eleanor Roosevelt Wrestling Brings Home State Champs

by Osmel Sosa Chavez

March 7 concluded Eleanor Roosevelt High School's (ERHS) wrestling season in triumphant fashion, as eight tried and failed to halt the title aspirations of ERHS Austin Hayes, a junior, and Leo Foreman, a senior, at 113 and 157 pounds respectively. This marked the first time Eleanor Roosevelt Wrestling would bring home two male state champions within the same season.

Hayes would add on to the history-making as after defeating Chesapeake's Quin Greenstreet 7-3, he would become the first ever two-time state champion not only from Roosevelt, but from

Eight Candidates for At-Large Seats Share Reasons, Priorities

by Anna Bedford-Dillow

Eight Democratic candidates are in the crowded race for two Prince George's County Council at-large seats. Among those running are two current county councilmembers: Jolene Ivey, an incumbent who moved from the District 5 seat to the at-large seat through a special election in 2024 and Sydney Harrison who has represented District 9 for eight years.

The at-large seats have become controversial, some seeing them as a way for councilmembers to sidestep the two-term limit on district seats or as proving grounds for higher office (see article below). A bill introduced by Councilmember Tom Dernoga may see the question of the seats' abolition placed on the ballot this year, but would not take effect until 2030, after those elected this year serve a full four-year term.

The Greenbelt News Review reached out to all eight candidates and asked them why they are running to be an at-large councilmember and to share two important issues an at-large member should address. Given the recent resignations and appointments on council, as well as

At-Large Candidates and the Seats Themselves Could Be on Ballot

by Anna Bedford-Dillow

Greenbelters can expect to see eight Democratic candidates for two at-large county council seats on their ballot in June, and, in November, the elimination of those seats for 2030 could also be a question on the ballot.

The two at-large seats have been with the council for less than a decade, though when the council was created in 1970 all seats were at-large. That changed with a ballot referendum in 1980, when councilmembers each began to represent a district. In 2016, the charter amendment to re-introduce at-large positions put the question as follows: "To provide for the election of council members by district and at large, to change the composition of the County Council to a system of nine district members and two at large members, and to provide that a Council member who has been elected to two consecutive terms of office as a district member shall not serve more than two consecutive terms as an at-large member." Two-thirds of voters were in favor and the seats were introduced in 2018.

Those in favor saw the seats as an opportunity for more representation for county residents and for councilmembers whose interests would include the entire county rather than being limited to the parochial interests of a district.

Those opposed argued it was a way to circumvent term limits and advance political aspirations.

The ability of the seats to bypass term limits was immediately evident. Mel Franklin was one of the councilmembers to support at-large seats and the expanded council in 2016. In 2018, at the completion of his second term representing District 9, where he was term-limited to two four-year terms, he then became one of the first two at-large councilmembers. Calvin S. Hawkins II, who had not previously served on the council, won the other seat.

Over recent months, the use of the seats for political advancement has drawn increasing scrutiny. A successful bid for an at-large seat might be proof of ability to win at the county level and also increase name recognition. Both current at-large county councilmembers - Jolene Ivey and Wala Blegay - moved to their

Letters to the Editor

Little League Coverage

I want to express how happy I was to see some coverage in the Greenbelt News Review of local Little League games. I've been attending numerous Greenbelt youth sporting events for years and always thought it odd and somewhat discouraging that the local paper did not feature these events and support the local youth participation.

In addition to baseball, Greenbelt has teams I've watched in soccer, track and basketball, yet even when these teams have won notable medals and trophies, there has been no affirmation of the young people's achievements. I hope to see more coverage as encouragement that the community supports the young people's achievements in the future.

Barbara Hammonds

Editor's Note: We appreciate the baseball information submitted by Ben Friedman printed on page 15 and in the May 7 issue, as well as photographs submitted by others. We encourage Greenbelters to submit articles, schedules, photographs and awards for youth sports teams.

Grateful for Support

A big thank you to the kind young women who helped me after my hard fall Saturday near the Green Man Festival.

And my husband John too. X-rays showed no break and my big bruises are healing well.

Jane Young

Letters Policy

Deadline for letters is 6 p.m. Monday. Submission does not guarantee publication. Letters should be no longer than 300 words (shorter letters are more likely to be published).

Letters may be edited for clarity, grammar, civility and space constraints. The News Review may add a comment from the editor if deemed necessary.

All letters must include the letter writer's name, physical address, and telephone number. Only the name will be published; the News Review will consider requests for the name to be withheld.

On Screen at Greenbelt Cinema

The Sheep Detectives

In this witty, new breed of mystery, George (Hugh Jackman) is a shepherd who reads detective novels to his beloved sheep every night, assuming they can't possibly understand. But when a mysterious incident disrupts life on the farm, the sheep realize they must become the detectives. As they follow the clues and investigate human suspects, they prove that even sheep can be brilliant crime-solvers.

Steal This Story, Please!

Undeterred by armed soldiers, evasive politicians and riot police, Amy Goodman has reported some of the most consequential stories of our time. This documentary is a gripping account of the trailblazing journalist whose unwavering commitment to truth-telling spans three decades of turbulent history. From the frontlines of global conflicts to the organized chaos of her daily news show Democracy Now!, Goodman amplifies stories and voices too often silenced by commercial media. Academy Award-nominated filmmakers Carl Deal and Tia Lessin (Trouble the Water, Citizen Koch, The Janes) take us behind the scenes with the warm, wisecracking granddaughter of an Orthodox rabbi - raised in a tradition of asking hard questions - as she navigates a media landscape reshaped by technology, corporate consolidation and political assaults on the press and on truth itself. Urgent, provocative and unexpectedly funny, the film is both a call to action and a celebration of resistance, posing the question: what happens to democracy when the press stops challenging power?

Amrum

This film is a tender coming-of-age tale about the loss of innocence in the waning days of WWII. It is the spring of 1945 on the German island of Amrum, where 12-year-old Nanning spends his days working the farm and his nights fishing. Despite the hardship, life on the windswept isle seems idyllic. When farmer Tessa (Diane Kruger) mentions to Nanning that the war will soon be over, the boy - too young to understand the political implications - is pleased to imagine that his Nazi officer father might soon be coming home. But word of Germany's imminent defeat sends his mother into decline, and as Nanning looks to his community for support, he learns that the true enemy is far closer than he imagined.

Pather Panchali

Impoverished priest Harihar Ray, dreaming of a better life for himself and his family, leaves his rural Bengal village in search of work. Alone, his wife, Sarbojaya, looks after her rebellious daughter, Durga, and her young son, Apu, as well as Harihar's elderly aunt Indir. The children enjoy the small pleasures of their difficult life, while their parents suffer the daily indignities heaped upon them.

Martha Folk

Martha Tompkins Folk

Martha Tompkins Folk, 79, of Lanham died on April 29, 2026. Born in Greenbelt on February 18, 1947, Martha was the daughter of the late Alberta and Tommy Tompkins. She grew up in Old Greenbelt alongside her twin sister, Alice. Her childhood was filled with Girl Scouts, singing in the St. Cecilia Choir at Greenbelt Community Church and visiting family in Ann Arbor, Mich., and on Maryland's Eastern Shore. She developed a lifelong love for the great outdoors during family trips to national parks, a passion that would define much of her life.

Martha graduated from High Point High School, Class of 1965, and continued her education at the University of Maryland, where she earned a degree in education and a Master of Science in library science. She dedicated over 30 years to her career as a librarian with the Prince George's County Memorial Library System. She took great joy in helping patrons find information and leading engaging book discussions until her retirement in 2003.

A woman with a profound love for music, Martha was a lifelong member of the Greenbelt Community Church Choir. It was there that she met her husband, Larry. They were married on October 23, 1975, and shared countless outdoor adventures. Some of their fondest memories included climbing Cadillac Mountain in Acadia National Park, hiking to Phantom Ranch in the Grand Canyon, camping in Shenandoah National Park and exploring the Blue Ridge Parkway.

In 1980, Martha and Larry welcomed their only child, Erika. Martha delighted in being a mother, and the family continued the tradition of summer adventures, often traveling to the Pacific Northwest to visit Martha's sister, Alice. These memorable trips took them through Glacier National Park, the Canadian Rockies and Alaska.

Martha's love of music led her to a long tenure as a second soprano with The National Christian Choir. She enjoyed singing all over the country, with highlights including a choir trip to Israel and performing at the Crystal Cathedral in California.

Martha's generosity of spirit led her to serve as a longtime coordinator of the Church World Service CROP Hunger Walk fundraiser at Greenbelt Community Church. For several years, she led the organization of the Hyattsville CROP Hunger Walk, bringing together organizations across the county to raise funds to provide meals for those in our own community who need them - and supporting programs that create greater food security all around the world.

Martha deeply cherished her church family at Greenbelt Community Church, where she forged lifelong friendships. She found immense joy in every aspect of fellowship, from sharing Agape meals during Lent and gathering for Sunday worship, to weekly choir practices and singing with the Greenbelt Combined Choir during the holiday season.

Martha was preceded in death by her beloved husband, Lawrence (Larry) Folk of Dayton, Ohio. She is survived by her sister, Alice T. McGregor and her family of Seattle, Wash.; her daughter, Erika F. Freeman and son-in-law David Freeman of Silver Spring; and her two cherished grandchildren, Bailey and Ash.

Martha will be keenly missed by all who knew her. A Celebration of Life Service will be held at Greenbelt Community Church on Friday, June 5 at 11 a.m. In lieu of flowers, donations may be made in Martha's memory to Church World Service CROP Walk.

FEATURED PETS

Blu

Ready for Adoption?

Call (301) 474-6124

7-month-old Blu was recently surrendered to the shelter when his owner could no longer care for him. While Blu initially had some nerves adjusting to the shelter, he has become a sweet love bug full of puppy kisses and zoomies. When he's not smothering you in affection, Blu loves to play with tennis balls and go on walks. He does great on the leash and is non-reactive – he just wants to say hi to everyone he sees (plus, his former owner said he really loves other dogs). Blu is also picking up very fast on training and has already mastered "sit".

If you're interested in adopting bright-eyed Blu, please reach out to us at animalservices@greenbeltmd.gov or call us at (301) 474-6124.

A majority (or quorum) of Greenbelt City Council members may attend community organization meetings, but no official Council action will be taken at these meetings. Please note that meeting locations may change after being published. For information on how to join these meetings, contact the respective organization directly.

Asian American Pacific Islander Heritage Month

The Koto Concert Delights At the Greenbelt Library

by Lois Rosado

Colin Khem and Professor Yuriko Gandolfo play the koto, an instrument similar to a zither.

On Wednesday, May 6, the Greenbelt Library presented a soothing and informative koto session in their large conference room in honor of Asian American Pacific Islander Heritage Month. Those in attendance were treated to a delightful concert by Colin Khem, who works for the Prince George's County Memorial Library System, and Professor Yuriko Gandolfo from the University of Maryland. The koto players presented both instrumental and vocal examples of the musical genre.

Although koto is the national instrument of Japan, the Chinese introduced it there in the 7th and 8th centuries. Koto was played by the upper classes and gradually became popular among the Japanese people.

Koto is considered a zither instrument. It is composed of Paulownia wood and most have 13 strings strung over movable bridges that alter the tuning and tone of the songs played. There are koto instruments that have up to 21 strings. Those with 17 to 18 strings are used as a bass instrument. Gandolfo explained that as the dragon is a sacred animal in Japan, the front of the koto is called the dragon's horn, the crown is the dragon's head and the end is called a tail. Originally, the strings were made of silk and some of the more expensive instruments still use it; however, most koto are made with plastic string. The bridges that serve as tuners were once made of ivory but now are also made of plastic. There are two sound holes on the bottom. The koto is plucked with three finger picks called Tsume that are placed on the first three fingers of the right hand.

The next concert of koto will be held at the New Carrollton Library on May 30 at 2 p.m. It is worth attending - it is free and relaxing and experiencing other cultures enables one to expand one's knowledge and appreciation of the people of our world.

A Review

Sitcom and Movie Stars Shine In Rudes' Adaptation of Salome

by Melissa Sites

The Rude Mechanicals have a long - quarter century! - history of defying expectations in their productions of classic theater. Their current production of Salome, directed by Wes Dennis at Greenbelt Arts Center, is built around the gooey center of a play by Oscar Wilde, presented chock-full of references and quotations as a 1990s sitcom or an off-the-rails game of Mario Kart.

Originally written in French, Salome was translated into English by Lord Alfred Douglas, Wilde's lover. According to a rule in England at the time, biblical characters could not be portrayed on stage, so Wilde never saw it performed, but it was staged twice in France in 1896 while he was imprisoned.

Herod the Tetrarch (De'Maryo Platt) is obsessed with Salome (Celia Richardson), his wife Herodias' beautiful daughter, and wishes her to dance for him, while Salome is obsessed by the wild prophet, Jokanaan (Dylan Nicholson), who is imprisoned in the palace cistern. Salome wins the head of Jokanaan, horribly kisses it, and is killed by Herod's guards.

The show contains comedic violence, suicide and murder; while the original story is tragic and Wilde's play is infused with poetic symbolism, this production preserves Salome's insane intensity. As Salome, Richardson is dressed in yellow plaid as the main character from the 1995 movie Clueless. Scary in her fanatical desire for Jokanaan, Salome is spoiled, rich and is used to getting what she wants. While she refuses Herod's requests that she dance, she finally gives in when she realizes she can claim Jokanaan's head on a platter as her reward.

The Rudes' boldest move is portraying Jokanaan as Steve Urkel from the sitcom Family Matters. Nicholson manages to perform the entire play in Urkel's annoying nasalized accent, giving credence to Herodias' complaints that she cannot stand to hear him. Herodias herself (Darcella Owens) is dressed as Peg Bundy from Married ... with Children and Herod is dressed as a 90s celebrity with an entourage and a gold track suit, displaying a captivating combination of cravenness and charisma.

The show opens with Buzz Lightyear (Becca Korn) and loyal friend Woody (Maya Catoe) as palace attendants. Buzz admires Salome and repeats many corny lines about her beauty, comparing her to the moon. The repeated lines - some of which come from Wilde's play while some seem made up for this show - set the stage for what is to come as Jokanaan emerges from his cistern periodically to quote lyrics from 90s songs or issue catch phrases.

While Wilde's play was not often produced, it was adapted into a one-act opera by Richard Strauss and famously illustrated by Aubrey Beardsley. In these adaptations the play made its way into popular consciousness. This reviewer remembers a 1980s graphic novel adaptation of the opera by comic book illustrator P. Craig Russell that edited and preserved exquisite nuggets of text from Wilde's play in an elaborate game of Telephone. In this production by the Rudes, the play is likewise preserved. The wavering weakness of Herod, the obsession of Salome, the weird proclamations of the otherworldly Jokanaan - and the ripples of these characters' actions onto those around them - still carry through even while the play is set to rollicking 90s references that audience members are invited to check off a list.

Salome will run through May 16. Buy tickets at greenbeltartscenter.org.

at-large members running for higher office shortly after filling at-large seats, we also asked candidates if they would commit to serving out the full term if they are elected. They were asked to respond to each question in 150 words or less.

Sean A. Floyd

Sean A. Floyd is the CEO of Nomadic Solutions, LLC, a consulting firm specializing in campaigns, project and operations management, and community engagement. He was previously the National Programs and Outreach Manager for the National Coalition in Black Civic Participation, worked in the office of Washington, D.C. Mayor Muriel Bowser and worked on political campaigns, including President Obama's re-election. He holds a bachelor's degree in Political Science with a minor in Africa/African Diaspora Studies from St. Mary's College of Maryland.

Why are you running for this particular position and, if elected, would you commit to serving out the entirety of your term as at-large councilmember?

I am running to restore community, transparency and accountability to Prince George's County. Prince George's County is a county of opportunity that has been overlooked for far too long. As the deficit grows, property taxes continue to rise, and economic development remains stagnant, I will work to help us return to a place where people want to come to Prince George's County, not just drive through Prince George's County. Yes, I commit to serving my entire term as an at-large councilmember.

What do you see as two important issues an at-large council member, specifically, should plan to address?

My number one priority as a councilmember is improving budget transparency. To do this, we must establish mandatory agency oversight hearings before developing our annual operating budget. These hearings will allow us to hold agencies accountable for funding allocated for an operating year and identify areas where funding meant to serve residents was insufficient, excessive or inadequately spent. My second priority is to promote economic development and support small business growth and development. Currently our primary revenue source is property taxes which is imbalanced compared to the revenue generated from business taxes. As a result, homeowners bear the burden of maintaining a healthy budget, making it challenging to live comfortably in an economy where the cost of living continues to rise.

Laura S. Gilchrest

Laura Gilchrest is a lecturer at George Washington University in the Elliot School of International Affairs. She describes herself as a researcher with expertise in qualitative and quantitative research and public policy analysis and advocacy. She received her Ph.D. in Cultural Anthropology from American University and her M.A. in International Studies from DePaul University and has over ten years of experience teaching undergraduate and graduate students.

Why are you running for this particular position and, if elected, would you commit to serving out the entirety of your term as at-large councilmember?

I'm running for at-large as a publicly financed candidate to ensure the entire county's needs are represented on the County Council. If elected, I'll serve the full term as councilmember at-large. I'll improve transparency and accountability and repair trust and participation within our communities through public processes, community-driven policy and accessible meetings with advance notice and outreach. I'll tackle loopholes that violate established two-term limits and seat-hopping with appointment reform. I'll ensure smart growth and community-led development that follows our Climate Action Plan and Countywide Plan 2030. I'll fund resources and programs like home improvement, rehabilitation and modernizations to improve accessibility for disabled and elderly residents, make neighborhoods safer and more kid/youth/family-friendly, with sidewalks, bike lanes, pedestrian bridges and public restrooms. I'll introduce land value and vacancy taxes, and corporate tax fairness policies that will improve affordability for residents and provide lasting revenue for the county.

Accountability is a significant issue that all councilmembers need to address. At-large councilmembers are well-positioned to support accountability measures across districts through countywide outreach, community engagement and support, and a big-picture view of county needs and interests. Another is equity in planning, development and countywide resource distribution. I've visited each district and talked to civic associations, knocked on doors and attended forums from Laurel to Clinton. I know which districts need grocery stores and transportation solutions, and which districts need to address overgrowth and congestion. I've seen which districts have shiny upgraded facilities and where public schools and park facilities are in disrepair. This is especially important where schools and other public resources like parks and transportation and public works are concerned. All of our communities should receive the attention and resources they need regardless of their district or whether they live in an incorporated or unincorporated municipality.

Jolene Ivey

Jolene Ivey has served on Prince George's County Council since 2018, when she was elected as councilmember for District 5. She is currently an at-large county councilmember, after winning a special election in 2024. She served as a member of the Maryland House of Delegates from 2007 to 2015. She is married to Glenn Ivey, U.S. Representative for Maryland's 4th congressional district, with whom she has five children including Maryland Delegate Julian Ivey. Ivey earned a bachelor's degree in mass communication from Towson University and a master's degree in journalism from the University of Maryland College Park.

Why are you running for this particular position and, if elected, would you commit to serving out the entirety of your term as at-large councilmember?

I am running for the at-large seat because I have over seven years of proven leadership on the County Council (having served over a year as Chair), and I want to use this experience and knowledge to continue to represent the entire county. I know how to make things happen, I understand the issues and the challenges, and I know how to bring needed attention to the issues that should have priority.

I have the proven and demonstrated experience, knowledge, maturity, and temperament to continue to be a progressive champion on the County Council, proudly representing all the residents of Prince George's.

I am committed to serve the entire term.

What do you see as two important issues an at-large council member, specifically, should plan to address?

Affordability for struggling families is one of my top priorities, because no one should be priced out of Prince George's. From young families getting started to seniors on fixed incomes, I'm committed to making sure Prince George's remains a place where everyone can afford to stay and thrive. Housing, schools, public safety and economic development are all connected, and their impact on families will always be at the center of my decisions.

Every member of the disability community deserves access to the services they need without leaving the county. I will work to expand needed support. I'm proud to

Setbacks and Some Cheers: ERHS Reacts to Canvas Outage

by Sadie Young and Journalism I and II students

In a massive breach affecting more than 30 million students, the infamous cyberterrorist collective ShinyHunters seized control of the Canvas instructional platform on May 7, allegedly compromising the personal data of 275 million individuals across 9,000 schools. Canvas is the learning management system used by Prince George's County Public Schools (PGCPS), including Eleanor Roosevelt High School (ERHS).

As a result of the breach, ERHS reported significant, though temporary, interruptions to coursework and testing. By exploiting a vulnerability in parent company Instructure's Free-For-Teacher accounts, the U.S.- and U.K.-based hacking group forced major institutions, including Penn State and the University of Illinois, to cancel exams and deadlines. This marks the second time in months that the group has caused widespread academic shock across American higher education (ShinyHunters also claimed responsibility for a May 1 breach of Canvas.)

Impact on Students

On the evening of May 7, students across PGCPS opened Canvas to a daunting message from hacking group ShinyHunters and blocked access. It was a bit of a setback for most. Student Favor Ijomor claims he was attempting an "academic comeback," at the time and he hoped it would be fixed soon because he had "work to do." It was also a setback for students like Stanley Eissie, a senior, because "[she] couldn't study for [her] test" due to resources being on Canvas. In addition, an anonymous junior states that he "couldn't turn in [my] 101-point chem lab that was already a day late," and still has yet to turn it in.

Many students found it strange to say the least. One student commented, "It was surprising and unexpected. I'm really curious about how they solved the issue. Did they pay? Or just got the hackers away?" However, it seems there was an even split between overjoyed and relieved students, worried students and students who didn't see it as a big deal. Freshman Gabrielle Cherry said that she saw the news of the hack on TikTok and exclaimed, "No homework!" Student Donnie Hepler said that he "needed this to happen; because of this, [his] test got pushed back," alongside junior Subusola D. claiming she was "relieved" to get a break from work, building upon a trend of positive feedback.

Message displayed when students tried to access Canvas last week

Impact on Teachers

The nationwide hack on Canvas not only affected students, but teachers as well. "It was a major inconvenience," Dr. Laurent Rigal, physics and research practicum (RP) teacher at ERHS said. "Students weren't able to access review material so I had to push the [physics] test to Monday." Additionally, senior grades were due on Friday and he wasn't able to grade RP papers. Allison Beers, an English teacher, said, "It was an inconvenience, but we will manage."

Monique Connealy, an art teacher at ERHS, shares a similar sentiment, saying that this incident "came at a pretty bad time because [they are] trying to put senior grades in." She expressed her concerns for improving technology as, "Security gets better and better, but there's always somebody that's going to break through and you just have to keep getting better at defending it." Jeffrey Holmes, another art teacher at ERHS, said, "I think Canvas can somehow implement [two-factor authentication]. It's way too easy to get in Canvas. Years prior, there's been situations where people in the building or outside can have access to [things] like grades and Canvas."

While ERHS was one of the thousands of schools affected in its ability to perform testing and classwork, sensitive information such as passwords and student birth dates were not compromised, as PGCPS does not save such information on the Canvas website. Thankfully, all the students of PGCPS had their virtual programs restored on the early morning of May 8. Even as access has been restored, questions still remain about the likelihood of such a hack being repeated, or the chances of ShinyHunters simply revealing the stolen information anyway.

ERHS MESA Students Are State Engineering Challenge Champions

Eleanor Roosevelt High School Math, Engineering Science Achievement (MESA) students Samson Asmelash, Eric Godsey, Rahel Kabba and Nicolas Rivero have won first place in the state for the National Engineering Design Competition at Johns Hopkins Applied Physics Laboratory (APL). They will now go on to the national competition on June 22.

Maryland MESA is an after-school program for students in grades 3 through 12 designed to spark their interest in STEM education and STEM careers.

Hosted by APL since 1976, when just two schools in Baltimore participated, the MESA program now reaches students in eight Maryland school districts. Through project-based team competitions, students experience engineering, computer programming, physics and many more STEM disciplines while developing strong communication and collaboration skills. MESA students are able to see the real-world applications of what they are learning in school, develop the STEM skills they will need in the future and begin to see themselves in STEM careers.

Maryland MESA is administered by APL and joins 10 other MESA USA programs in serving over 49,000 students annually.

Jeana Jacobs

Jeana Jacobs is an attorney and Executive Director & Chief Executive Officer of the National School Boards Association. She served on the Prince George's County Board of Education from 2006 to 2016. Jacobs worked for the Prince George's County Department of Corrections for 23 years, retiring as a Lieutenant Colonel in 2012. She earned her bachelor's degree in behavioral and social sciences from the University of Maryland and a J.D. from the University of the District of Columbia.

Why are you running for this particular position and, if elected, would you commit to serving out the entirety of your term as at-large councilmember?

I bring extensive experience, independent leadership skills, and passion that residents deserve from their elected officials. My 30+ year background in law, public safety and education has prepared me to bring people together, solve problems and advocate for working families. I have broad knowledge overseeing and managing large budgets. In my role as CEO of a national nonprofit organization, I am responsible for the development and execution of a $10 million budget. In my previous role as Chair of the Board of Education, in one of the nation's largest school districts, I led the approval of the then-$1.8 billion Prince George's County district budget.

As a parent and working mom, I understand the challenges residents face, such as public safety concerns, rising food and housing costs and the need for stronger economic opportunities.

I commit to serving a full term and focusing on results for residents and businesses.

What do you see as two important issues an at-large council member, specifically, should plan to address?

As an at-large councilmember, I have the opportunity to serve residents across the county and ensure each community has access to opportunities that help residents thrive. The uniqueness of individual community issues, regardless of zip code, must be considered assets rather than problems to solve.

Improving quality of life for residents is paramount. Families deserve safe neighborhoods, affordable housing and reliable county services.

Another issue is expansion of economic opportunities. We need smart development that grows the tax base and reduces financial burden on homeowners. That means attracting businesses that create strong local jobs while protecting our environment.

The county is at an inflection point with tough economic decisions ahead. To tackle these issues, we need effective leadership. That means no-nonsense approaches to ensuring excellence and accountability in every decision.

I have proven success and broad vision to address these issues.

I respectfully ask for your vote.

Keith Washington

Keith Washington served for 20 years in the U.S. Army and for 17 years as a Prince George's County Police Officer and Deputy Director for Homeland Security for Prince George's County. In 2008 Washington was convicted of involuntary manslaughter, first-degree assault, use of a handgun in the commission of a felony, for shooting two delivery men in his home in Accokeek in 2007, killing one and injuring the other. Washington served over 13 years in prison but maintains his innocence. In 2022 he ran for election to the U.S. House to represent Maryland's 5th Congressional District but lost to Steny Hoyer. He holds a bachelor's degree from Northwestern State University.

Why are you running for this particular position and, if elected, would you commit to serving out the entirety of your term as at-large councilmember?

I'm running for at-large council member because too many residents - especially seniors and longtime homeowners - feel overlooked by decisions that shape their daily lives. After years of paying into this county, they deserve leadership that listens, respects their contributions, and protects their future.

We've seen a pattern of insider decision-making and missed opportunities to put people first. I'm running to bring independence, transparency and accountability back to county government. My work has always been about standing up to broken systems - and I'll bring that same determination to this role.

Yes, I will serve my full term. This is not about political ambition - it's about keeping a promise to the people of Prince George's County and seeing that promise through.

First, accountability in development. Growth should strengthen communities - not strain them. Too often, decisions have been made without fully considering infrastructure, traffic or the impact on longtime residents. We need leadership that demands transparency and ensures development works for the people who already call this county home.

Second, affordability and stability. Seniors on fixed incomes and working families alike are feeling the pressure of rising costs. We must expand affordable housing, protect homeowners and invest in services that allow people to age with dignity and stay in the communities they helped build.

At-large councilmembers must take a countywide view - and have the courage to stand up for those whose voices are too often ignored.

Noah Emmanuel Waters

Noah Emmanuel Waters is an Emergency Communications Officer at Prince George's Community College. He is former mayor of the town of Eagle Harbor, Md., and also previously worked as a financial service provider. Waters holds a Ph.D. in Business Administration from Northcentral University, a private, for-profit university that has since become National University. He also holds a Master of Science in Criminal Justice from the University of Maryland Eastern Shore.

Why are you running for this particular position and, if elected, would you commit to serving out the entirety of your term as at-large councilmember?

Under my administration as Mayor of Eagle Harbor, the town received the largest financial benefits of its nearly one hundred-year history and was placed on the National Register of Historic Places, by leading and inspiring the talents of others.

I am a publicly financed candidate, meaning I cannot be controlled by developers. Also, this allows me to honor the will of the people. As mayor, I testified and helped the successful passage of Maryland's coal ash bill (SB-425) and was one of five who testified to the State of Maryland to adopt Prince George's County's heritage designation (CR-038-2025).

I will work with Prince Georgians, the county council, and investors to leverage Prince George's County's heritage designation, along with southern

Reel and Meal: An Inside Look At Starbucks Union Struggle

by Donna Hoffmeister

Image from the movie Partners

The film Partners: How Starbucks Baristas Started a Labor Revolution is the Reel and Meal selection for Monday, May 18 at 6:30 p.m. at the New Deal Café. It depicts how Starbucks workers founded their own union, Starbucks Workers United (SBWU), in 2021 in Buffalo, N.Y., while overcoming extensive union-busting. Jaz Brisack, an inside organizer or “salt,” took the job to strengthen union efforts. Retaliation by Starbucks against union organizers in Buffalo started when they sent 100 managers from across the country to act as corporate spies. In all, Starbucks was convicted of breaking federal labor law over 100 times in Buffalo, including firing or relocating union members, promising better pay and benefits only to non-union stores and overstaffing stores before union elections to influence the outcome.

As a result of the Buffalo Starbucks union campaign, individual Starbucks locations are able to hold elections. Because of this

There will be a free puppet show on Saturday, May 16 at 3 p.m. at the Old Parish House, 4711 Knox Road, College Park. Greenbelter Ingrid Hass and her fellow singer and puppeteer, Maggie Polglaze, will present Jack and the Beanstalk.

Join young Jack as he climbs an enormous beanstalk to a castle in the sky. Discover a hen that lays golden eggs, a gilded harp that sings by itself and a giant with a hearty appetite. Don't miss this classic English folktale, brought to life with beautifully hand-crafted puppets and sets, along with heart-warming music.

The performance is suitable for all ages and will last about 40 minutes. Sponsored by College Park Arts Exchange, cpae.org.

The program will also be given on Sunday, May 17 at 1 p.m. at The Christian Community, 4221 Metzert Road, College Park. Bring a lawn chair or blanket. This show will be outside if weather permits.

“one-store-at-a-time” approach, workers at other small stores began organizing their own campaigns to reach the majority needed to petition the National Labor Relations Board (NLRB). This meant there was no need for the support of an entire regional or national workforce. Also, organizers shared real-time information about filing with the NLRB and responding to specific union-busting tactics on social media, such as TikTok, Twitter and Instagram. As of April 2026, there were 691 unionized Starbucks stores in the United States, primarily represented by Starbucks Workers United and covering approximately 14,980 workers.

The film's start time of 6:30 p.m. is earlier than usual. The Labor Heritage Foundation of Washington, D.C. sponsors the film as part of its annual May DC Labor FilmFest. A panel of local Starbucks union organizers will share their experiences following the film.

A Treasure Chest of Gardens On Greenbelt Garden Tour

by Erica Johns

The Greenbelt Garden Tour on Saturday, June 6 offers the opportunity to visit 12 gardens, some rarely seen, and talk with their gardeners. Whether you already love gardening, are curious to try it or are intimidated by getting started, you will find something to enjoy and learn from the tour's gardens and gardeners.

Visit the Gardens

A treasure chest of a garden can be found hidden behind a fence in Greenbelt East, begun 32 years ago and today containing vegetables and flowers in multiple “rooms.” The gardener is delighted with how well her winter sowing did this year.

A Hamilton Place community garden plot gardener began gardening just three years ago and now grows food year-round. She will share how she “learned from zero” and how she protects her produce from wildlife.

A Gardenway community gardener grows leafy greens, tomatoes, peppers, squash, okra, watermelon, cucumbers, eggplants and sweet potatoes in raised beds and new vertical growing space. She values learning from other community gardeners.

Another Gardenway gardener says his garden is a playground where he experiments to learn what works. He built a pond to manage flooding, which created a micro ecosystem now inhabited by leopard frogs.

A GHI home gardener finds gardening to be a spiritual journey, as well as scientific, physical, practical and emotional. Her garden contains food, flowers and trees. Can you spot the Big Bang in her garden? She and her neighboring gardener are adjusting to new sunlight patterns after a large tree came down in 2025.

A nearby GHI gardener sees home gardens as an art form. In her garden you will find “a plant tapestry that is interesting to look at and with interesting plants that also appear in the natural world.”

Fundraiser

The Greenbelt Rotary Club is hosting the tour as a fundraiser for its community service activities. Those activities include supporting the Greenbelt Outstanding Citizen Award and Greenbelt Pumpkin Festival; operating its Driver Education Program; supporting Springhill Lake and Greenbelt Elementary School students and families, as well as youth leadership growth opportunities; and funding prizes for the Greenbelt Black History and Culture Committee's Black History Month essay contest at Greenbelt Middle School. Read about those activities and purchase tickets at <https://tinyurl.com/ucyf2n7a>. Advance price tickets are on sale until 5 p.m. Friday, June 5.

Prince George's County's designation as part of the Southern Maryland National Heritage Area, to bring immediate jobs and revenue to Prince George's County.

What do you see as two important issues an at-large council member, specifically, should plan to address?

As a former mayor looking through the lens of an experienced elected official, two important issues facing an at-large councilmember are jobs and revenue for Prince George's County. All the wish list items such as enhanced funding for schools, public safety, medical care, child and adult services and road maintenance, etc., require funding sources such as jobs and robust sources of revenue.

The challenge is to have talented and skilled at-large councilmembers who will move away from the practice of raising property taxes to fund county services and balancing the budget.

The push for data centers

by the incumbents running for county council at-large, to me, exemplifies the lack of ingenuity and leadership, considering the negative environmental, health and economic impacts associated with large data centers. At-large members need to bring alternatives to creating jobs and revenue.

Sydney Harrison

Sydney Harrison has served as county councilmember for District 9 for eight years. He is prevented from running again for that seat in this election by term limits. Harrison was previously elected to serve as the Clerk of the Circuit Court and as District 27 at-large representative for the Democratic Central Committee. He was also a real estate professional, small business owner and plumber.

Harrison did not respond to email or voicemail from the News Review.

Jennifer Rios

Jennifer Rios served in the U.S. Army for 13 years, earning the rank of Staff Sergeant. Rios reports she owns three small businesses. She currently serves on Governor Wes Moore's Commission on Hispanic Affairs Committee and is president and founder of the Hispanic Chamber of Commerce Prince George's County. Rios also serves on the Latino Advisory Board for County Executive Angela D. Alsobrooks. She was crowned Ms. International World Petite/Mexico 2024, a specialized title within the Ms. World International Pageant system.

Rios holds a doctorate in Business Administration from Capella University, a private, for-profit online university. She also holds a Master of Business Administration in Digital Entrepreneurship from Strayer University, an online, for-profit institution.

Rios did not respond to our emails and has no phone number or contact form available on her website nor phone number in the county candidate listings. In addition to email, we attempted to reach her by Facebook message.

Farmers Market Seeks Board Members, Market Volunteers

by Rosie Weaver

"If you are fond of gourds, join the Farmers Market board." Astute readers may recall seeing a Valentine's message with this sentiment in the February 12, 2026, issue of the Greenbelt News Review. The Greenbelt Farmers Market (GFM) is certainly well loved, and the local bounty available there is always worthy of poetry. But while it may seem like this abundance appears spontaneously each week in the parking lot behind the Municipal Building, many individual efforts are required to sustain it. Vendors, staff, volunteers and board collaborate to make it happen.

The Farmers Market board is currently seeking additional people to help cultivate future seasons of this community asset. Volunteers are key to the market operation. Set-up and break-down of the information booth are completed by dedicated teams of volunteers. They answer questions and help shoppers use the matching programs for SNAP and WIC. Spanish-speaking volunteers are always especially needed. Stop by the information booth for more information on volunteering.

Board members oversee the finances, communications and much more. The ideal board member will be able to commit to monthly meetings and take a turn as assistant market manager one week out of every six. The assistant market manager answers emails and is available to fill in for volunteers or staff at the market on Sunday if needed. Basic computer skills are required, along with an enthusiasm for vegetables.

GFM began in 2008 with a board of five members: Kim Kash, Cary Coppock, Joe Gareri, Kim Rush Lynch and Lynne Tucker Chandler. Their tireless work to clear mountains of paperwork led to the establishment of the weekly market. Today, the market serves 1,700 patrons each week, supporting 30 vendors. Through grants and state and local programs, the market is able to provide matching programs to people in need, helping to make fresh food accessible to all.

Founding member Kash says, "Doing all the administrative legwork at the beginning was not nearly as fun as being at the market on Sunday mornings in those first couple of years, enjoying the camaraderie and watching a new Greenbelt institution take root. The volunteer work needed now is easy and fun, and the more people who pitch in, the lighter the load."

at-large seats from district seats and both ran for a different, higher position, within weeks of winning them.

Last month, District 1 Councilmember Tom Dernoga introduced a bill to eliminate the seats. Dernoga and opponents of the at-large seats argue they benefit well-funded candidates who use them as stepping stones to higher office and/or to circumvent term limits.

History of At-Large County Councilmembers

2018

Two at-large county council seats were created following a ballot measure in 2016.

2018 - 2024: Mel Franklin

Franklin served six years and resigned ahead of felony charges during his second term. Prior to that he served two terms as councilmember for District 5.

2018 - 2025:

Calvin S. Hawkins II

Hawkins served for seven years as at-large councilmember. He resigned in December 2025 to take a job in the Office of the County Executive as an assistant deputy chief administrative officer for economic development. He is the only at-large councilmember to not move to the seat from another position on council as a district representative.

2024 - Current: Jolene Ivey

Ivey was serving her second term for District 5 when Franklin stepped down from one of the at-large seats ahead of charges of embezzlement, felony theft scheme and perjury. Ivey won the at-large seat in a special election on November 5, 2024. In early December she was sworn in and, around the same time, announced she was running for County Executive. Though she was a front-runner in the County Executive race, she unexpectedly withdrew her candidacy shortly before the election, citing health reasons, and has subsequently been serving the rest of the term in her new at-large position. She is seeking re-election to the at-large seat this November.

December 2025 - Current:

Wala Blegay

Blegay was elected to Prince George's County Council in November 2022 to represent District 6. In December 2025, Hawkins resigned from his at-large county council seat in order to take the position of Assistant Deputy Chief Administrative Officer for Economic Development in the office of County Executive. Following a brief nomination period Blegay was appointed by her fellow councilmembers to the at-large seat on December 29, 2025, one week after Hawkins' resignation. Just over a month later, on February 4, Blegay announced she was running for Congress to represent Maryland's 5th District. She will serve less than a year as an at-large member.

There are eight candidates for the two at-large Prince George's County Council seats this year (see article on page 1). All are Democrats. If the at-large seats were to be eliminated, that would take effect after those who win this year have served the four-year term they are elected to.

in the community. "I've been here since I was like 5 or 6," he said. "I kind of have deep roots in the community."

Roberson originally wanted to work for the National Security Agency. The death of his high school friend Adrian Morris, a former Prince George's County Police Officer, broadened his horizon of career choices. "It opened up a new career path. And then luckily, I got the call to work here, and I've been here ever since."

That familiarity shapes how he approaches policing. Whether attending school events, walking through neighborhoods or interacting with residents, Roberson often encounters people he has known for years. "I still run into people ... people I went to Roosevelt with," he said. "You know, run into old teachers when I do events at Roosevelt." Those relationships, he said, are central to building trust and maintaining public safety.

The department's emphasis on training has also contributed to the unit's success. Officers are regularly sent to specialized courses, including Intellectual and Developmental Disabilities (IDD) training and instruction in digital investigations and crisis response, allowing them to adapt to evolving crime trends. "We see a need for something, and then we send somebody out to train for that," Roberson said.

Outside of work, Roberson remains closely tied to the city. He spends his free time lifting weights, biking and walking through Greenbelt's parks. "I like the foliage and the trees," he said. "I like it, I like this area."

The Unit Citation recognizes a period of intense investigative work, but for Roberson, it also reflects something more enduring, a commitment to protecting the place that shaped him. "You talk about wanting to make a change ... I'm legitimately doing that," he said.

In the future, Roberson plans to retire from the Greenbelt Police Department and stay with his community. "I would love to retire here," he said. "I have deep roots here. I like the great energy we have, the diversity that's changed, and this place has become incredibly diverse since I've been here."

Little League in Greenbelt Is 75 and Going Strong

by Ben Friedman

The Greenbelt Cubs (Juniors) host the Laurel Outlaws at Braden 1 under the lights in the newly renovated Braden Baseball Complex.

This spring, Greenbelt Little League celebrates its 75th year of bringing baseball to the youth of Greenbelt and Prince George's County, providing a fun and competitive pastime for children of all ages.

However, in 2018 that legacy nearly fell apart. To turn things around, the board voted to join Little League International for the Spring 2019 season. This move proved to be a boon for the League, as it provided much needed structure, a broader base of competition and access to a deeper community for youth baseball.

This year marks a new milestone for the league as the City of Greenbelt has invested more than $1 million in upgrades to the Braden Baseball Complex.

These include LED lights, grading and improved turfgrass, and new fencing and dugouts, with more upgrades to be completed in the coming years.

Greenbelt Little League - geographically bounded by Beltsville to the north, Glenn Dale to the east, Bladensburg and the Washington, D.C. line to the south and Langley Park to the west - plays against teams in the district that includes Laurel, Arbutus, South Baltimore and Annapolis. The organization is entirely volunteer run, with board members from Greenbelt, University Park, Cheverly, Hyattsville and Adelphi and coaches and families from throughout the local area. For more information about Greenbelt Little League, visit the website at gylittleleague.org.

all of Prince George's County. Notably he has done so at two different weights, last year at 106 pounds and this season at 113 pounds. This would also mark Hayes' third straight year in the finals after placing second his freshman year.

The final road for Foreman had a much more dramatic atmosphere surrounding it. State was a do-or-die environment, "I just had to remind myself this was my last year and how hard I've worked," recalled Foreman. Despite the pressure, he was able to secure his finals spot against Frederick Douglass High School's Victor Guerra. A fittingly dramatic finish would take Guerra into overtime and Foreman would come out victorious with a last-minute takedown. "It was honestly just a feeling of relief" were the words Foreman chose to describe the initial flood of emotions, adding that "it showed me that if I do the work, I can do really special things."

The two Raiders hope to continue wrestling, with Hayes planning to add another medal his senior year and Foreman hoping to transition into Brazilian jiu-jitsu going into college.

Osmel Sosa Chavez is an ERHS student and staff writer for the Raider Review, where this article first appeared. He is also a member of the wrestling team.
